COOLIDGE SUPPORTS MOVE FOR REDUCTION OF INCOME TAX NOW

But Opposition in Congress Delays Introduction of the Joint Resolution.

LONGWORTH TO PUSH PLAN

Some Resist It in Fear of a Possible Veto of the Bill as It Stands.

REVENUE BILL DELAYED

Senate Finance Committee Takes More Time to Study Income Rates and Other Sections.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—President Coolidge is in favor of the recommendation of the Treasury that Congress pass a joint resolution as soon as possible authorizing a 25 per cent. reduction on taxes payable this year for 1923 personal incomes, in order that taxpayers may take advantage of this before the first instalment of the income tax comes due March 15.

Although the President cannot be said to be agitating or opposing such a plan, he feels it would be very desirable to pass the resolution before that date in favor of taxpayers, it was learned at the White House this afternoon. Enactment of this legislation would result in easing up a large amount of credits that would otherwise have to be transferred, after the tax reduction bill went into effect, the executive believes.

The knowledge that the Administration supports the resolution will undoubtedly do much to counteract the growing opposition that developed today in both branches of Congress, and especially in the House. Administration members of the Ways and Means Committee will now rally behind the resolution and do all they can to force it out of the committee if there are indications of delay on the part of other committeemen.

There was no mention whatever of the proposal at the meeting of the House committee this morning, the only subject discussed being the bonus. Later Chairman Green declared he felt discouraged after Republican House leaders had given him no hope that a special rule would be granted precedence.

"I have no assurance that a rule will be granted authorizing a suspension of the House rules in order to pass the bill," the Chairman said.

"I have always said that I would not introduce the resolution unless I could be assured of this machinery. I cannot say I am hopeful."

Modifying this view was a later statement by Representative Longworth, who when informed of the White House attitude, declared that notwithstanding the press of legislation he felt there would be no difficulty in making way for the resolution.

Same Opposition in Both Parties.

Antagonism to the resolution comes chiefly from the Democrats and Radicals, who are now outspoken in their belief that it is put forward only to relieve President Coolidge from embarrassment if he should decide to veto the tax bill, in which the 25 per cent. cut now remains. Representative Oldfield of Arkansas, the Democratic whip, and Representative Frear of Wisconsin, the Radical tax leader, both took this position today.

There is resistance, too, on the part of certain Middle West and Far Western Republicans who fear a possible veto, and with it the loss of amendments such as the gift and inheritance taxes, upon which they are pledged to their constituents.

Two other arguments are now being made against the resolution. First, that Secretary Mellon's position is utterly inconsistent, inasmuch as he contends the Treasury has no money to pay a soldier bonus, yet he proposes to remit $223,000,000 to taxpayers; second, that the Treasury contention that complex machinery for refunds would be avoided by passage of the resolution will not hold, for the reason that thousands of persons have already paid their taxes, part of which will have to be returned. In reply to the last statement, the Treasury asserts that other thousands have not yet paid their taxes, as evidenced by the fact that income revenues are unusually low so close to March 15.

The status of the resolution was in doubt tonight for no move had been made to introduce it, and what Chairman Green would do about it remained uncertain. He said he considered the intimation of a veto absurd. Mr. Green is the author of the plan. Upon his motion it was included in the bill, where it may as well stay as not, he added this afternoon. Some members doubted his assertion that he did not anticipate a veto, in which event his gift tax amendment would be lost.

"Die-Hards" to Support Resolution.

If the Administration demands the resolution, "die-hard" Republicans on the Ways and Means Committee, including Representatives Mills, Treadway, Tilson and Bacharach, will fight for it. Their attitude is demonstrated by a statement Mr. Tilson made explaining his stand in voting against the tax bill on the final passage, in which he said:

"The provision for the refund of 25 per cent. of the income tax payable this year should be taken out of the present bill and sent through as a separate bill. This would give immediate tax reduction, not scientific by any means, but doing apparent justice, and this could be continued next year."

Democrats laughed, today, when they recalled the words "but doing apparent justice," seizing upon them as another sign that the Administration intended to veto any bill with income schedules higher than the Mellon plan, and at the same time reap credit in votes for tax reduction in an emergency.

Little progress was made by the Senate Finance Committee in considering the Longworth compromise bill, the one step being to change the 5 per cent. interest rate on extended payments, recommended by Secretary Mellon, back to the 6 per cent. in the existing law. Only administrative sections were taken up, the committee passing over the income rates for the time being, and also deferring consideration of the section allowing certain Congressional committees, and also State officials, access to income tax returns.

Poincare Challenges Deputy to a Duel, But Seconds Decide Against a Meeting

PARIS, March 7. (Associated Press)—Premier Poincaré today challenged Deputy de Launay to a duel because of remarks made by the Deputy in the Chamber of Deputies. The seconds of the two men met later and decided that the remarks did not reflect on the honor of the Premier and that, therefore, a duel was not justified. The belief was expressed by the seconds that the principals would accept their conclusions.

During the debate the Premier understood M. de Launay to shout up at him, "You take up as your own such a felony!" when the Premier referred to a story told in the Chamber during last Friday's heated session by Paul de Cassagnac regarding M. de Launay aiding Cassagnac in inducing Prince Napoleon to help Georges Mandel to be elected to the Chamber of Deputies. Mandel was M. Clemenceau's chief clerk when Clemenceau was Premier.

M. Poincaré immediately assigned Minister of War Maginot and Minister of the Colonies Sarraut as seconds to wait upon Deputies Taittinger and Bouton, who represented M. de Launay, and arrange for a meeting on the field of honor.

The four seconds met immediately after the Chamber adjourned and examined the stenographic record, which quoted M. de Launay as having said: "You are wrong to take such notice of a felony; the joke has lasted long enough!"

The seconds regarded the stenographer's notes as giving the authentic version of the remarks of the Deputy. They agreed that they did not constitute an insult, and that, therefore, a duel was not justified. They then made a report to M. Poincaré and M. de Launay on their decision.

FRANC DROPS AGAIN, BUT BOURSE IS CALM

While Blaming "Foreign Offensive," Government Pins Faith to Proposed Tax Laws.

SENATE BLAMED FOR DELAY

Despite Minister's Appeal for Quick Action, It Adjourns Till Thursday of Next Week.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

PARIS, March 7.—The franc reached a new low mark today, the closing price on the Bourse being 26.25 for the dollar and 113.05 for the pound. At 4 o'clock the dollar was quoted at 26.40, but the franc showed improvement around 6 o'clock, the unofficial quotation being 26.17 for the dollar.

Paris continues to blame speculation directed from Amsterdam and of German origin for the new fall, and there are many reports of the possibility of a a bull movement against this bear market, although no details are forthcoming as to who would back such a movement, which would call for large funds.

Whatever may be the cause of the new fall in French money—and the cause is probably much more complex than the popular explanation—yesterday's publication of the Bank of France's figures of a rise in circulation of nearly a billion francs in one week had much to do with today's decline. The papers publish explanations from the Bank of France, saying that the increase in circulation was caused largely by end-of-the-month needs, but it is currently admitted that rise in the cost of living caused by the decline of the franc also was reason for the increase in circulation, and, as some commentators remark, the end of another month is coming. However, from all sides one gets assurances that next week's statement will not show a further approach to the figure of 41,000,000,000, which represents the legal limit of note circulation under the present laws.

The possibility of French holders of short-term Treasury notes getting scared and asking for payment in cash as the notes fall due constitutes the greatest danger in the situation, and it is for this reason that Premier Poincaré has put the fate of the Government at stake in his demand that the Senate quickly pass the new tax bills which will give the Government additional revenue to meet such a situation if it should arise. The general belief is that the Senate will approve the laws by a very small majority.

Lasteyrie Offers Explanation.

M. Lasteyrie, the Finance Minister, appeared today before the Senate Finance Committee and in response to questions recalled that the 1920 circulation of the Bank of France had risen almost as high as that of this month. He said the increase was due largely to end-of-the-month commercial needs and predicted that much of the increase would be reabsorbed by the bank in the weeks to come. He promised that the new tax measures, if passed, would break the attack on the franc and, referring to the betterment of the franc situation caused by the introduction of these bills, said that if the Senate had not delayed action on them the latest drop would not have taken place.

Practically all the press dwells on what the French regard as the injustice of the decline of the value of their money, which they consider unjustified by the economic situation of the country, and the fact that the Government's fiscal difficulties come from Germany's failure to pay reparations, since they are chargeable on the advances Paris has made for reconstruction, has a reaction on the political situation. It increases the feeling against Germany, and it is likely that difficulties of the French will add to the German unwillingness to make concessions on reparations.

All in all, while there is unquestionably considerable selling of francs by the French, the latest decline has failed to bring about anything like a panic, and the French seem more calm than on the occasion of the drop some three weeks ago.

It is rumored tonight that the Government may forbid all exportations of foodstuffs from France. These have increased tremendously in the past month because of the low value of the franc.

Senate Slights Premier's Wishes.

Either purposely or through forgetfulness, the Senate this afternoon slighted the Premier and the Government in a rather marked manner. Yesterday M. Poincaré, in his efforts to hurry along the discussion of the financial bill, threatened the Finance Commission with his resignation unless the debate on that bill was begun in the Senate on Tuesday. It was a matter of such urgency, he said, that there was not a day or an hour to be lost.

But this afternoon the Senate, in a careless mood, fixed its next meeting

CHURCH ASKED TO AID A PLOT ON THE FRANC

Letter to Lutherans Urges Them to "Sell Short and Bring France to Her Knees."

SENT OUT FROM THIS CITY

Its Author, Clergyman's Son, Says Germany Is Being Crushed by Nation of Another Faith.

An attempt to enlist the clergymen of the Lutheran Church and members of their congregations in a movement to "sell short" the French franc for the avowed purpose of ruining French credit and "bringing France to her knees" was disclosed yesterday in letters sent out by Morgan, Harwood & Co., Inc., of 522 Fifth Avenue, signed by Erwin E. Popcke. Mr. Popcke said he was the son of the Rev. William Popcke, a Lutheran clergyman, but would add nothing to the letter, which he admitted sending.

The letter asserted that the Treaty of Versailles was designed to strip Germany of everything she owned and that the French occupation of the Ruhr and the French demands for reparations were intended to cut Germany's arteries and bleed her to death.

"Armed conflict is impending if the European situation is not cleared up," the letter continued. "France aspires to the supremacy of Europe. Her army is the largest in the world. Poincaré intends to hold the Ruhr. This blind policy will have a terrific depression upon economic conditions not only of Europe but of the entire world.

"Thousands of our brethren in the faith have lost all hope; thousands have left the fold of the Church. If we are genuine lovers of peace, if we are proud of our Lutheran faith, we must help to rebuild the old faith in the Fatherland. Germany is being crushed by a nation of another faith. Shall Lutheranism be crushed in the land where it was born? We have an effective weapon to prevent this.

"Money is the life blood of every nation. When a nation's money depreciates in value, when its credit is ruined, it is helpless. Premier Poincaré realizes that the French franc is sinking day by day in value, and that the financial condition of France is beyond salvation. If French credit is entirely ruined, France will be brought to her knees. This will mean the evacuation of the Ruhr and the final stabilization of Germany and all Europe. The franc must be crushed, for with its passing away, will pass away the French spirit of hatred, vengeance and militarism. We have this economic weapon to crush French arrogance—to sell the franc short, cause its depreciation and final annihilation. With the saving of Germany and the advent of a real peace is linked the future of Lutheranism in Europe, the salvation of morality, truth and common decency among men.

"If you desire information in which way you and your congregation can actually assist in bringing France now blinded by hatred to her knees and thereby finally secure a real and lasting peace and prosperity for Germany and the entire world, please write us at once and we shall be glad to give you all further details."

Printed matter accompanying the letter indicated that Morgan, Harwood & Co. would accept a 25 per cent. margin. It was stated that the firm would not act as brokers and that all transactions were subject to private contract. An order slip was enclosed.

Mr. Popcke said he did not know just what method the company followed in selling francs short as he did not have anything to do with that end of the business. He said he saw no reason why any one should not try to profit by the franc's decline, which received extensive mention in practically all the American newspapers.

The Corporation Dictionary gives P. J. Fuller as Vice President and Franklin A. Harwood as Treasurer of Morgan, Harwood & Co., which is a Delaware corporation.

RADIO BROADCASTS TALKS 7,000 MILES WITHOUT WIRE'S AID

Technology Dinner Program Made Available to 50,000,000 Listeners.

HAILED AS GREATEST FEAT

Speeches and Music Heard From the Pacific Coast to British Isles.

SENT DIRECT INTO THE AIR

American and British Companies Cooperate in Use of Recently Perfected Invention.

What was hailed as the greatest achievement in relaying radio broadcasting was staged last night at the dinner of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, held in the Waldorf-Astoria, when six stations, spanning 7,000 miles, broadcast simultaneously speeches and a musical program.

The test brought into use an invention perfected by Frank Conrad, Assistant Chief Engineer of the Westinghouse Company at Pittsburgh, which eliminated the use of telephone wires for the transmission of the music and words from one broadcasting station to another and put the entire program entirely into the air. According to the radio officials in charge of the experiment, the broadcasting reached a radio population of 50,000,000 persons.

London and Manchester at 12:15 o'clock reported hearing the program, and fifteen minutes later Oakland, Cal., across the bay from San Francisco, wired that the broadcasting had been successful. Radiograms from Manchester and London were read at the dinner an hour and threee minutes after the first of the program was started. The first American station heard was KDKA, East Pittsburgh. The English messages were:

"Greetings to General Harbord and alumni of Massachusetts Institute of Technology from research staff of Metropolitan-Vickers Electric Company from Albert Palmer Sheldon, traveling fellow Harvard Engineering School. Have just received opening speech and violin solo through KDKA at Manchester, England, using two-valve receiver. Congratulations on the success of your experiment. By courtesy of Marconi company we hope you will receive this telegram in time for it to be read out at your banquet. FLEMING,

"Metropolitan-Vickers, Manchester, England."

"To General Harbord, New York City:

"Have just received report of your speeches, received through KDKA, London. FLEMING.

"Metro-Vickers, Manchester, England."

Melburne to Constantinople

In speaking of the test, Major-General James G. Harbord, President of the Radio Corporation of America, said:

"It is an epoch in which you have participated. The stations participating have been heard from Melbourne to Constantinople. It used to be a feat to traverse the globe in 90 days, but what you have participated in tonight has made the distances a matter of seconds."

The value of radio in promoting intersectional understanding was stressed by Gerard Swope, President of the General Electric Company.

"This is an outstanding achievement," he said, "and it seems to me that it has great significance in our national life, because it is going to draw the isolated communities together in a more cohesive group."

A picture of what the test was expected to accomplish in distances was offered by Calvert Townley of the Westinghouse Company.

"As I am speaking here tonight," he said, "it is being heard in Frisco, just after dinner time. They are sitting up late in London for it and they are getting ready for breakfast in Constantinople."

Toward the close of the test the telegraph office in the hotel was swamped with reports from American points. Three operators were on duty and a stream of messenger boys was passing from lobby to ballroom when the experiment was suspended.

Working in on the task of distributing the program were stations located in

Copyright, 1924, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 7.—A liquor-smuggling voyage formed the basis of a motion made today in Chancery Court. The Spike Trading Company made, in 1922, a contract with James Campbell, master mariner, to take a cargo of whisky in a sailing vessel, the Mary Elizabeth, from Glasgow to the island of St. Pierre and sell it there. The company is now suing to compel him to account for the proceeds of the sale.

Campbell did not himself sail in the Mary Elizabeth, but met her on her arrival at St. Pierre in September, 1922, and took charge of the sale of the cargo there. Some of the whisky, it was also stated, was discharged into a passenger ship, which met the Mary Elizabeth on the high seas.

The captain of the Mary Elizabeth handed over to Campbell $8,930, part of the proceeds of the sale he had made. Campbell then went to New York, and thence cabled to the Spike Company £9,987 in dollars, but had not rendered full accounting.

Counsel for Campbell contended that the acts done on the voyage were a conspiracy and joint adventure on the part of the parties to original agreement to attempt to make a profit by breaking the American prohibition laws.

Moreover, Campbell testified that he himself when in New York and other places in the United States had no passport and was always evading the officers of law and in imminent danger of arrest.

Consequently his counsel argued that as the agreement was illegal the plaintiffs could not force Campbell to make an accounting.

Mr. Justice Eve remarked that there was nothing illegal in taking whisky as near the United States as possible, but then, in considering the facts of the case, he said it appeared to him that the greater part of the Mary Elizabeth's cargo had been dealt with in a part of the Atlantic which had acquired a peculiar name, owing to the transactions which took place there. The net result was that the cargo had reached New York and other parts of the United States.

The Justice said he thought the position assumed by Campbell was not a very creditable one, but he did not see how he could deprive him of the defense he had raised. Consequently he would discharge the order he had made in Chambers calling on Campbell for an accounting.

DAUGHERTY TOLD M'LEAN 'NOT TO WORRY,' SAYS EDITOR; CALLS CURTIS 'PRINCIPAL'; OIL MEN OFFERED WOOD BACKING IN 1920

COMMITTEES CALL WOOD JR.

Both Oil and Daugherty Investigators Want to Hear Him.

STORY OF A POLITICAL BID

Oil Men Said to Have Been Willing to Help General in Presidential Fight.

BUT MADE A CONDITION

"Jake" Hamon, It Is Said, Was to Get Interior Portfolio—Wood Refused.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—As a result of a signed statement published in Washington this afternoon, Leonard Wood Jr., son of Major General Leonard Wood, has been subpoenaed by Senator Walsh of the oil investigating committee, to give testimony before that body.

In this statement, published in a copyrighted article, young Wood is given as authority for the assertion that certain oil interests submitted a proposition to his father, General Leonard Wood, at the time of the Republican National Convention in 1920, to give him their support in the contest for the nomination.

Young Wood asserted that a condition made was that "Jake" Hamon, who subsequently was slain by Clara Smith Hamon, should be appointed Secretary of the Interior.

Subpoenas will be issued for the appearance also before the committee of Mrs. John W. Gorman, formerly Clara Smith Hamon, and Jake Hamon Jr., according to Senator Walsh.

Leonard Wood Jr. has been notified by Senator Wheeler of Montana that he also will be asked to appear before the Daugherty investigating committee next week.

It is assumed in Washington that Senator Wheeler's plan to summon Mr. Wood before the Daugherty Committee may hinge on another story which has been current concerning the 1920 convention. This story was that delegates from four oil States could have been swung to the support of Harding on condition that Albert B. Fall be made Secretary of the Interior. The activities of Harry M. Daugherty, then prominent in Mr. Harding's campaign, were mentioned in connection with the delegates from the oil States.

In an interview tonight Mr. Wood said:

"The statement by me relates that certain oil interests made an offer to my father which would have assured him the Presidential nomination at the Chicago convention. It also stated that Jake Hamon, former Republican National Committeeman from Oklahoma, made an offer to my father, involving the nomination of Mr. Hamon as Secretary of the Interior.

"The writer, Mr. Edgar Mels, came to see me about two weeks ago. I understood he had been working for about seven weeks on what he said was a sensational yarn. He said he understood my father had had an offer made to him by Jake Hamon. I replied that I had been interested in Jake Hamon's political career because he had been a strong supporter of my father at first, and because I had worked with Mr. Hamon.

"At the eleventh hour, at Chicago, I told Mr. Mels I heard some one say (I don't know just who) that Jake Hamon would offer support of votes to my father, sufficient votes to carry the nomination for him. Later the story went out that my father had tried to get in touch with Mr. Hamon.

"I never heard any suggestion as to what stimulated the offer. I never heard it was oil or anything else. The statement by me in the story is correct, but if you read it carefully you will see that it simply states that Mr. Hamon was an oil man. Mr. Mels came back to me with the typewritten statement, and after I read it over two or three times and edited it I signed it.

"The point is this: 'I merely told Mr. Mels what I had heard. It was four years ago, and it was just an incident relative to Mr. Hamon. I remember it impressed itself on my mind because the story went out that my father had sent for Mr. Hamon, when he really went to see my father, and I remember how angry we all were.'"

Asked as to his statement in the article that the understanding was that Jake Hamon was to have the post as Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Wood said:

"I knew a Cabinet position was hanging in the offing for Mr. Hamon."

He added that he knew his father turned down the offer "flatly."

SHANGHAI, March 8.—Newspapers received from the Straits Settlements tell of the hurried passage through cities of the Malayan peninsula of a distinguished personage, who, it turns out, is none other than Lieutenant Osborne Wood, son of the Governor-General of the Philippines, whom the papers call America's "champion long-distance financier."

The papers say that apparently the young financier is planning to rid himself of his quick wealth, for he engaged a private special train and saw all the sights of Penang, Kualalampur and other cities all at one gulp.

Lieutenant Wood is on his way home.

Coolidge Remembers Meeting Ira E. Bennett But Has No Recollection of Their Conversation

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—In reference to the testimony of Ira E. Bennett, before the Senate Public Lands Committee today, it was said by a White House spokesman that the President had seen Mr. Bennett once or twice, but had no distinct recollection as to what was talked about. The impression was that Mr. Bennett had dropped in to pay his respects, but had not discussed anything with the President since the Teapot Dome matter became acute.

Further explanation of the telegram which President Coolidge sent to Edward B. McLean at Palm Beach on Jan. 12 was given by a spokesman for the President. This telegram read: "Prescott is away. Advise Slemp with whom I shall confer; acknowledge."

It was pointed out that the President had made an inquiry of Mr. McLean about District matters and also that he wanted Mr. McLean to advise with Mr. Slemp, who was then at Palm Beach. The President sent this telegram at 9:30 o'clock in the evening. It was said that he would have sent the telegram to Mr. Slemp, but he did not have his address.

The President, it was asserted, "thought that Mr. McLean, because he was a Winter resident of Palm Beach, would know where to see Mr. Slemp and confer with him about District matters which the President had desired to take up with Samuel J. Prescott, Chairman of the Republican City Committee, but could not do so because of his absence."

It was further stated that the President had remembered that Mr. McLean had urged him to confer with Mr. Prescott about District matters because of Mr. Prescott's familiarity with political conditions and men. When the President failed to find Mr. Prescott in town the President sent the telegram to McLean telling him of Mr. Prescott's absence and suggesting that Mr. McLean see Mr. Slemp in Florida.

Mr. Prescott was in conference with the President at the White House today. He arrived in Washington this morning in response to a telegraphic summons from the President.

Following a twenty-minute talk Mr. Prescott said to newspaper men that he talked over District of Columbia matters with the President, especially the matter of reappointing the two present Commissioners, and that the telegram episode was also referred to.

NO PART IN FRAUD, LANGLEY DECLARES

Kentuckian Asks House for Investigation if Chicago Grand Jury Mentions His Name.

GETS OVATION AFTER PLEA

Zihlman of Maryland Says He Will Await Any Offering of Charge.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Representative John W. Langley, Republican, of Kentucky, whose name was mentioned in connection with charges in a Grand Jury report in Chicago growing out of cases brought against former officials of the Veterans' Bureau, rising to a question of personal privilege in the House today, denied that he was guilty of wrongdoing, and demanded an investigation in the event that the report of the Chicago Grand Jury mentioned his name.

Mr. Langley, who seemed to be laboring under great emotion, was applauded as he began his address and he received an ovation as he concluded with a plea that he should be presumed to be innocent until proved guilty.

Mr. Langley, who has been a member of the House for eighteen years, declared that he had been aware for some days that his name had been mentioned, and that he had reached the conclusion that the time had arrived when he should inform his colleagues that he was innocent and ask the courtesy of the fullest inquiry into his official acts. He said that he came from a mountain district in Kentucky where honor was held high, and that he was inexpressibly shocked by the accusations that had been made against him.

"God helping me," he exclaimed, "I want the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. In the meantime I want to have in the minds of my countrymen at least as much right as the criminal and crook have of being presumed innocent until proved guilty."

Mr. Langley was followed by Representative William D. Upshaw, Democrat, of Georgia, who declared that his heart had been touched by the words of Mr. Langley. He denounced "the reckless way in which publicity had been given concerning members of Congress."

Daugherty Gets Resolution.

Just about the time that Mr. Langley concluded his speech the House resolution, passed yesterday, calling upon the Attorney General to transmit to the House the names of the Congressmen mentioned in the Chicago Grand Jury report reached the Department of Justice. It was received by Attorney General Daugherty in person. The Attorney General will reply to it tomorrow. He declined to indicate today whether he would forward the names.

Prior to the meeting of the House, Representative Langley asked Speaker Gillett whether the Attorney General had made a response to the resolution. Upon being informed that the Attorney General had not Mr. Langley decided to make the matter a question of personal privilege. Word got around early this morning that Mr. Langley would speak

CURTIS INSISTS HE'S NOT 'PRINCIPAL'

Says He Never Discussed the Political Aspects of the Oil Scandal With Bennett.

BUT ADMITS SEEING HIM

He Will Appear Today Before the Senate Investigators to Make a Formal Denial.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Senator Curtis of Kansas, Republican whip in the Senate, issued a vigorous denial today that by any word or action he had given Ira E. Bennett, editor of The Washington Post, justification for designating him as "principal" in the now famous telegram that Mr. Bennett sent to Edward B. McLean, at Palm Beach, on Jan. 29.

Mr. Bennett testified that he had talked with Senator Curtis on Jan. 3 and also soon before he sent the telegram to Mr. McLean.

Senator Curtis said he had talked with Mr. Bennett three times. One of these conversations, he said, occurred as stated by Mr. Bennett early in January. The two other conversations, said Senator Curtis, were on a day when Senator Norris delivered a debate in the Senate, to a part of which Mr. Bennett took exception. The Norris speech was delivered on Jan. 30, a day after the "principal" telegram was sent.

Senator Curtis demanded that he be permitted to appear before the Senate committee tomorrow to deny Mr. Bennett's statements. After Mr. Curtis appears Mr. Bennett will be recalled for further examination.

"I have never said anything about this whole case that could not be printed in any newspaper," said Senator Curtis, "and with which my name could not have been used publicly, and I had no conversation with any one that would make it possible for them to refer to me as the 'principal' or in any other way than by my own name.

"I have talked to Mr. Bennett three times and there is nothing in the conversation that cannot be freely related.

"The first time Bennett, and I believe Major, came to me and said that Mr. McLean was sick and did not want to come up to Washington at this time, that his son had been operated on and was not well. They asked if I would not see Senator Walsh and get him to excuse McLean from coming then. I said there was no use in my seeing Walsh and 'you'd better have a Democrat see him,' and suggested that they see Underwood or Robinson. I may have said that I could speak to Lenroot for them, but I don't recall whether I did this or not. Later I saw Senator Underwood and he said the subpoenas had already been issued.

"The second time Mr. Bennett came to see me regarding the speech made by Senator Norris, in which a member of Mr. McLean's family had been attacked. He wanted me to see Senator Norris and get him to withdraw the reference in the record. I told him I had already done so, and I had also asked Senator Borah to see Senator Norris. Senator Walsh came up, and also urged withdrawal of the statement. Later that afternoon I met Bennett in the lobby; I told him that Norris had already

DECLARES 'Y' MEANT WALSH

'Apple' in Telegrams Referred to Fall, Witness Tells the Oil Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Sensation followed sensation during the public session of the Senate committee investigating the naval oil reserve scandals today.

There was only one witness before the committee, Ira E. Bennett, editor of The Washington Post, and he was responsible for all the sensations. Mr. Bennett, under the fire of Senator Walsh's cross-examination, admitted that Attorney General Daugherty was the "Mr. X" who sent word to McLean on Feb. 14 reassuring him and urging him not to worry, while, according to Mr. Bennett, the "principal" in the message which Mr. Bennett wired to Mr. McLean on Jan. 29 was Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas and not President Coolidge, as some members of the committee believed.

It was Mr. Curtis, the assistant leader of the Republicans in the Senate, said Mr. Bennett, who discussed with him the Teapot Dome scandal and who, he added, predicted a reaction from "unwarranted political attacks." Mr. Bennett said he had suggested to Mr. McLean that Mr. Curtis was the Senator who could render needed assistance, and besides, he added, "McLean had, through me, confided more or less in him."

The assertion that Senator Curtis was the "principal" of the telegrams brought a prompt denial from Senator Curtis, who declared that he had never at any time discussed the political aspects of the case with Mr. Bennett, and who followed his denial by asking the committee to call him to the stand tomorrow and permit him to repudiate the story under oath.

Senator Walsh announced that Mr. Curtis would be the first witness and that Mr. Bennett would be recalled immediately after the examination of the Kansas Senator.

It is the contention of Mr. Bennett that a part of the message refers to Senator Curtis and another part of it to President Coolidge. He said he had attended a newspaper conference at the White House, and that he sought to convey to Mr. McLean his own interpretation of what the President's policy was with regard to the Cabinet status of Messrs. Denby and Daugherty.

As for Attorney General Daugherty, who, Bennett finally admitted, was the "Mr. X" of the Feb. 14 telegram, the witness at first swore that he believed "Mr. X" to be Wilton J. Lambert, personal counsel for Mr. McLean, while the "Mr. Y" of the message, who, Mr. McLean was informed, was X's elbow, was Senator Walsh. Bennett said he wired the message immediately following a White House conference with newspaper correspondents.

The two messages which led up to the identification of Daugherty as "Mr. X" were offered in evidence this morning just before Mr. Bennett was called. These two messages, which were signed "Count"—Mr. Bennett admitted that he was the "Count"—read:

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11, 1924.
Edward McLean, Palm Beach, Fla.
"X" telephone (D) me last night said tell you not to worry. COUNT.

Washington, D. C.,
Edward B. McLean, Palm Beach, Fla.
Saw "X" for nearly an hour. His direct message to you is, "I am at 'Y' elbow and standing at the guns. All that is possible to do will be done by us, so you should worry. Delay selection prosecutor. Give 'Z' my love. I don't want 'Z' to be disturbed so long as I am on the job. You know what to depend upon. The fight is on me and I am ready for them and feeling fine." COUNT.

Admits "X." Was Daugherty.

After Mr. Bennett had testified that "X." was Mr. Lambert, and that he believed Senator Walsh was Mr. "Y.", Senator Walsh asked him if he was the "I. E. B.," who on Feb. 13, the day before the second "Count" message was filed, had wired Mr. McLean that he was to have a conference with "H. D." before 1 P. M. that day. Mr. Bennett admitted that "H. D." meant "Harry Daugherty." With his memory thus refreshed he conceded he was mistaken when he testified that Mr. Lambert was Mr. "X." and Senator Walsh was, he believed, Mr. "Y."

The "principal" message of Jan. 29 was read into the record on Tuesday last. This message read:

Washington, Jan. 29, 1924.
E. B. McLean, Palm Beach.
Saw principal. Delivered message. He says greatly appreciates and sends regards to you and Mrs. McLean. There will be no rocking of boat and no resignation. He expects reaction from unwarranted political attacks.

McLean Editor Furnishes a Day of Sensations Before Senate Oil Committee

BENNETT.

Mr. Bennett swore that the first three sentences and the last sentence referred to Mr. Curtis, while the "There will be no rocking of boat and no resignation" was his interpretation of Mr. Coolidge's position so far as the demand for resignations of Denby and Daugherty was concerned. He was plainly angered when members of the committee sought to get him to explain how he expected Mr. McLean to know what part referred to Senator Curtis and what part to President Coolidge.

In the matter of the "fruit code" Mr. Bennett was able to identify only one of the "fruits." He said he understood that Mr. Fall was the "apples" of the McLean-Major messages. He did not know who "apricot" was nor could he identify "peaches." He said he thought Mr. Major could give that information. Mr. Major will have the opportunity tomorrow, as he will follow Mr. Bennett.

Walsh Comments on Criticisms.

Before the additional telegrams were introduced today, Senator Walsh made this statement in the committee:

"It would be profitless to enter into any discussion this morning before this committee concerning the criticism of its action in giving publicity to any of the telegrams which have been submitted to it. I feel at liberty to say, however, that the committee has endeavored at all times to confine the testimony, both oral and documentary, to what is material to the subject under inquiry.

"That sometimes matter not material has been introduced in evidence I presume cannot be controverted. That happens in almost any trial, even in a court of law, sometimes without objection, sometimes without reflection. The committee has been, I am sure, guided by that rule up to the present time, and so far as its actions have been in any wise directed or influenced by myself, I repeat what I said upon the floor, that no testimony has been introduced except upon the consideration of its relevancy to the subject under inquiry where there was the slightest objection on the part of any members to the relevancy of it."

Senator Kendrick then made the statement that "there has not been any action in connection with any of these messages when there was any difference of opinion on the part of any member of the committee as to that action."

William Frederick Friedman, cipher expert of the Army Signal Corps, was then sworn and read his translations of further telegrams which he was asked yesterday by the committee to decode. The first message, in cipher, read:

Washington, D. C.,
12:27 P. M., Jan. 25, 1924.
To Edward B. McLean, Palm Beach, Fla.:
Wyzza with Yaanf stop distinctly cold stop have made appointment for this afternoon will wire you result.
WUYPA.

With reference to the words "Wyzza" and "Yaanf" in this message, Mr. Friedman said:

"I take it that those two code groups represent individuals to whom these code groups were assigned arbitrarily in the code books used."

"Has your investigation gone far enough so as to enable you to determine the persons who are thus designated by code?" Senator Walsh asked.

"Not yet, sir," Mr. Friedman replied. "Determination will be most probably by circumstantial evidence, unless we have many more messages in which it is possible to establish definitely the values of some of those groups which represent names."

"Apples" Message Read.

The second message translated read:

Washington, D. C.,
To Edward B. McLean, Palm Beach, Fla.
Personally delivered apples message fuzumgovsa sincere thanks and same message returned to you with best regards.
I. E. B.
3:51 P. M.

"Do you assume that the word 'apples' represents some person?" asked Senator Walsh.

"Yes, sir," replied Mr. Friedman, who added that he had not been able to determine whom.

The next message read:

Washington, D. C.,
Feb. 11, 1924.
Edward McLean, Palm Beach, Fla.
Wyfge wjagz kagic kunyj pozpa ujamg kxn kycyj worry.

[Translation.]
Washington, D. C.,

COUNT.

"In this case," explained Mr. Friedman, "the letter 'X' I have simply assigned to the code group 'wyfge,' which is of a similar nature as the code groups in the first message."

The fourth message, in code, read:

Washington, D. C.,

Saw "X" for nearly an hour. His direct message to you is "I am at 'Y' elbow and standing at the guns. All that is possible to do will be done by us so you should worry delay selection (of) prosecutors. Give 'Z' my love. I don't want 'Z' to be disturbed so long as I am on the job. You know what to depend upon. The fight is on me and I am ready for them and feeling fine."

[Unsigned.]

"I take it," Mr. Friedman explained, "that the last word in the body of the text, namely 'count,' is a pseudonym for the sender of the message."

"What do you mean by 'Y'—is that the name of a person?" asked Senator Bursum.

"It is a group which is the same as 'wycgo,' the same as in the preceding telegrams. They stand for persons," said Mr. Friedman.

Mr. Bennett on the Stand.

Mr. Bennett, who took the witness chair when Senator Walsh concluded the reading of the telegrams, said he had been editor of The Washington Post since 1905, and was the "I. E. B." signed to some of the telegrams.

"Our attention," said Senator Walsh, "is called to a telegram read this morning and signed 'I. E. B.' That message reads 'personally delivered apples message.' Will you tell us who apples is?"

"To the best of my ability to recollect," replied Mr. Bennett, "that is former Senator Fall, but I am not certain, because I did not have any code. I just took that by hearsay, believing that it referred to Fall."

Additional Telegrams Read.

The code expert was then excused and Senator Walsh put these additional telegrams into the record:

San Antonio, Texas, Dec. 7, '23.
Albert B. Fall, care Wardman Park Inn, Washington, D. C.
Guadalupe Sanchez revolted in Vera Cruz favor de la Huerta. Figueroa in revolt in Guerrero. If these not stopped immediately will probably be followed by Lopez de Lara in Tamaulipas and Castro in Durango. Situation looks very grave.

Will talk to you tonight in regard to Johnson. [No signature.]

Q.—Did you deliver a message to Fall? A.—I delivered a message to Fall, I think, twice. I don't know the date of that, but I think I delivered a message twice. I know I saw him twice.

Q.—This is dated Feb. 8. A.—I don't remember by dates. I saw him very soon before he left here. I saw him on the Saturday before he left here. Now, that probably was before that. I don't know what date he left, but I saw him on the Saturday before he left, I know that.

Q.—"Apples" is evidently a code term, Mr. Bennett? A.—It was sort of a word that went around the office among—Mr. Major used the word "apples" in referring to Fall. At least I understood it so.

Senator Walsh called the witness's attention to the use of the words "apricot" and "peaches" and other names of fruits to designate other persons whose names were suppressed in the telegrams. Mr. Bennett said he did not know to whom those "fruits" referred. He never had any code, he declared.

"You, apparently, however, did use the code for the balance of this message." Senator Walsh said.

"Will you read it?" Mr. Bennett asked.

Senator Walsh read the message as follows:

"Personally delivered apples message fuzumgovsaz sincere thanks and same message returned to you with best regards."

"That is utterly a blank to me," said Mr. Bennett. "I may have asked Major for a code word or two and he may have given it to me, but I don't remember doing so."

"The word 'Count' is signed to some of these messages. Who is that?" asked Senator Walsh.

"They sometimes alluded to me as 'Count' around the office long before there was any Teapot Dome investigation," the witness replied, "because I had received some decorations from the King of Italy, and they jocularly referred to me around the office as 'Count.'"

Bennett Known as "Count."

Q.—And you used that word in these telegrams as designating yourself? A.—I may have done so, or it may have been done for me, but I don't recall using it myself. I sometimes had messages sent verbally.

Q.—If a telegram went out over the signature "Count," whether you actually wrote it or some one else wrote it, that message was your message? A.—Not necessarily, because I didn't know how the code was made. I didn't make any code.

Q.—So that we may understand then that if it was sent signed "Count" it was a telegram that came from you, whether it was accurately conveyed or otherwise? A.—That is right.

Senator Walsh read the telegram in which Mr. Bennett wired Mr. McLean that "X" said to "tell you not to worry."

Q.—Who is "X"? A.—Well, I can't remember. A number of people told him not to worry, but "X" doesn't mean anything to me.

Q.—Well, of course, "X" is arbitrary. The code word is WYFGE. Who is that? A.—That doesn't mean anything to me, either. I can't remember. Several persons had sent verbal messages through me down to Mr. McLean, saying not to worry, and some of them said "Come back," and others said "Wait and see what happens," and so on.

Q.—When you did not write out the messages in code yourself, who did? A.—In my opinion, Mr. Major did, because I understood and believed that he was the only person who had the code.

Q.—You do not yourself know of any code in which the names of persons appeared with the code term? A.—I don't know myself of any code. I had a very good idea of a code existing in which the names of persons appeared under such symbols as that, but I did not have the code, and I do not remember having seen it.

"In view of what you say about the matter, it is quite likely that you would not have in mind exactly the circumstances under which the telegram to which your attention has been called was sent. I am calling your attention now to the next:

"'Saw Blank'—being the same person whom we designated in the other as 'X'—'saw Blank,' or 'X,' for nearly an hour.' This is Feb. 14, 1924. 'His direct message to you is: "I am at Y's elbow and standing at the guns. All that is possible to do will be done by us"—you are still quoting—"so you should worry. Delay selection of prosecutor. Give 'Z' my love. I don't want 'Z' to be disturbed so long as I am on the job. You know what to depend upon. The fight is on me and I am ready for them and feeling fine."'

"That is the end of the quotation. It is signed 'Count.' Apparently that refers to an interview that you had with the person whom we have designted as 'X' for nearly an hour, and the message which I read to you was given. Now, can you recall who 'X' was?"

Recalls a Verbal Request.

"I can recall giving a verbal request to Mr. Major to send something—a part of that message, but it is not sent exactly as I requested it," Mr. Bennett anwered. "There are some things added on that I know nothing about. But I remember giving him a verbal message of the same—partial—purport as that message there."

Q.—Well, whoever "X" is you spent nearly an hour with him? A.—Yes.

Q.—And he sent a message to Mr. McLean which you conveyed to him by this telegram. That message started out, "I am at Y.'s" or "Blank's, elbow and standing at the guns." Now, in view of what I have read to you, what is your present recollection about who "X" is, or "Wyfge"? A.—My recollection is that before that I had received a confidential message from McLean expressing anxiety as to whether his attorney was diligently and ably watching his affairs and attending to his matters up here. And he requested me to find out to the best of my ability and give my judgment as to whether Mr. Lambert was doing the best all around, and give my judgment on it, and I sent him a verbal message, and told Mr. — or requested Mr. Major to put it enough in code so that it would be confidential, to convey a message to Mr. McLean regarding Mr. Lambert and what he was doing.

Senator Walsh read from the first telegram the expression "Wyfge telephoned me last night," and from the second the expression "Saw Wyfge for nearly an hour," and wanted to know if the witness had noted the fact that the same code letters were used in both telegrams, and for that reason both referred to "Wyfge." Mr. Bennett insisted he was not the author of both messages. He might have sent the first, or "not to worry" message, but not the second, he declared.

"I just requested that it be sent. I could not put so much in code because I did not have the code," he explained.

"Let's continue," said Senator Walsh. "And Mr. Lambert says, 'I am at Y's elbow.' The code is 'Wyogo,' and it says 'I am at Wyogo's elbow and standing at the guns.' At whose elbow did Mr. Lambert tell you he was standing?"

"I will give you what my message was," Mr. Bennett answered. "I said 'Send down a message to Mr. McLean and say that Mr. Lambert says—quote his words if you want to—that he is attending to this matter very closely, on the job, you might say, or something to that effect; very close to Walsh, keeping in touch with Mr. Walsh, and on the job, diligently pursuing his duties.'"

Thinks "Wycgo" Means Walsh.

Q.—Well, you think then that "Wycgo" means Senator Walsh, do you? A.—Well, that is my—I don't know what those letters refer to, but that was my request to Mr. Major, that he convey that message that Mr. Lambert was in close touch with you and attending to his duties diligently. Mr. McLean wanted to know that from me.

Q.—Well, in view of your talk with Mr. Lambert, did Mr. Lambert in the conversation you had with him say anything to the effect that "I am at Walsh's elbow and standing at the guns"? A.—Well, in effect, but not exactly those words. He said: "I am in close touch with Senator Walsh. Tell McLean not to worry. I am on the job," or words to that effect.

Q.—The telegram continues: "All that is possible to do will be done by us, so you should worry. Delay selection prosecutor." A.—I think probably that meant, "You should worry about any delays in the selection of prosecutor." I think that is what that meant.

Q.—Well, who was the prosecutor referred to? A.—I think probably the person to be selected by the President, don't you know; to be—I don't know that. That does not recall anything to my mind. I surmise that.

Senator Walsh read further from the telegram, "You know what to depend upon," as Lambert's message to Mr. McLean, and asked what that meant.

"Nothing more than that he was diligent and that he could rely upon him, as near as I could get at it," Mr. Bennett replied. "Those are not my words, your remember, and I am giving the substance as near as I can recall of what Mr. Lambert requested me to send to Mr. McLean."

Q.—It continues: "The fight is on me." A.—I did not send that message.

Q.—"And I am ready for them and feeling fine." A.—Well, that he was all ready, and so on. Don't remember anything about "a fight on me."

Q.—Well, what fight was Mr. Lambert engaged in at that time? A.—I say I don't know anything about any fight, except the natural diligence that he might use in protecting or working for his client.

Q.—But, Mr. Bennett, so far as I know anything about it, there was no fight on Mr. Lambert. A.—I don't, either.

Q.—Well, this really does not hook up, Mr. Bennett does it? A.—It has no meaning to me.

Q.—Isn't it quite likely that you are in error in the view you express that "Wyfge" is Mr. Lambert? A.—I may be mistaken in my inference as to the code, but I remember sending a verbal message and requesting Mr. Major to send it about Mr. Lambert to reassure Mr. McLean that Lambert was in touch with you, watching this case and attending to it.

Q.—Of course, Mr. Bennett, you can understand that we are endeavoring to do nothing in this matter except to have you help us comprehend this message? A.—Oh, certainly, I want to.

Q.—And if you assign Mr. Lambert's name to "Wyfge" there is a good portion of this message that does not mean anything at all. A.—Well, I cannot help that. It was impossible for me to read a code message. Therefore I don't know whether my message was accurately quoted or not.

Takes Up "H. D." Message.

Senator Walsh, remarking that he might be able "to be of some help" to the witness, read the message of Feb. 13 in which Mr. Bennett wired Mr. McLean that he had an appointment "to see party at 4 o'clock."

Mr. Bennett admitted he "probably" was the sender of the message, but he said he could not remember who "party" was, and the message might refer to any one of half a dozen persons.

"Very well," said Senator Walsh, "and so I call your attention to the fact that on the following day, Feb. 14, you sent the following message, or I assume you did. At least, the telegram is here:

Washington, D. C., Feb. 14, 1924.
Edward B. McLean, Palm Beach, Fla.
Will have conference with H. D. before 1 o'clock.
B.

Mr. Bennett said "B" undoubtedly was "Bennett," and he thought "H. D." referred to Mr. Daugherty.

Q.—Your conference with Mr. Daugherty was arranged apparently for 1 o'clock on Feb. 14? A.—Yes, but I don't think I held it. I think that there was some delay or mixup about the appointment. I think I finally saw him.

Q.—Well, do you remember how long was the delay? A.—It was not very long. I think the same day, or possibly the next day.

Q.—Well, anyway, you had the appointment with Mr. Daugherty at 1 o'clock, and the telegram in code to which I have last called your attention went out at 1:56 P. M. of Feb. 14. Do the two connect up now, Mr. Bennett? A.—I don't think I had a conference with Mr. Daugherty—as I say, there was some delay, I think it was a Cabinet meeting, a long Cabinet meeting, or something which—something occurred to delay the meeting with Mr. Daugherty. I don't know what it was, but I don't think it was a very long delay.

Q.—I am told that the 14th was Thursday, which is not Cabinet day. A.—Well, it was not the Cabinet then. I don't know what the delay was, but I was guessing it might have been a Cabinet meeting. I don't know what the delay was.

"Well," said Senator Walsh, "if we should assume that your message which went out at 1:56 P. M. in code following 1 o'clock in the afternoon, at which time you had an appointment with Mr. Daugherty, and that code message referred to Mr. Daugherty and Mr. Lambert it would read this way:

"'Saw Daugherty for nearly an hour. His direct message to you is: "I am at Blank's elbow and standing at the guns. All that is possible to be done will be done by us, so you should worry delay selection of Prosecutor. Give Z my love. I don't want Z to be disturbed so long as I am on the job. You know what to depend on. The fight is on me and I am ready for them and feeling fine."'

"That connects up fairly well, doesn't it?"

"That is substantially what Mr. Daugherty told me as well as Mr. Lambert, strange as it may seem," said Mr. Bennett. "But I don't know exactly when I had that conference with Mr. Daugherty, but he sent a verbal message down to Mr. McLean."

Doesn't Recall Expression.

Q.—Well, then, referring now to your conversation with Mr. Daugherty, who was the person referred to by Mr. Daugherty who was designated in the message as "wyhol"?—"I am at wyhol elbow and standing at the guns." A.—Well, in the case of Mr. Daugherty, I don't recall that he ever used that expression or anything like it. His message was more personal. He said—let me see how I can recall—was something about Mr. McLean coming up here. "Be careful of his health, love to Evelyn," and it was more personal than the other one.

Q.—Well, what did you want to see Mr. Daugherty about, Mr. Bennett? A.—I don't know. I can't remember. I wanted to see him in regard to this case, but what particular point I don't remember. I think it was to convey a message from Mr. McLean of friendship and good-will and all that.

Q.—We have here, Mr. Bennett, a telegram sent by you under date of Jan. 3, 1924, which refers for the greater part to efforts made by you to carry out the desire of Mr. McLean to be excused from attending before the committee. I think we have had practically all of that, but I wanted to inquire about this expression in the message: "Major saw Zev this morning at 9 o'clock and delivered your message. He could do nothing. Zev said that he and Crocker of New York made every possible effort to have Whitney excused, but were unsuccessful." What was the message that Mr. Major was transmitting to Zev? A.—I don't know. Mr. Major and I together consulted as I prepared that message to Mr. McLean—and he said, "put in about this." I didn't know what he referred to at all. I didn't ask him.

Q.—"Zev said that he and Crocker of New York made every possible effort to have Whitney excused, but were unsuccessful." To whom did Zev make that statement? A.—I suppose to Mr. Major, not to me. I never saw—I have only seen Mr. Zevely by sight, and have no acquaintance with him.

Q.—I think you told us that you do not know any of the other persons designated by the names of fruits, except "Apples"? A.—Not that I remember. No.

Senator Walsh remarked that another message needed a little explanation, and he read to Mr. Bennett the following under date of Jan. 29, 1924:

E. B. McLean, Palm Beach, Fla.
Saw principal, delivered message. He says greatly appreciates and sends regards to you and Mrs. McLean. There will be no rocking of boat and no resignations. He expects reaction from unwarranted political attacks.
BENNETT.

Says "Principal" was Senator Curtis.

"Who is the principal referred to?" Mr. Walsh asked.

"I would like to before giving you—which I will at once—give you the names of the principal—but before I do that I would like to explain that that is quite a well-known message," Mr. Bennett replied, "and I have looked at it and put myself back at the time that I sent it, and I see that it might easily be misconstrued. The first sentence of that message has nothing to do with the second sentence. The reference that I make to rocking the boat and no resignation had nothing to do with the word 'principal.' Had nothing to do with the person to whom I delivered that message. That was my own opinion, 'rocking the boat and no resignation' was my own opinion that I gathered at a conference of the newspaper men at the White House, and the 'principal' referred to is Senator Curtis of Kansas."

"What was the message that you delivered to him?" Mr. Walsh asked.

"It was a message from Mr. McLean. Mr. McLean had asked me whom I considered to be the best—most suitable—Republican for him to send a message in the Senate, most suitable in the sense of being well informed and a friend of his and in touch with others, and all that, and I suggested Senator Curtis. And he thereupon gave me a message to Senator Curtis, which I delivered about that time, within a day or so of that time. I think the day before that I was at the White House, and he appreciated the message and sent his regards to Mr. McLean. When I came to write the telegram I bunched everything for the sake of the information to Mr. McLean."

"What was the message which you delivered to Senator Curtis?" Mr. Walsh went on.

"The message was to the general effect that he—well, it was verbal from me to Curtis," the witness answered. "I will give you the best I can recall. It was to the general effect that Mr. McLean was all right. For him not to worry, that Mr. McLean would be through all this all right; that he didn't want to come up here and testify, but not to think that he had any connection with this matter except that he had stood up for Fall. Words to that effect. That he appreciated that this was more or less a political matter as well as a pursuit of what appeared to be corruption."

"But the next sentence, 'There will be no rocking of the boat and no resignations,' you say has no relation to the preceding sentence?" said the Senator.

"No relation to Senator Curtis," said Mr. Bennett. "I think I obtained that opinion regarding the rocking of the boat after I saw Curtis."

Q.—Well, as I understand you now, having attended a meeting at the White House of the representatives of the press, or having had your representative there— A.—Both. There was one there and I was there too.

Q.—Very well, you got the impression from what the President said to all of the representatives of the press that there would be no rocking of the boat and no resignations? A.—That is it.

Q.—Yes. Well, now, the next sentence, "He expects reaction"? A.—I wrote the telegram hastily and I should have put in there "in my opinion." "In my opinion there will be no rocking of the boat," or "I believe" or that "I am convinced there will be no rocking of the boat." Then that telegram would be intelligible, but it is not proper for me to say, or to have anybody infer, that Senator Curtis said, "There will be no resignations and no rocking of the boat," because he never made any such reference at all. But he talked on the political situation and he said, "I think there will be a reaction against unwarranted and unproved political attacks."

Q.—So that really the message paraphrased, Mr. Bennett, reads this way: "Saw Senator Curtis. Delivered message. He says greatly appreciates and sends regards to you and Mrs. McLean. I was at the White House today with representatives of the press while they conferred with the President, who said in effect, or conveyed the idea, that there will be no rocking of the boat and no resignations." A.—To me. He conveyed it to me.

Q.—Yes. "The President conveyed to me the idea that there will be no rocking of the boat and no resignations." Then "Senator Curtis expects reaction from unwarranted political attacks!" A.—Yes.

Q.—That is the true meaning of this telegram? A.—That is the true meaning of that telegram, in my opinion.

Not the President's Statement.

Senator Bursum asked if the committee was to understand that the President made this statement to the witness, who answered:

"No, he never made that statement to me, certainly not."

"Well, the way the interpretation was read to you I would take it that that would be the effect of your evidence just given," said Mr. Bursum.

"Then I want that corrected, Senator Walsh," Mr. Bennett exclaimed.

"I had misunderstood you, then, Mr. Bennett," said Senator Walsh. "I understood you to say that the language, 'there would be no rocking of the boat and no resignations,' in substance is what the President said to you and other representatives of the press."

"To whom did those resignations refer?" Senator Bursum asked.

"Cabinet members," Mr. Bennett replied.

"Did it refer to Denby?"

"Cabinet members, yes."

Questions by Senator Adams brought from Mr. Bennett the admission that he did not remember the exact time he got his statement from Senator Curtis, but he thought it was the day before this meeting of the correspondents.

Q.—Is it not a fact that your correspondents' meeting began at 12:30 on the day this message was sent, which would be Tuesday? A.—I think it is, 12:30.

Q.—And is it not a fact that your message to McLean was sent at 1:20? A.—I think I sent it the same afternoon, yes.

Senator Walsh said he understood the witness that Mr. McLean wanted him to suggest some influential Republican member friendly to him with whom he might communicate.

"Well," said Mr. Bennett, "he set forth his position, more or less confidentially, to reassure them that they need not be excited by any political report."

"And you suggested Senator Curtis?"

"Yes."

Tells of Talks With Curtis.

Q.—How many conferences with Senator Curtis did you have? A.—Well, that is the only one that might be called a conference.

Q.—But in the telegram to which I called your attention a while ago, and to which I referred only in general terms, which you sent Jan. 3, 1924, you start out "Major and I saw Curtis this morning." A.—That was long before.

Q.—And he promised to see Lenroot and have your statement placed in the record. A.—That was quite a while before that.

Q.—You must have had two conferences. A.—I did not have a conference. If you call a conference seeing a man two minutes, yes. You know, Senator, if I see a man and say a few words to him I would not call that a conference; it is too dignified.

Q.—As early as the third of January Mr. McLean reposed sufficient confidence in Senator Curtis to warrant him in asking Senator Curtis to see that his statement was placed in the record? A.—I do not know whether I asked him or suggested, or whether Mr. McLean did. I have forgotten.

Q.—Getting back to this telegram of Jan. 29, which reads, "Saw principal. Delivered message. He says greatly appreciates and sends regards to you and Mrs. McLean. There will be no rocking of boat and no resignation. He expects reaction from unwarranted political attacks." Now, how could Mr. McLean give to that telegram the interpretation which you have given us here, Mr. Bennett? A.—I did not say anything to Mr. McLean about being at the White House. I was reporting information to Mr. McLean and also reporting upon my visit to Curtis.

Q.—But, of course, you were reporting it in a way which you supposed Mr. McLean would understand? A.—Well, I think he ought to understand it.

Q.—How did you imagine that Mr. McLean was going to understand that "principal" meant Senator Curtis? A.—Because I had suggested to him that he would be the best and most suitable principal man to see. I used the word "principal," and I think he used "see principal," or "ask principal," after I had suggested to him whom he had better consult. I think he said, "See principal and give him this message."

Q.—We have no such message here. A.—Well, he asked me to see Senator Curtis, and I think he alluded to him as "principal," and I followed it back with the same word. That is my impression now.

"Now if we paraphrase the thing again," said Senator Walsh, "we have 'I was at the White House today and the President said to me and to the representatives of the press generally, in substance—I do not quote his words exactly—there will be no rocking of boat and no resignations. He expects reaction from unwarranted political attacks.' Now, I understand you to say that 'he' means Senator Curtis?"

"Your paraphrase is yours, and not mine," Mr. Bennett replied.

"I have failed utterly to understand you, then," exclaimed Mr. Walsh. "I understood you to say, after the questions addressed to you by Senator Bursum, that this was your way of expressing tersely what was said by the President."

Denies President Said It.

"The President said nothing of the kind," Mr. Bennett declared. "There were a hundred newspaper men there. They will all tell you."

Q.—Who did say it? A.—Nobody said it. I said it. I was the only one that said it.

Q.—You said it as expressive of the conclusion you arrived at from the talk with the President? A.—And of his attitude and manner and everything concerned.

Q.—We will put it that way then; "I was at the White House today when the President conferred with the representatives of the press. From what he said and his manner and everything else I reached the conclusion that there will be no rocking of the boat and no resignations." Have I correctly paraphrased you now? A.—That is about right.

Q.—Now we go on. "He expects resignation?" A.—No, that has no reference to the President.

Q.—Exactly, but how did Mr. McLean know to whom that referred? A.—I did not tell Mr. McLean I was at the White House. I did not make any reference to the White House. I was giving him my impression of the news, of the facts in Washington.

Q.—Let us put it that way; let us say that is your language; let us say you said, "There will be no rocking of the boat and no resignation. He expects reaction." That means Senator Curtis? A.—Yes.

Answering a question by Senator Dill, Mr. Bennett said he knew that Mr. McLean wanted a statement put into the record, but that he did not know what the statement was.

Mr. Bennett also said he could make no sense out of the telegram which told about "captains from his own camp" and which said that "the stricken and beleaguered chieftains" had not been deserted. He said it was all "pure guesswork," so far as he was concerned. As he remembered the circumstance, he ignored the message, but it was possible he may have wired "a perfunctory answer."

Senator Adams, taking up the examination, reverted to the "principal" telegram of Jan. 29. He wanted to know just when it was that Mr. Bennett saw Mr. Curtis to deliver the message referred to in that telegram.

"I think it was the day before, but I am not sure," Mr. Bennett replied.

"So, notwithstanding that you had seen him the day before, or some substantial time before, you did not send the message until after this meeting of the correspondents?" asked Senator Adams.

"I am almost certain," Mr. Bennett answered, "that I saw Curtis before the press conference."

Q.—And then you sent a rush message immediately following the meeting of the press correspondents. Why, if that was the message that you wanted to send, was it necessary to rush it at that particular time? A.—I included that in the message. This dealt with two different things, but I bunched it in and disposed of everything with McLean in one telegram.

Q.—But if Curtis had given you these reassurances that there would be a reaction from unwarranted political attacks, and you had delivered the message, was not that of sufficient importance to wire that in at the time you received it? A.—I did wire it. There is the wire.

Q.—But you waited until after this meeting with the President and the press correspondents and sent this wire in immediately following at 1:20? A.—I did not get downtown until about 11 o'clock, and I went to the White House about 12 or 12:30, and I attended this conference.

Q.—But, notwithstanding the fact that you had been at this conference with the President in which these vastly important matters were discussed, the thing that was pressing on your mind and led to the rush message from you was something that Senator Cutris told you the day before. A.—I mark almost every message "rush." I have done that for years, almost every message.

Q.—Well, you must have rushed to get the message off at 1:20 after a conference beginning at 12:30, when you went to your office to send it. A.—No. I walked.

Q.—Mr. Bennett, how often did you see Senator Curtis? A.—I think I saw him about three times since this thing came up. No. I have seen him more than that, because I was at a party which he attended.

Q.—Your contact with Senator Curtis was at your instance, following a request from McLean to select some leading Republican with whom he could confer through you? A.—Yes, sir, I suggested it.

Q.—That is, Mr. McLean did not in the first instance ask you to get in touch with Curtis, but you were suggesting Curtis as a proper Republican Senator to get in touch with? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see any other Republican Senators in connection with this hearing as often as you saw Senator Curtis? A.—I have seen Democrats and Republicans and insurgents and everybody.

Senator Bursum obtained from Mr. Bennett a statement that he had consulted with Senator Curtis in order to obtain intelligent information as to the political status to convey to Mr. McLean, and that there was nothing in the message which in any way sought to convey a quotation from President Coolidge.

Tells of Talk With Daugherty.

Senator Bursum then took up Mr. Bennett's testimony that he had a conference with Attorney General Daugherty. Mr. Bennett said he thought the conference was held at Mr. McLean's request. The witness said he had verbally told John F. Major, secretary to Mr. McLean, about the result of the conference, with instructions to send it to Mr. McLean.

"Will you repeat the substance of what was given to you by Daugherty to send to McLean?" Mr. Bursum asked.

"To the best of my ability," Mr. Bennett replied, "he said, 'Tell Ned not to worry; he is a side issue in this thing. In two or three weeks I will be the middle of the whole thing. I am attending to things. I am getting posted, and I will do what I can to help'—something like that."

"To do what to whom?" the Senator asked.

"To avoid McLean being called up here to testify—that is all," Mr. Bennett answered.

Q.—Did your impressions from the White House have any relation to personal interest or connection with the present oil investigation, so far as it affects or concerns Mr. McLean? A.—No, no sir.

"Then your impressions with reference to what you have here stated concerned purely a matter of public interest, or public policy?"

"The President took questions, I believe the system was put in some one of the few I have attended. But I believe the syste mwas put in some years ago that the President would not answer verbal questions right off the bat, but he preferred that the question be submitted in writing. And we went in there, and the room was almost full, and he stood up and greeted the correspondents who came very close around him, and he began to go over papers—slips of papers.

"He would hold one under, and then he would stop at one and say, 'I have here a question, so and so.' And he would answer that question. Then he would go through and he would say, 'Here is a question I don't care to consider.' He may have referred to what the question was. He turned that under, and looked at another, 'Here is a question on so and so.'

"And I remember he spoke quite in detail about the legal aspect of this case as distinguished—that is, the legal, I think he used the word legal—aspects of this case as distinguished from the question of authority of the President to make this transfer, and so on, and also referred to alleged corruption, which he said, of course, would affect the whole thing, and might affect the legal proceedings.

Q.—Were those statements given publicity generally in the press at the time? A.—I think all the newspapers sent out stories and said the White House said so and so, or the spokesman of the White House said so and so. It is a standing rule that the President shall not be quoted.

Q.—And the impression you got was from the statements of the President to the press generally at that time? A.—Yes. I had no private conferences.

Q.—You did not ask Senator Curtis to do anything that was out of the way or out of the ordinary? A.—No. I asked information from Senator Walsh and Senator Lenroot.

Q.—The same as you would have a right to ask any Senator? A.—Any person in the world.

Q.—You had nothing in mind that would be of any special benefit to Mr. McLean, other than what he might be entitled to? A.—A perfectly proper suggestion of a political character.

Denies Private Conferences.

Senator Dill asked the witness if he knew that Mr. McLean was a special agent of the Department of Justice when he conferred with Mr. Daugherty. Mr. Bennett said he did not. He declared he never had any private conferences with the President at the White House in connection with the oil inquiry, nor with Mr. Slemp, his secretary. But there were some words passed with other persons present, though nothing confidential, he added.

Mr. Bennett said he did not discuss any of the messages that he was to convey from Mr. McLean, and never conveyed any of them to Mr. Slemp.

"Was the message that you gave to 'the principal' written or a verbal message?" Senator Adams asked.

"It was telegraphed to me, but I made it verbally to him," Mr. Bennett replied.

Q.—What was in the telegram? A.—Oh, the suggestion that I talk with him and explain the fact that Mr. McLean had stood up for Fall, but there was nothing under it, nothing ulterior in it. But that he thought and fully believed that Mr. Fall was a perfectly good man, and I had no conception that this was mixed up with the oil business at all.

Mr. Bennett said he received the message over the leased wire in The Washington Post building.

"What became of that message?" asked Senator Adams.

"Well, I don't know," replied Mr. Bennett. "You refer to what became of the message. I gave the message to Mr. Curtis."

"What was there in this message which the principal appreciated so much?" asked Senator Adams.

"Well, he sent a message of appreciation," replied Mr. Bennett. "He included his appreciation of the fact that Mr. McLean had, through me, confided more or less in him. He had given his political observations on this case."

Q.—That is, "the principal" wanted McLean to know that he appreciated having him confide in him and having him ready to know what a good man Fall was, and all? A.—Not at all. Why do you put such stuff as that in the records? You ought to be ashamed of yourself. Maybe you are not, but I am.

Tilt With Senator Adams.

"Just a moment," exclaimed Senator Adams. "Let us get this straight now. What was the message you gave to Curtis? Let us get back and see who is in error about this. I understood you to say that this message contained a statement which you were to give to Curtis to the effect that McLean had stood by Fall, that he thought Fall was a good man, and all those things, and he wanted you to get in contact with Curtis to explain those things to him. If that is not correct, will you give it correctly?"

"Well, it had political features that you have not referred to at all," said the witness.

Q.—I have asked you what was in the message so that it is for you to refer to it. A.—I am giving you the substance of it.

Q.—Let us get it correctly. A.—I have given it two or three times.

Q.—Let us try it once more. A.—I don't know how I can give it any more.

Q.—Do not hesitate to repeat yourself, Mr. Bennett. Get it correctly now, so that we will not be subject to criticism regarding what you are saying. A.—All right, if you won't try to get me to state two different statements and then say——

Q.—I am asking you to say what this statement was. A.—I would rather you would read it out of the record.

Q.—No; I want it from you. You gave a verbal message to "the principal." What was that message? A.—The message was as I have already stated it.

Q.—Will you please give it now? A.—I don't know as I need say it now. The whole world knows what I said, and it is in the record, to the best of my ability.

Senator Walsh interrupted to warn Mr. Bennett to "bear in mind that you challenge the interpretation of it given by Senator Adams."

"Oh, yes; I do challenge his interpretation of it," Mr. Bennett retorted.

"Then it seems to me that he is entitled to have you state it again," said Mr. Walsh.

"I don't think so, if he can consult the record," Mr. Bennett replied.

"I do not care to consult the record, Mr. Bennett. I want you to give it," said Mr. Adams.

"I decline to give it to you personally," Mr. Bennett exclaimed.

"I am not asking you to give it to me personally. Give it to the committee."

"If the committee wants it all over again, I will answer," said Mr. Bennett.

Senator Adams asked the committee to request the witness to give the substance of the message, and this was done.

Says Political Meaning Was Sought.

"Mr. McLean had consulted me," said Mr. Bennett, "as to who would be a suitable, well-informed Republican, friend of his preferably, of course, who would inform him and also receive from Mr. McLean the political sphere of this whole thing; what it all meant politically; what was behind this political part of this investigation; what you and other Democrats were aiming at, if you want it plainly. And I had spoken to Senator Curtis once or twice; we were friends, and I conveyed Mr. McLean's message. He appreciated it; he appreciated the fact that Mr. McLean regarded him as a well-informed, well-balanced Republican, who was in touch with all other Republicans and who had a proper conception of the political inferences behind this whole case. That is one way of stating it."

"Was there anything in this message with reference to Secretary Fall?" asked Senator Adams.

"Well, I think there was something about Mr. McLean saying that he had stood up for Fall and had no idea that Fall had any connection with Doheny and getting any money from Doheny, or any connection with the oil leases," replied Mr. Bennett. "McLean, I think, said, 'I know nothing about the oil leases, and that will all appear. I know nothing about Sinclair or Doheny.' It is my impression all that was conveyed verbally."

"Now, what I was asking you was," said Senator Adams, "at the time of your comment to him as to what part of this message drew from 'the principal' the statement that he appreciated the message from Mr. McLean?"

"I just stated that," said Mr. Bennett.

Q.—It was the whole message then? A.—No; I stated why; it is right in there. I just stated it.

Q.—I am asking you to direct your attention to the fact that you say you saw "the principal" and delivered the message; he says, "greatly appreciates." A.—I just stated why he appreciated it.

Qualifies a Message.

Q.—Then do I understand that the appreciation was because of the confidence and esteem that Mr. McLean had for Senator Curtis—

Mr. Bennett (interposing)—And for his political judgment and good sense and information. In other words, he highly esteemed Senator Curtis as a Republican and as a man. That is why Senator Curtis appreciates it. That is all there is to that.

Q.—And Senator Curtis wanted you to send back to Mr. McLean this message of appreciation? A.—He didn't ask me to do it. He sent kind regards.

Q.—When you say "he expects reaction," you didn't use the word "principal" to make clear what you meant? A.—As I say, the message was written hastily, after I came from the White House. I mean hastily in the sense that I did not weight every word. I said in the message, "Saw principal and he appreciates it." And then I conveyed some news, in which I should have said, "It is my belief," or "I am convinced that the Administration is on an even keel, not getting excited over this scandal, and I don't think there will be any resignations." I am convinced of that.

Q.—You appreciate that this was a message concerning matters of vast importance to Mr. McLean? A.—I sent news to him.

Q.—But in this particular message you were sending important news? A.—I thought it was good news, yes, sir; important news.

Q.—But you did not take care to designate carefully the parties to whom you were referring, so that there could not be any possible confusion? A.—I didn't intend to convey to Mr. McLean that it meant the President, or anything like that. I knew he would get it all in a few hours.

Q.—Was there any reason why you should not have said "Senator Curtis" instead of "the principal?" A.—Not the slightest, except I might have been handing the telegram out to be carried by others. I did not care to have them see too much of the names.

Q.—There was nothing in this telegram to be concealed? A.—Not in the proper sense; no.

Q.—Then why cover it? A.—I didn't cover it.

Q.—Did you have a letter from Mr. McLean designating that you use that name to designate Senator Curtis? A.—I think he he likely said to see the principal and tell him; yes, sir.

Q.—Yes; but did you have any prearrangement by which the name was to be used to designate Senator Curtis? A.—I say, he probably said in his telegram to me: "I think he is a suitable man; see him and tell him this." He had asked me to tell him who in my judgment would be a most suitable Republican, to obtain information from and give information to, in a political sense, not personally; he was not asking Mr. Curtis to do anything personally for him.

Senator Walsh—Mr. Bennett, you cannot escape the conclusion from these telegrams, and perhaps all of your communications with him (McLean), that he was laboring under a considerable degree of anxiety or something of the sort? A.—He was.

Q.—And is it your understanding that that anxiety had to do merely with his coming up here to testify? A.—That is my impression, always has been, that he was very much excited, a rich man, and had a telegraph wire and sent a lot of telegrams, meaningless and foolish and in code and all that sort of business.

Thought McLean Anxious.

Senator Walsh asked Mr. Bennett why, after giving his testimony at Palm Beach on Jan. 11, Mr. McLean should have been worried about being called before the committee.

"Of course, I do not know what was in his mind," said Mr. Bennett. "My impression, judging by the telegrams and my contact with Mr. McLean through the telegrams, was that he regarded this as a great political question in which he was being more or less involved; and he is not an expert statesman or anything of that kind, and he had a wire, and he sends back and forth to find out what is going on and what it all means."

Senator Walsh asked: "Will you let me recall that on Jan. 29, for some reason or other, you went to see Mr. Daugherty. That had no relation whatever to Mr. McLean being called here to testify, because no one had suggested at that time that he be called. Now, can you tell us, if we eliminate the matter of his being called here to testify, just how he came to suggest your going to Mr. Daugherty?"

"Well, so far as I recall it," Mr. Bennett said, "it was just a personal message of reassurance to Daugherty, and also good-will and so on, to ask how Daugherty was getting along and all that. I do not recall that there was anything important, not at the conference I may have had with Daugherty, lasting nearly an hour, where Mr. Daugherty did most of the talking."

Q.—Now that the chronology is called to your attention, it could not possibly have had any relation to his being excused from coming here to testify? A.—I think that is what Mr. Daugherty meant. I think I did ask if he thought Mr. McLean would be called, and I think Mr. Daugherty said, "Don't worry. Tell Ned he is off on the side lines; the fight is on me," or something like that.

Q.—There is just another telegram or two to which I want to call your attention. One sent you by Mr. Wiley, under date of Jan. 24, 1921, reading, "Please see Senator Jim from State adjoining mine and find out whether there is disposition to require our personal mutual friend to make a long journey. Get all the information you can." A.—Well, that confirms my idea that Mr. McLean was reluctant at that time to be called to Washington to testify—wonder why he was being called.

Q.—Did you see Senator Jim? A.—No; I paid no attention to that. I inferred that meant Mr. McLean—that "mutual friend."

Q.—Now, we have a telegram here, put in evidence this morning, Mr. Bennett, by Mr. McLean, addressed to R. A. Bennett, Washington Post, Washington, D. C. Undoubtedly that is you. A.—I suppose so.

Q.—It is under date of Jan. 12, the day after his testimony was taken, down at Palm Beach; he says, "Spend some time at Capitol today. Best regards. E. B. McLean." What did that mean? A.—I construed it to mean to go up to the Capitol, find out what is going on, get the news, get my impression of the situation in Washington. That is my impression, I construed it that way.

Q.—What was there at that particular time that brought out this message? Why that day any more than any other day? A.—I do not know. It might have come any day, I don't know why it came at that particular time.

Q.—Well, do you remember that you did spend some time at the Capitol that day? A.—It is my impression that I got that telegram a little late, that I either arrived at my office late or the telegram came late, but I am not sure; but I think I came up to the capitol rather late that day. I am not sure about it. That is my impression now.

Senator Kendrick Intervenes.

Senator Kendrick—If I heard the witness correctly, he made the statement that Senator Curtis told him that this investigation was intended as much for political reasons as it was for uncovering corrupt practices? A.—No.

Q.—I say that is why I have asked you. That is rather a serious statement, in which you practically quote Senator Curtis. Now, without regard to the exact question, or the exact statement, that is the way I understand you. A.—I think it is a little wrong to say that Senator Curtis conveyed to me the statement that he regarded the investigation as much political as it was in good faith for the pursuit of crime or of the legal status of these leases. I think that is a little wrong, but he said it had a political aspect.

Q.—Well, it is unfair to him for you to make that statement unless he said so. A.—Oh, I do not think he made it that strong, but he said, "There is a political aspect to this thing and it has political features that are very important."

Senator Kendrick—That will be a different thing altogether. A.—He did not impugn the good faith of this committee at all.

Senator Walsh—But you observe that you did. A.—Please forgive me, Senator.

Q.—I felt sure, Mr. Bennett, when you said so, it was not your serious reflection; but you remember that you did? A.—Senator, I never intended to impugn the good faith of this committee, never. I had not the slightest idea.

Q.—But you did impugn the good faith of the Democrats on this committee? A.—I was a little angry with the Senator who was putting questions to me.

Q.—Wouldn't you just as lief withdraw that statement? A.—As to you, Senator, I withdraw all questions as to good faith.

Q.—And I think you might equally, Mr. Bennett, as to my colleague. A.—Not as to his political good faith, no. I never will withdraw it.

Q.—Just another question about this telegram of Jan. 29, referred to by Senator Kendrick just now. "He expects reaction from unwarranted political attacks." You are quoting Senator Curtis now, in substance, as I take it. Who was the person who was subject to these unwarranted political attacks? A.—Everybody in the Republican Party, from the President down—unwarranted political attacks on the Republican Party. An attempt like the speeches, for instance, of Senator—some of the speeches in the Senate, where they said all Republicans are tainted with fraud, the Republican Party, and so on. It was a political observation he made. He said, "That is so unwarranted." In substance, he said "That is so extreme and unwarranted that there will be a public reaction."

Q.—That part of the telegram referred to debates in the Senate and not the proceedings before this committee? A.—Oh, he might have included this in his mind; I don't know. He said, "Unwarranted attacks against the Republican Party."

Q.—But he didn't refer to any particular person? A.—No.

Q.—Did he not refer to an attack on Senator Fall? A.—I don't think so. It referred, I think, to political attacks, trying to make it appear that the Republican Party was a party to crime or something of that sort.

Tilts With Senator Adams.

Senator Adams, Democrat, of Colorado, against whom Mr. Bennett had directed his criticism, took up the examination, and a lively tilt followed.

"You seem to regard questions directed to you as to things you have said or done as having political significance," said Mr. Adams.

"Oh no," replied Mr. Bennett.

"The only questions I asked you, sir," said Senator Adams, "were in reference to things you had said and done, and you charge me, as a result of that, with political activity."

"Well, I have become convinced for weeks that you had more or less willingness to expose Republican errors, but not Democratic errors," replied Mr. Bennett. "That is my impression. I do not mean it as an insult."

"I think if you will inquire into the record, sir," said Mr. Adams, "you will find you are doing something that you are absolutely without justification in doing."

"If you say you are acting in perfect good faith toward the Republican Party, I will accept your statement," answered Mr. Bennett.

"Just a minute," said Senator Adams. "Not one question, sir, will you find in the record which I have asked which has the touch of politics in it, unless endeavoring, by infrequent questions, to aid in bringing out some phase of this investigation is politics. If the fact that a man of one party happens to be exposed in politics, why, every member of the committee, Democrat and Republican, has done that. We have been following certain channels.

"But I want to say to you very plainly, that if you will bring to me any place in the record where there is a justification in my inquiry of your charge I would be very glad to openly acknowledge it, because I want to say to you that it is absolutely, willfully, unqualifiedly false."

"Well, now, Senator," replied Mr. Bennett, "so far as this committee is concerned I do not know of any bias that you have shown, except possibly one or two questions to me which I construed that way, and if you did not mean it, I accept that, and I beg your pardon if you did not mean it. But I have become distinctly convinced of your political bias by your remarks. I doubt whether you can be one man in the Senate and another man here, or that you want to be. I take it you spoke with absolute good faith when you made a speech in the Senate and practically attributed to every Republican being besmirched as a result of this oil inquiry."

"My good friend—," began Mr. Adams, when Mr. Bennett interrupted:

"That was when you said you had a horse thief as a friend."

"Now that is not literally accurate," said Senator Adams, "and unfortunately, the inaccuracy follows your whole statement. What I was trying to point out in my little talk in the Senate, very brief, was that some men had acquired leadership by reason of things that they had done, and that the control of the men in politics suggested this story. I made no charge against the Republican Party; I have no occasion to make it. The best of friends I have in the world are Republicans, my partners, my neighbors, the members of my family. I have just as high regard, sir, for the Republican Party as you have.

"The Republican Party has, I think, many able men in its leadership who have misled the honest, sincere men. No one has a higher regard for the original purpose of the Republican Party than I have. It was founded to carry on two great causes, one the preservation of the Union and the other the freedom of the slaves. Those two things it has accomplished, and if you will read the little talk I made you will find no inference, no charge against the Republican Party as a whole, but a sort of semi-humorous illustration, which some people do not seem to have been able to comprehend entirely.

"I drew some inferences which I think are true, that men such as Senator Fall are perhaps the natural flowering of a system which has been imposed by a few men for their own personal benefit upon a great mass of honest men who are today following the banner, a banner having an honorable history, being carried originally for honorable purposes and which has been now used to lead men into things entirely in conflict with the original purposes of the party.

"And I merely endeavored to point out in that little talk which I made this instance—that some men had acquired leadership because of certain things, that there were differences of moral standards among people, and that among the leaders of the Republican Party who attempted to justify men like Fall and those who associated with him there was a lack of proper appreciation of public morals.

"And I again repeat it, sir, that those who think that there is no impropriety in men in public office doing as Fall has done, or doing as Edward McLean has done, holding a commission under the Department of Justice, are entitled to investigation and are entitled to exposure.

"And the only thing I said was that, while I had no objection—in fact, I come from a State where the protective tariff is popular, but I did say that legislators who will give a favor to any particular interest and then accept political contributions from those and men who were favored by legislation—that the line between those who made leases of oil and then took contributions was not as clear to me as it was to others.

"And that was not a charge against the party as a whole, but a number of certain men who had misused governmental powers and legislative agencies for their own personal benefit, just as has been disclosed during this debate."

"Senator, you have absolutely proved my case by making a beautiful Democratic speech," retorted Mr. Bennett.

GOV. COX DEFENDS COOLIDGE

Wires Senator Walsh, Massachusetts Democrat, to Work With Lodge

BOSTON, March 7.—An appeal to United States Senator David I. Walsh, Democrat, of Massachusetts to repudiate "those Democratic colleagues who for political gain would assassinate the character of an honest man," was telegraphed today by Governor Channing H. Cox of Massachusetts. The telegram said:

"Calvin Coolidge is today President of the United States. In private life he is an honored citizen of Massachusetts. When for contemptible partisan purposes an attempt is made to besmirch the fair name which all honest, fair-minded men know he has earned, does not your duty to your Commonwealth transcend any question of party interest?

"Our citizens, regardless of party affiliations, would have been gratified to have you stand shoulder to shoulder with Senator Lodge yesterday in resenting and repelling the baseless and reprehensible Democratic attacks on President Coolidge. In the name of fairness I appeal to you as a Senator from Massachusetts to repudiate those Democratic colleagues who for political gain would assassinate the character of an honest man."

Crime to Try to Trail Oil Into White House, Postal Official Says.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., March 7.—"It is the crime of the age, this trying to trail the oil scandal into the White House and the attempt to villify a man like President Calvin Coolidge, who stands as far and high above his fellowman as did Abraham Lincoln in his time," declared Third Assistant Postmaster General W. Irving Glover, at a luncheon of the Hackensack Coolidge Unit at the Swiss Chalet this afternoon. This unit is a branch of the New Jersey Woman's Republican Club. Every ticket to the luncheon was sold as a compliment to the President.

Mr. Glover said there were few officials in Washington who had not been investigated. Mrs. E. F. Feickert, leader of the New Jersey Woman's Republican Club; Mrs. Robert J. Huse, Secretary of the State Republican Committee, and Mrs. A. Haines Lippincott, candidate for national delegate, were the other speakers.

withdrawn the statement from the record and told him that he had better see the newspaper men about it and tell them that it had been stricken from the record. He started to thank me, and I said it was not necessary, but I suggested that he ask McLean to wire his thanks to Borah and Walsh, and when he communicated with the McLeans to give them my kindest regards.

"I have never discussed the political aspects of the case with Mr. Bennett at all. I may have said when I told him that Senator Norris had agreed to withdraw the reference from the record that Senators sometimes made statements in the heat of debate that they had not intended and would not otherwise have made. I have never discussed this case with Bennett or anyone else in any manner that could not have been published freely over my name, and the above recites everything and all that I have ever said to Mr. Bennett about the matter in any way as I now recall.

"I have never received any message for which I should send thanks or appreciation and I have never sent any."

DAUGHERTY BACK; NO ACTION IS TAKEN

He Arrives in Washington in Time to Attend Meeting of the Cabinet.

HE SEEMS MORE CHEERFUL

Meanwhile the Senate Committee Issues Subpoenas for His Hearings.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Attorney General Daugherty arrived from Miami this morning and went directly from his train to the meeting of the Cabinet. He remained there less than forty minutes and was one of the first to leave.

As he left the President he was asked whether the situation had changed since he issued his statement on Feb. 27, when he said he would not offer his resignation until he had had a hearing on the charges preferred against him. Mr. Daugherty seemed in good humor.

"That is a question I can hardly answer," he said. "I don't know whether the situation in Washington has undergone any change while I have been away."

Later his friends said that Mr. Daugherty's position was the same as it was when he left for Florida over a week ago. They said that they had the impression that the President was willing that he remain in the Cabinet until he had had a hearing. He went to his office where he spent all afternoon going over, with John W. Crim, special counsel in the war fraud case, the report of the Chicago Special Grand Jury involving two members of Congress and other subjects. It was said that the department would proceed in these cases and present evidence to another Grand Jury if it were warranted.

President Coolidge declined to make known his position on the retention of Mr. Daugherty in his Cabinet. Efforts to obtain the attitude of the President toward Mr. Daugherty in the face of recent developments were unavailing. The Cabinet did not discuss the subject.

The special Senate committee appointed to conduct an investigation of Attorney General Daugherty's Administation is prepared to start its work Monday or Tuesday. A large number of witnesses have been subpoenaed and it is believed that the committee will be able to organize and get down to work by next Tuesday at the latest.

Those summoned to appear next week are: Dave Gershon, San Diego, Cal.; William Wiseman and B. C. Baldwin, San Antonio, Texas; Charles Breniman, Dallas, Texas; M. C. Pennington, New Orleans, and Colonel Emil Kosterlitzky, Los Angeles.

The names of these witnesses became public in New Orleans and, according to Senator Brookhart, were divulged by a United States Marshal. The committee did not wish the names of the witnesses revealed, and Senator Brookhart may cause an inquiry to be made whether the Marshal had not exceeded his duty in allowing the names to become known.

Senator Heflin said today that he had been informed by Captain W. C. Oates, former Governor of Texas, of the failure of a number of mushroom oil companies in Texas, whose operations and status had been called to the attention of the Department of Justice. Senator Heflin said that the Department of Justice failed to move against these oil concerns.

NEW ORLEANS, March 7.—Forest C. Pendleton, who is summoned to appear before the Senate Committee to investigate Attorney General Daugherty, was formerly chief of the southern division of the Department of Justice. Mr. Pendleton said he had received a subpoena from Washington.

WILL NAME SUCCESSOR OF DENBY BY MONDAY

Coolidge, However, Has Not Yet Come to a Decision—Burton and Groesbeck Out of It.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Announcement was made by a spokesman for President Coolidge today that a successor to Secretary Denby, whose resignation becomes effective Monday, will be sent to the Senate before Mr. Denby leaves the Cabinet.

There was no indication who would be selected. Those who have advised with the President said tonight that the choice had narrowed down to three men, but as yet the President had not made his decision.

Representative Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, mentioned as a possible successor to Mr. Denby as Secretary of the Navy, has informed Administration officials he prefers to continue as a member of the House rather than accept a Cabinet position.

Governor Groesbeck of Michigan, mentioned in connection with a cabinet appointment, left today for Lansing, after stating that he "had not applied for any Federal office, had not been tendered any Federal office or had suggested to him that he take any Federal office."

While here he has had one conference with the President, several meetings with Collidge campaign managers and today saw Secretary Slemp.

BOOTLEGGER'S STORY STIRS HOUSE DEBATE

Blanton Demands an Investigation of Statement That Whisky Was for a Member of Congress.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—A bootlegger, caught red-handed in illegal possession of a jugful of whisky, in the immediate vicinity of the Capitol yesterday, was the innocent cause of a debate in the House today.

Representative Blanton, Texas, Democrat, told the House that the bootlegger, in an effort to obtain his release, had made the statement that he was trying to deliver the goods to a member of Congress. Representative Blanton insisted that this was an affront to the dignity of the House and that it was the duty of that body to appoint a committee to ascertain the facts. He offered a resolution to that effect. He said that the story of the bootlegger, that he was transporting the whisky to a member of Congress, tended to bring the lawmakers into disrepute and that the House should purge itself by making an investigation.

He scoffed at the notion that any member of Congress would so far forget his dignity as to engage in illicit trade with a bootlegger and he insisted that a disclosure of the facts would redound to the credit of the lawmaking branch.

Representative Snell of New York, Chairman of the Rules Committee, opposed the resolution on the ground that it was not privileged. He said further that the bootlegger was a confessed crook and criminal, and he was cheered when he declared that the House should not dignify the incident by an investigation.

The Speaker ruled that the Blanton resolution was not privileged, whereupon the House broke into chceers and laughter.

MONTICELLO SALE PLAN.

Death of Jefferson Levy Will Not Change Memorial Program.

The death of former Congressman Jefferson M. Levy will cause no change in the plan to acquire Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, which had been in the possession of Mr. Levy's family for almost ninety years, as a national memorial, Stuart G. Gibboney, President of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, which was organized for the purpose of establishing Monticello as a permanent memorial to Jefferson, said yesterday.

"The passing of Mr. Levy of course makes no difference in our plans, inasmuch as under the partial purchase agreement concluded with Mr. Levy by the Foundation last Fall, legal title to the property already rests with the Foundation, subject to the completion of the additional instalment payments on account of the purchase price," he declared. "The first payment of $100,000 for the property was made, as already announced, on Dec. 1 last, when possession was taken of the property by the Foundation, and we are now proceeding with our plans to raise the necessary money to complete the partial payments as they fall due."

THREW AWAY HIS BOOTY.

Messenger Boy, Scared After Theft, Scatters Bank Notes.

Two $50 notes, said by David Blinder, 15-year-old messenger boy of 236 East Eightieth Street, to have been thrown away by him after he had disposed of $240, because the mnoey, which he had previously stolen, dazzled him, were turned over to Lieutenant Ezekiel Keller of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station it became known yesterday by Thomas Hagen, manager of the Hotel Warrington, 161 Madison Avenue.

According to Blinder, who was held for probation by Justice Edward F. Boyle in Children's Court yesterday, he stole the hand bag, containing $358, belonging to Mrs. Mary Kurland from the office where she is employed as a designer at 18 West Thirty-second Street.

He became so scared he said that he threw $240 out of a window at 159 Madison Avenue, $105 in the street on his way to Central Park and hid the remainder and the bag beneath a rock in Central Park. His statements were checked on by Detective Archibald Wood of the West Thirtieth Street station and found to be correct.

PREMIER CORRECTS EDITOR.

Ramsay MacDonald Tells Newspaper How to Spell His Name.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, March 7.—Ramsay MacDonald, Prime Minister of Great Britain, spells his name with a capital "D" after the "Mac." He so informed the telegraph editor of The Youngstown Vindicator in a letter received today from his secretary, C. P. Duff.

A controversy as to whether the name should be spelled with a capital "D" or a small "d" had arisen on the copy desk of The Vindicator. The telegraph editor had voted for a small letter on the authority of The Manchester Guardian of England, which uses that form. Conflicting authorities, however, led the editor to write directly to the Prime Minister to ask his authority for the proper form of writing his name.

early in the session and when he arose a few minutes after the House was called to order the benches were filled.

"For some days," declared Mr. Langley, "it has come to my knowledge that my name was being connected with the report recently made by a Chicago Grand Jury. My own inclination was to rise at once and tell my fellow-members that it was not true, so far as I was concerned. One reason why I did not do so at once was because of the fact that no specific charges had been made against me.

"I had assumed that in response to the resolution passed by the House yesterday that by this time we would know who of this House is accused of violating the law and his official trust, but that information has not yet been received. However, a reputable morning newspaper contains my name, and in substance the statement that I was one of those who would be accused. My fellow-members, I am acting against the advice of some of my best friends in speaking in advance of such report, but I cannot longer remain silent under these statements."

Mr. Langley was here interrupted by an outburst of applause.

Continuing Mr. Langley said:

"I have served this Government in an official capacity for more than thirty years, nearly eighteen of which have been as a member of this great body. My life has been an open book. This is the first time that any aspersions have been cast upon my personal or official integrity. It is natural that I should feel shocked at accusations that by innuendo have been made against me.

"If the newspaper reports are correct and my name should be formally included in any official report I ask that a forum be immediately created wherein I can at least exercise the right, established at Runnymede, to stand face to face with my accusers and where the truth can be speedily disclosed. Without any specific information, I can, of course, enter into no specific denial, but I have this to say here and now in the presence of Almighty God and these witnesses: I have committed no crime. I have done no wrong, and I confidently rely upon speedy vindication at the hands of my colleagues of this House."

May Order Inquiry Today.

As a result of Mr. Langley's speech today and reports connecting Representative Zihlman, Republican, of Maryland, with alleged illegal practice in relation to the release of prisoners from Federal penitentiaries, the House is likely to order an investigation immediately following the receipt of a reply from the Attorney General to the resolution passed yesterday.

Should the information sought be withheld for an indefinite period the temper of the House is such that a resolution of inquiry could be passed in short order. Members of both parties are disturbed over the various Government scandals that are now being aired and they insist that the House cannot sit in idleness in the face of charges that two of its members have been involved in corrupt practices.

Mr. Zihlman told friends today that he would not rise to a question of personal privilege unless he was mentioned in the report of the Attorney General to the House. In the meantime he said he would keep his own counsel. He told a number of his colleagues today that he was without exact information as to the nature of the charges said to have been preferred against him, and that he had not been informed of the identity of the accusers. He insisted that any investigation, either by the House or by a Grand Jury, would clear him of guilt.

Reports reached the House late this afternoon that John W. Crim, special agent for the Department of Justice, who appeared as the Government representative before the Chicago Grand Jury, would advise the Attorney General to withhold the names of the members against whom accusations were made in the proceedings in Chicago.

It was said that he is of the opinion that no good purpose would be served at this time by a disclosure of the names or the nature of the charges made against them. He is said to take the position that the Government should be pretty sure of its case before complying with the demand of the House for publicity.

GOSSIPERS SCORED BY SENATOR WILLIS

President Will Not Be Swept Off His Feet by Clamor, Says Ohioan.

SPEAKS AT A DINNER HERE

Prolonged Applause Greets Expression of the Hope That Coolidge Will Be Renominated.

Declaring that the "maligners of character" had overstepped themselves when they attempted to bring the name of President Coolidge into the Teapot Dome investigation, United States Senator Frank P. Willis of Ohio told the members and guests of the League for Industrial Rights, at a dinner last night at the Waldorf-Astoria, that the President did not intend to be swept off his feet, but would stand firm in his determination to have the laws enforced. Prolonged applause greeted the hope, expressed by Senator Willis, that Coolidge would be renominated for office.

"There is no disposition on the part of any one in Washington to whitewash anybody or to condone any wrongdoing, if such there has been," he said. "There is no truth in rumors that an effort has been made to divert a proper investigation.

"Personally I think there has been wrongdoing in one or two instances, but I am disposed to wait until the facts come out before condemning or accusing anybody. In the Senate there is a disposition among some of my colleagues to condemn men by mere rumors or whisperings.

"It has been said that there is a species of hysteria in Washington at present. I do not know whether that is the right characterization, but I do know that there has been a steady effort through innuendo and suspicion to drag down those who have possessed and still possess spotless careers.

"The latest thing has been to read a telegram of the President—purely formal and similar to hundreds of others that have been sent in acknowledgment of congratulations. That telegram is lugged into the investigation with the idea to convey, through this whispering campaign of assassination, that the President is mixed up in this business. He will not be swept off his feet. There will be no attempt to minimize wrongdoing, whether by a Cabinet officer or anybody else."

John C. Brydon, President of the National Coal Association, talking on the trend of labor in the coal industry, said that all the increases in prices and shortages of coal from which the public has suffered in the last seven years, with the exception of the war period, had been due directly or indirectly to labor difficulties.

Complete investigation and disclosure of all the circumstances attending the leases of naval oil reserves to restore public confidence in the Government was urged last night by United States Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas in a speech at a dinner of the Arkansas Society at the Hotel Commodore. Senator Robinson condemned Secretary of the Navy Denby and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt for their part in the leases and declared that, while the evidence did not indicate the corruption of either, it did indicate their gross incompetence and inefficiency.

Before his speech Senator Robinson denied that he was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President.

BRING WINE AND WOMAN INTO SOVIET BANK TRIAL

Witnesses Against Krasnotchekoff Say Institution Footed His Bills for Flowers.

MOSCOW, March 7 (Associated Press)—As the trial of Alexander Krasnotchekoff, former Chicago lawyer, on the charge of misusing bank funds, nears its final stages, the prosecutor, M. Krylenko, is seeking to show that the banker purchased wine and flowers for his secretary out of bank funds, and that his acts were "unbecoming to the rigid life which communism demands of responsible officials." The arguments on both sides will probably end tomorrow.

Bank employes belonging to the communistic group have testified that Krasnotchekoff paid little attention to their recommendations. The defendant explained he ran the bank by business methods, remarking that the State Bank had had the same trouble with the Communists.

He admitted carelessness and lack of tact in lending money to his brother's company, which, the State contends, started business on a shoestring and was able to operate later on a large scale only because of the favors of the Commercial and Industrial Bank.

Generally, the prosecution is seeking to show that the banker created an atmosphere of capitalism, instead of communism, in this bank.

The State charged that the banker lived during the Summer at a luxurious villa and kept three horses. He answered this by saying the villa was a tumbledown shack; that one horse was needed to carry him to his work in the city each day, and that he used the other mount for riding, his only recreation. He explained that he worked hard all Summer, while the other Communist officials had vacations. The third horse was sent from the city to recuperate.

Testimony was then introduced by the prosecution to show that flowers sent to the village were charged to bank funds as "garbage removal," and that wine was charged to the provision account. Krasnotchekoff declared this had all been paid back; in fact his total indebtedness to the bank was less than 50 cents.

Krasnotchekoff admitted lending his brother Jacob, who is also on trial, $5,000 from funds of the Russo-American Industrial Corporation, of which Sidney Hillman was the head, saying, however, that this would have been repaid had the prisoners had an opportunity.

PADLOCK USED IN TRENTON.

Twelve Places, Including Roadhouses, Ordered Closed for a Year.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., March 7.—Twelve properties, including Biggett's Road House near Seagirt, were ordered padlocked for a year by Federal Judge Bodine today, because of violations of the prohibition law.

The saloon of Abe Rosenthal here was one of the places affected, and is the first in Trenton to be padlocked. Other places closed were the Washington Inn Tea House, Lincoln Highway, and saloons owned or operated by Marco Panichano and Katherine Steffanelli, Newark, P. J. Frawley and Nellie Bertrand, Long Branch; Harry Klein and the Paramount Realty Company, Newark; Fred Droste and the George Ehret Brewing Company, Hoboken; Patrick J. Rowland and Christiana E. Mohr, Harrison; Frank S. Flurry, West New York; Rudolph Marakowitch and the William Peter Brewing Company, West Hoboken; Joseph N. Aller, Newark.

When Aller tried to prevent the padlocking of his place by a legal technicality, the Court ordered the entire premises, a three-story house, with living quarters in the upper floors, closed for one year.

Gets Sun Compass for Polar Flight.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, March 7.—An instrument known as the "sun compass" has been constructed to the design of Captain Roald Amundsen for use on his trans-polar flight. It will supplant the ordinary compass, which is unreliable in the region of the Pole.

COOLIDGE HAS FAILED, JOHNSON DECLARES

President Has Not Taken Leadership of Nation or Party, the Senator Asserts.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 7.—President Coolidge today was charged with failure as a leader of the nation and the Republican Party by Senator Hiram W. Johnson, who made a brief stay in Chicago.

"I am in the position of combating a mythical person who was created by a section of the press in this country," the Senator said. "The real Calvin Coolidge who sits secluded in the White House has done nothing to show the leadership, either of the nation or of his party, which we have the right to expect from a President. The records demonstrate that the real candidate opposed to me has failed to take the leadership on a single domestic or foreign policy affecting this country."

Senator Johnson attacked the President for appointing C. Bascom Slemp as his private secretary.

"The politicians have appointed Bascom Slemp," the Senator declared.

"Widespread propaganda has gained considerable support for the special tax reduction scheme proposed by Secretary Mellon. The President followed the leadership of Mr. Mellon in advocating this, but Congress has discovered its real nature and has buried it so deep that it is past resurrection.

"In the second place the President again followed the leadership of Secretary Mellon and opposed the soldier bonus. The bonus will be passed despite the President's position.

"Mr. Coolidge followed the leadership of Secretary Hughes in advocating the World Court, but the World Court slumbers in the Committee on Foreign Relations, and probably will continue its sleep there.

"We now come to the greatest scandal that has shocked public opinion in many years—that concerning the oil leases and indications of corruption to secure them.

"It was not the President, but the Senate of the United States, that took the lead in exposing this. It was the Senate that asked for the resignation of Secretary Denby. It is the Senate again that has asked for the resignation of Attorney General Daugherty. The Senators have led at every point in this investigation, and the President has followed."

DIXON, Ill., March 7.—The question before the Senate when it voted a resolution urging the President to demand the resignation of Secretary Denby of the Navy was "in reality one of confidence, and the Senate voted no confidence," declared Senator Hiram Johnson in an address here today.

BOSTON 'LIBERAL' PROTESTS

C. W. Crooker Assails the Method Used by Coolidge Managers.

BOSTON, March 7.—A telegram protesting against the "arbitrary handpicked method by which Coolidge campaign managers are selecting, from Washington, the persons who are to be allowed to be candidates for delegates at large from Massachusetts to the Cleveland convention," was sent to the President today by Conrad W. Crooker, Boston attorney and Chairman of the Liberal Republican League of Massachusetts.

Mr. Crooker in his message declared he acted "as Chairman of an organization that led 100,000 liberal Republicans against Lodge and reaction in 1922, an organization that is not dead or even asleep."

"Is the morale of our Republicanism so low that delegates must be picked, crated and shipped to Cleveland like so much merchandise in order to assure their support of your candidacy?" the message asked. "The liberal Republicans of Massachusetts can be led readily in support of genuinely representative policies of Government, but they cannot be made to drink another drop of reactionary dictation in Massachusetts."

COOLIDGE AGAINST PARLEY.

Will Not Participate Officially if Conference Follows Dawes Report.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The United States Government has repeatedly declined to participate officially in various international economic conferences, and President Coolidge sees no reason why there should be any change in this policy at the present time.

This statement was made by a White House spokesman today in commenting upon reports that a general economic conference for the purpose of settling European problems might follow the report of the Dawes committee, which has been investigating Germany's fiscal condition. It was stated that any questions concerning such a conference were purely "hypothetical," the inference being that no definite proposal for such a conference is now before this Government.

MINNESOTA FOR COOLIDGE.

Conventions Give Him Majority of State's 27 Delegates.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 7.—Minnesota's delegation to the Republican National Convention will be favorable to the nomination of Calvin Coolidge for President, with a majority of the twenty-seven delegates definitely instructed for him.

This was assured today when Congressional district conventions selected sixteen delegates. Four delegates were chosen Wednesday and seven delegates-at-large will be named by the State convention here tomorrow.

Coolidge to Attend Press Dinner.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—President Coolidge will be the guest of honor tomorrow night at the annual banquet and installation of officers of the White House Correspondents' Association, an organization of newswriters assigned to "cover" the Executive Mansion. Attorney General Daugherty, John Hays Hammond, C. Bascom Slemp, Secretary to the President; Howard Chandler Christy, Edward T. Clark, personal secretary to the President; Frank W. Stearns, Rudolph Forster, Executive Clerk of the White House, and James R. Quirk will be among the guests. The President is expected to make an address.

BERLIN, March 7.—Ambassador Houghton today brought to the attention of Foreign Minister Stresemann the incident on Sunday on a railway train between Herr Korthaus, member of the Reichstag, and three American women, Mrs. Coffin, wife of the American Consul General here: Miss Goldsmith, assistant American Trade Commissioner, and Mrs. Conger, wife of the Berlin correspondent of The Philadelphia Public Ledger, in the course of which it is alleged Herr Korthaus used unseemly language.

Herr Stresemann assured the Ambassador he would investigate the matter.

POINCARE PREDICTS REPARATION ACCORD

Tells Deputies He Hopes Question Will Be Settled Before Election in May.

REPEATS HIS RUHR PLEDGE

France Will Retire Only When Paid, He Insists—Experts Feel Chief Difficulties Are Overcome.

PARIS, March 7.—Once more, before the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon, Premier Poincaré proclaimed that "France will not quit the Ruhr except in proportion as Germany pays and she will not finally evacuate it until she has received total payment."

To this he added:

"Recently it has been said that we have changed our policy."

"We hoped it," interrupted a Deputy from the Left.

"Then so much the worse for you," retorted the Premier. "Nothing is more false. When we occupied the Ruhr we declared we were acting for the common account of all the Allies, and that at all times we were ready to consult with them. We are doing so in the Experts' Committees.

"The Chamber will understand that I cannot discuss their work until it is finished. All I can say is that I have a firm hope that the French thesis will not be contradicted by the conclusions to which the experts will come—far from that—and that the interests of France will be safeguarded. We can even hope for an agreement without sacrifice of any of our rights.

"If a unity of front is thus re-established, Germany will fulfill her obligations. If not, we will continue to exploit our pledges, of which the production is increasing each day while the loss caused thereby to Germany, and above all, to German industry, is such that we have every chance of obtaining the settlement which we desire."

Settlement Before Election.

To another interrupter, who cried that these words simply were electioneering promises, the Premier replied there was every reason to hope the matter would be settled before the May election took place. But there must be no leaving the French position. The majority of the Chamber must keep true to national duty. Both at home and abroad true men who at first disapproved the occupation of the Ruhr had come forward to say France was right.

"If tomorrow we obtain our dues, it will be only because today we hold these guarantees in our hands."

This passage occurred in a long speech by the Premier on internal politics in reply to Deputy Mandel's attack last week.

Premier Praises the Experts.

PARIS, March 7 (Associated Press).—Premier Poincaré, in the Chamber of Deputies today, said there was every prospect that a settlement of reparations would be reached before the French elections in May. He praised the methods of the experts, declaring they had faithfully executed the mission given to them, which was to inquire into Germany's present financial capacity and how the budget might be balanced, rather than to consider a reduction of Germany's debt.

In answer to his adversaries' criticisms he stated categorically that the French would not give up the pledges seized in Germany's great industrial centre until the reparations payments were made in their entirety.

Referring to talk of revision of the Treaty of Versailles, the Premier said:

"Those who are working outside of France for revision of the Treaty of Versailles in favor of Germany hope for a change in the French policy through the forthcoming elections. In fact, if certain compromises are made and the elections are held under equivocal conditions, it is possible that a revisionist or revolutionary majority may be elected to the next Chamber."

This reference to a coalition of the Radicals, Republican Socialists and Socialists in the forthcoming campaign was greeted with jeers from the Left and applause from the rest of the Chamber.

The Chamber itself, M. Poincaré declared, must fix the limits of the majority from which the Government must derive its support, but, he added, in no case could that majority include either Royalists or Communists.

"France needs neither a dictatorship nor a monarchy; the republic came out of the war strengthened," Premier Poincaré said, interrupting an interpellation on the Government's internal policies by Deputy Mandel.

Premier Poincaré declared France had not recognized the Russian Soviets, "solely because at Genoa, when there was a question of doing so, the Soviets refused to recognize Russia's debts."

Defending the Ruhr operations, M. Poincaré replied to criticisms made by ex-Premier Briand during a recent political address, reminding the Chamber that it was Briand himself who threatened to take Germany "by the collar."

"In the Ruhr," added the Premier, "we have a guarantee the value of which every one recognizes, and we will hold it until the full payment by Germany of what she owes us."

Experts Making Progress.

The reparation experts now are engaged in individual studies of their recommendations on how to state in a general report the ideas on which they have virtually reached an agreement in principle. There is a general feeling in Reparation Committee circles that whatever dangers there may have been at the beginning of formulating a plan acceptable to all nations concerned are now passed, although the experts appreciate the difficulty of stating the general principles in such a way as to furnish adequate guarantees to the Allies, at the same time avoiding the creation of the popular impression in Germany that the plan imposes too heavy a burden on German sovereignty.

It is pointed out that the report is being based purely on economic principles and will be tantamount to arranging a series of collateral notes to the Allies for Germany's reparation debt. It is further explained that in all ordinary collateral notes there always are incorporated long paragraphs in fine print giving the creditor most minute safeguards againstt possible default. The difficulty, the experts say, is to make Germany realize that on a strict demonstration of honesty on her part will depend the degree of application of these safeguards.

At the same time the experts are trying to formulate a plan guaranteeing against ill-considered action on the part [illegible] of Germany's creditors, which might arise from suspicion and bad faith created through lack of complete knowledge at all times of Germany's real assets.

Such a plan, naturally, presupposes some method of supervision of Germany's resources. This supervision, the experts say, must be arranged with the least possible annoyance to Germany's economic machine and must not appear as an infringement of Germany's management of her own household. They believe this can be done, because, in their opinion, the European state of mind daily is becoming more ready to accept a real business settlement.

SOVIET PRESS DETAILS WORLD REVOLT SCHEME

Says Seven Organizations Are Working Under International, Boring in Everywhere.

Copyright, 1924, by The New York Times Company
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

RIGA, March 7.—The Soviet press on Wednesday was devoted almost entirely to the fifth anniversary of the Third International. Articles by leading Communists were freely printed, all on the theme of how to bring about universal revolution.

In the Izvestiya, Kolaroff, General Secretary of the International, describes seven auxiliary organizations, created and supported by the Third International for revolution abroad. These are the Red International Trade Union, working hand in hand with the Third International; the League of Communist Youth, politically controlled by the Committee of the Third International; an auxiliary instrument for the international struggle called the M. O. P. R., or Society for the Relief of Destitute Revolutionaries Abroad; the Cooperative Section, which aims to convert all workmen's cooperatives throughout the world into an instrument for revolution; the Sport International, which is to combine all forms of proletarian sport organizations for revolutionary strife; the Women's Section, working specially for the emancipation of Oriental Women, and the Peasants' International.

The majority of articles lay emphasis on the fact that the Russian Communist Party conducts all the affairs of the Third International. Writing in the Pravda, Clara Zetkin says:

"Indisputably, the Russian Communist Party conducts the affairs of all the world's proletarian organizations. The Bolshevist victory proclaimed socialism on Russian soil, but the revolution toward our beautiful goal must be continued on an international scale by the proletariat in highly developed capitalist countries."

Zinovief, speaking as Chairman of the Third International, referred to the statements made abroad that the Soviet Government was merely a branch of the Third International, and said:

"Such views do not daunt us. We know we ourselves are the Soviet Government in Moscow and in Leningrad, our home.'

He added that Communist progress was slower than they originally hoped. The Communists now swayed only one-sixth of the world, but in five years they would bring half the world under the Soviet sway.

The "Oriental specialist," Katajama, states that although the International was successfully sowing Communist seeds in Japan, China and Korea, they must more than hitherto devote attention to those countries, and also to India, Java, Egypt and Turkey.

In an editorial article, the Izvestiya of March 4 discusses the failure of the Rome disarmament conference, and declares that though Soviet Russia more than any power hates war, she must increase her fleet to 490,000 tone but will agree to 280,000 tons only if the Baltic and Black Seas are closed to all outside warships, and also if the Korean Gulf is demilitarized and the warships taken by General Wrangel and Admiral Stark returned to Russia.

It says Russia's interests require the creation of a strong air fleet.

STRESEMANN DEFIANT ON MILITARY CONTROL

Berlin Now Asks if Cabinet Will Back Him Up in Refusal of Allied Demands.

By THOMAS R. YBARRA.

Copyright, 1924, by The New York Times Company
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 7.—THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondet learns from an excellent source that Foreign Minister Stresemann, at a special session of the Cabinet this afternoon, stood pat on his declaration in the Reichstag yesterday that the note from the Council of Ambassadors regarding allied military control over Germany was impossible of acceptance by the German Government and would be rejected by it.

He made his Reichstag statement before receipt of the note in Berlin and the impression prevailed in some quarters here that Stresemann would get off his high horse after he had perused the note's actual text, and especially after he had read the highly uncomplimentary London and Paris press outburst on his defiant Reichstag utterances.

But there is good reason for the belief that this will not be the case since from the same source above mentioned it is learned that at the Cabinet meeting Stresemann went so far as to say that he would fight against the note even though his opposition should drive him from office.

An interesting question brought up by this is whether Chancellor Marx and other members of the Cabinet will back Stresemann in such a course, especially if, as freely predicted here, it will alienate British sympathies toward the German Government and incite France to further drastic measures against Germany.

The note of the Council of Ambassadors implies the existence in Germany of large supplies of arms and munitions and declares the Reichswehr and the Schupo have been greatly augmented recently, wherefore it demands that test investigationos be made to determine whether these things are true.

The extreme German Nationalists furiously oppose this, which may possibly be a strongly influencing factor in Stresemann's mind if he decides to continue his opposition to acceptance of the note. Recent activities of the Hitlerites in Munich certainly lend color to the allied theory that plenty of arms and munitions are hidden in Germany, likewise of the violent rage into which the extreme Nationalists fall at the very mention of renewed allied tours of investigation in Germany.

The bitterest of all comment on the matter is that of today's reactionary Deutsche Tageszeitung, which calls the projected military control "a gross breach of the treaty and a dishonoring challenge to any great nation."

It adds that the reason England backs France in the demand is because she hopes, by allowing severer military supervision over Germany, to make France abandon her schemes of occupying German territory, which are not to England's liking.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

for Thursday, paying no attention whatever to the expressed wishes of the Premier. There were only about fifteen Senators present when the day's work was finished and the question was raised when the Senate should meet again. One Senator proposed Tuesday, but another, less eager for work, asked that Thursday be fixed for the next meeting. Languidly the majority raised their hands in agreement with the second proposal.

Tomorrow, before the Finance Commission, the Premier will make his defense of the Government's bill. He may ask that the Senate be specially summoned earlier than the date fixed. Naturally the slight or oversight of the upper house has caused no small delight among those opposed to the Government and critical of its proposals.

Ascribed to "Foreign Offensive."

PARIS, March 7 (Associated Press).—The fall of the franc to another "lowest record" today was explained in financial circles, through a method of elimination, as due almost entirely to a "foreign offensive" against French money. It was pointed out at the Bank of France that no legitimate demand existed for foreign money in France today. The balance of trade had been in favor of this country for the past six months, it was contended, when the invisible exports in the form of money spent in France by tourists were taken into account.

There are no payments for imports falling due at this season, and if there were such, the French importers, it is remarked, enjoy abundant credit abroad, and are not required to produce cash for their purchases. Normally, according to the bank experts, the franc should improve under these conditions. If it does not, they contend, it is because of persistent efforts by international speculators to beat it down.

The method adopted by the speculators, according to experts here, is to discount to the limit Paris drafts in francs at three, six and nine months, at the same time dumping big blocks of francs on the Stock Exchanges in Amsterdam, London and elsewhere. It has been repeatedly charged that French banks have been lending themselves to these operations.

The world of French finance, it is declared, is without power to combat such an offensive at present owing to the fact that it has lost control of its own money through the possession abroad of more than one-third the entire circulation of the bank, which got out of the country through the expenditures in the Sarre, the Rhineland, the French colonies and the mandated territories, where it was picked up by the speculators.

ARABS PROCLAIM HUSSEIN AS CALIPH

King of the Hedjaz, Favored by Britain, Has Support of Mesopotamia and Transjordania.

MAY SPLIT ISLAMIC WORLD

Other Moslems' Opposition Makes Another Claimant to Mantle of the Prophet Probable.

JERUSALEM, March 7 (Associated Press).—King Hussein of the Hedjaz has accepted an offer of the Caliphate from the Moslems of Mesopotamia, Transjordania and the Hedjaz, who have proclaimed him Caliph, the Transjordanian Government states. It is expected, the statement adds, that other Arab-Moslem countries will follow the lead in selecting Hussein as head of the Islamic world.

The Arab nations were agitating in favor of the proclamation of King Hussein as Caliph for some time before the Turkish occupant of that high place was deposed by the Angora National Assembly. The Moslem world long has left to the Turks the maintenance of the succession to the Caliphate, but since the growth of the Nationalist movement in Turkey and the growing disposition in that country to break away from the old traditions, the other Mussulmans have begun to chafe under the conditions with which the Caliphate was surrounded.

Hussein Is Descendant of Mohammed.

LONDON, March 7 (Associated Press).—Because of the direct descent of King Hussein of the Hedjaz from the Prophet Mohammed, and other favoring factors, his designation as Caliph by the Arabs of his kingdom and the Moslems of Mesopotamia and Transjordania, which are ruled by his two sons, is regarded by British observers as likely to find acceptance in a large part of the Islamic world.

Not all of Islam is considered well disposed toward the Arabian monarch, however, and a bitter contest between the Arabian Moslems and some other sections of the faithful over the mantle of the Prophet is looked for in many quarters, which foresee an unbridgeable schism in the Church and the probability that two rival Caliphs may be found contesting for supremacy, as two Popes did far back in the history of the Christian Church.

The first sign of a split in the Oriental world was seen here in the order of the Angora Government warning the Turks against pilgrimages to Mecca and Medina, in Hussein's dominions, because it was declared they might be in great danger there. Then, since the expulsion of Abdul Medjid from Constantinople, claims to spiritual primacy have come from India, Egypt, Afghanistan, Morocco and other Oriental countries.

As to the eligibility of Hussein, in addition to his line of descent, the fact of his jurisdiction over the two holy cities, Mecca and Medina, respectively the birth and burial place of Mohammed, is pointed to as increasing his chances of being widely accepted as the successor of his great forebear, who thirteen centuries ago gave the world his message in the form of the Koran.

France to Be Reckoned With.

As far back as 1915, the British Government informed Hussein that it would not view his elevation to the Caliphate with displeasure; that it believed he would be acceptable to 70,000,000 Moslems under British tutelage in India, and would maintain the highest traditions and dignity of the Caliphate, which is regarded as the cornerstone of the Mohammedan religion.

What repercussions the designation of Hussein as titular head of a religion which embraces 300,000,000 adherents will have outside the Arab countries of Asia is doubtful. Egypt, which still recalls the days of the spiritual and temporal power of its own Sultan, Mehmet Ali, is not likely to recognize him. Moreover King Fuad himself is known to cherish aspirations for the Caliphate, and his difficulties with Hussein over possession of the holy carpet are recent history.

France's 60,000,000 Moslem subjects also will have to be reckoned with. There is a movement on foot in France to give the deposed Abdul Medjid asylum in Tunis, with the prospect of making him commander of the faithful, with spiritual sovereignty over all Mohammedans. It is not explained how this would harmonize with the views of the Sultan of Morocco, who himself entertains Caliphal ambitions.

In any event, if a Caliph sponsored by the French is appointed, it is contended that any attempt by the British to dominate the Islamic world through Hussein, who is regarded as a protégé of the British Government, would thus be offset.

ROME, March 7.—Italy desires to act as host to the deposed Caliph, according to the Messaggero today. The newspaper urges the Italian Government to offer the former Caliph a palace, its protection and its hospitality.

"The Caliph expelled from Turkey is a man without a country," says the newspaper. "Italy should offer her hospitality to him immediately. Quickly proffered to the wanderer, this would accord with the national tradition and would also be an act of political wisdom. Italy is the natural gateway between the East and the West, between Islam and Christianity, and hospitality offered the Caliph would create a Mussulman nucleus in contact with Latin culture, as well as initiate that rapprochement of the Mediterranean races which Italy needs, more than ever, to fulfill her national aims."

GENEVA, March 7.—Abdul Medjid, the deposed Caliph, accompanied by his family, arrived at Territet, on the north shore of Lake Geneva, tonight.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 7.—General Ismet Pasha who resigned Tuesday, has reconstructed his Cabinet as follows: General Ismet Pasha, Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs; General Kiazim Pasha, Defence; Ferid Bey, Interior; Abdul Halik Bey, Finance; Vassif Bey, Education; Nejati Bey, Justice; Zekkai Bey, Agriculture; Jelal Bey, Reconstruction; Hassan Fehmi Bey, Commerce; Dr. Refik Bey, Health, and Suleiman Sirri Bey Minister of Public Works.

The Department of Public Economy has been divided into those of agriculture and Commerce, and the chief of staff, Marshal Fevzi Pasha, and Hoja Mustapha Fevzi Effendi, Minister for Religious Affairs no longer enjoy cabinet rank.

The portfolios assigned to Vassif Bey, who took a leading part in the debate on the bill for abolishing the Caliphate, and Nejati Bey are taken as showing a determination that the two departments, which have recently been much in the public notice, shall fall into the hands of noted protagonists of the ideal of a lay republic. The first step toward unification of schools has already been taken, and, in the future, students wishing to adopt a military or religious career will go to ordinary primary and secondary schools before specializing.

According to the statements by the Vali of Constantinople and Chief of Police this morning, Caliph Abdul Medjid first refused to obey the order to leave Turkey, and half an [illegible] was necessary before h[illegible].

The Princes and Princesses of the [illegible] showed such alacrity to depart that sleeping [illegible] on yesterday's Simplon-Orient Express were insufficient and some of them have had to go on to Bulgaria by ordinary trains in order to take the express on the following day.

France Does Not Favor Hussein.

PARIS, March 7.—In French Colonial circles some well-informed observers in close touch with Mohammedan questions express a certain amount of alarm over developments which appear likely to arise from the banishment of the Caliph. Some of them fear that if the British give support to the candidacy of King Hussein of the Hedjaz trouble may arise which may finally spread from the British to the French zone.

While France is not likely to abandon its avowed policy of according full religious freedom to Moslems, and put up any rival candidate officially, there no doubt are other rulers whom France would rather see wearing the Prophet's mantle than King Hussein—who, with his sons, has never shown himself very friendly toward France.

King Hussein, who claims direct descent from the Prophet, of course has many good claims to succeed Abdul Medjid. But one thing is strongly against him, on the basis of the Mohammedan tradition, namely, that he is not an independent ruler, but is under the protection of a great power. In fact, no Mohammedan ruler appears to actually fulfill the desired condition. This is not an insuperable difficulty, however, for arrangements are always possible where religious dogma is concerned.

So far as Morocco is concerned, the event is not likely to have the slightest effect upon Moslem opinion. Moslems of Western Maghreb, or Land of the Setting Sun, look upon the Sultan of Morocco as the religious head. But in Eastern Maghreb—Algeria and Tunisia—hundreds of thousands of Mohammedans bow to the Caliph at Constantinople. The same is true of the Sudan, Nigeria and other Moslem parts of Africa.

PLAN FIGHT TO SAVE PARK FROM INVASION

Three Civic Associations Will Try to Block City Plan for Art Centre Building.

COURT ACTION THREATENED

Citizens Union to Move if the Enabling Bill Is Passed, Declares Wallstein.

SEE OTHER ENCROACHMENTS

Projects Proposed for Central Park, if Carried Out, Would Show Mass of Structures.

Three of the leading civic organizations of New York City disclosed yesterday that they would fight to a finish the plan to build a $15,000,000 music and art center at the southern end of Central Park, approved on Thursday by the Board of Estimate by a vote of 13 to 3. The organizations are the Parks and Playgrounds Association, the Citizens' Union and the City Club.

Joseph Haag, Assistant to the Mayor, who with City Chamberlain Philip Berolzheimer developed the plan, said that the required enabling bill would be introduced into the Legislature probably next week. They were instructed by the Board of Estimate to confer with Corporation Counsel George P. Nicholson regarding the draft of the measure.

Leonard Wallstein of the Citizen's Union said: "The first hurdle the city has to jump is to get the enabling legislation passed. We shall try to prevent it from getting that legislation. But if it should get through the bill authorizing the use of the park site, we intend to test the constitutionality of that measure."

Mr. Wallstein said that the Citizens Union had received many telephone calls from park lovers asking what efforts were to be made to block the contemplated park encroachment. Scores of prominent men and women said they would back the Citizens Union in its fight, he said.

George Gordon Battle, President of the Parks and Playgrounds Association, has called a meeting of the Board of Directors of that organization for the week after next to discuss what course to take to safeguard Central Park from the threatened invasion.

It was William B. Roulstone, Chairman of the Parks Committee of that association, who was counsel for William H. Williams in the action which blocked the lease of the old Arsenal as an exhibition building to the Safety Institute of America. The decision of the Court of Appeals in that case recognized the original purposes of the founders of Central Park, and among otoher things said:

"Central Park, including the Arsenal Building, was acquired under acts of the Legislature impressed with a trust to be used as a public square, or park, for purposes exclusively of pleasure, exercise, amusement or ornament. * * * A park is a pleasure ground set apart for recreation of the public to promote its health and enjoyment."

Raymond G. Ingersoll, Secretary of the City Club, was quoted as saying that the matter of the Park invasion would be taken up at a meeting of the trustees next Tuesday. "Our committee, under Frank B. Williams, has opposed placing the Centre in Central Park from the very beginning," he said. "Although this case does exactly coincide with that of the plan to put up a safety museum in the park, which was prevented by the decision of the Court of Appeals, there are other features which may bar it."

Thomas Adams, director of the Sage Foundation's Regional Plan for New York and Environs, said that the correct interpretation was placed on his letter to City Chamberlain Berolzheimer when it was construed as a warning that the six-acre site in the south end of Central Park might prove entirely inadequate for the needs of the music and art centre within a few years.

"We believe," he said, "that this whole question of music and art centre should be the subject of a comprehensive study, and that such a study likewise ought to include the future of Central Park as a whole in its relation to the art centre."

Open Way for Other Invasions.

Everything from a permanent circus tent to a cemetery for the distinguished dead has been proposed for Central Park. Park lovers consider the proposed music and art centre as one of the most dangerous of the many proposed invasions, because the plan itself has met with general approval, if carried out at another site. The selection of a Central Park site is regarded as an entering wedge for other development schemes there and in other parks.

It was pointed out that the expansion of the music and art centre would inevitably mean taking more Park acreage, and that the way would be cleared for other worthy projects to demand equal recognition in the distribution of park sites.

Central Park would have been obliterated within a generation if the city had acquiesced in all the plans of enthusiasts who desire to appropriate its beautiful woodland and meadow landscapes for their particular enterprises. The park invaders began their march on the city's garden spot—the central theme of the whole park system of the metropolis—more than sixty years ago.

Twenty years ago an artist, at the suggestion of William B. Van Ingen, landscape architect, who knows every square foot of the ground in Central Park as laid out by the original landscape experts, executed a picture of Central Park as it would look with all the stadiums, race tracks, cathedrals and monuments of every description, if they had been developed. The artist soon filled every inch of space in the park, and had left over enough encroachments to fill another park one-third the size of Central Park.

No End to Park Projects.

Since that picture was visualized there have been proposed enough new encroachments to use all the park space over again. Nearly a score of those projects were launched in the time of the present City Administration, but practically all were rejected until the Board of Estimate last Thursday voted 13 to 3—Controller Craig casting the only votes for the opposition—to set aside approximately six acres of land in Central Park at Fifty-ninth Street and Seventh Avenue for the music and art centre site.

One of the most formidable proposals launcheh in recent months was that of the Transit Commission. The proposal was to reroute under the west side of Central Park the proposed Washington Heights subway extension, approved by the Board of Estimate last Summer. The Transit Commission gave serious consideration to the rerouting of the subway through Central Park for its entire length at the suggestion of the Broadway Association.

In advancing the idea the Broadway Association argued that Central Park West, under which the subway extension was originally routed, carried an important arterial system which could not be disturbed without great expense and without danger of interrupting water, gas, electric light and other services. The association estimated that more than $2,500,000 would be saved by putting the subway through Central Park, and it was further proposed that the city might effect economies by building an open-cut line. The project was persistently fought by park defenders, and finally it was abandoned.

Wanted Memorial There.

Another project to use an appreciable amount of park space was launched when the Board of Estimate in July, 1920, voted an appropriation of $600,000 to carry out the plan of the Mayor's Committee on Permanent War Memorial.

That plan was originated by memorial advocates back in 1917, when sentiment was strongly in favor of numerous war memorials. The first plan for the memorial included a wading pool and a fountain, a swimming pool and a stadium, to use a large part of the thirty-seven acres that would be released when the city abandoned the lower reservoir of the old Croton water system.

The designs for the permanent war memorial were revised several times after they were submitted to the Municipal Art Society. Early in the Winter of 1923 it was disclosed that most of the Coney Island features of the project had been eliminated, and that the plan was to be developed with an arch substituted for the fountain and with a series of placid lagoons for the summing pool. The plan as revised also made away with a proposed cinder path.

Soon after the war memorial plan was launched in 1917 the Liberty Loan Committee in this district came forward with a plan of trench building in Central Park. The idea was suggested by the exhibition of a captured German submarine. The Liberty Loan Committee desired to give actual demonstrations of trench warfare to stimulate the flotation of one of the final issues of Liberty bonds.

In May, 1921, Dr. John A. Harriss, Deputy Police Commissioner in charge of traffic problems, announced that he had worked out a plan for a subsurface garage under the southern end of Central Park for the parking of automobiles during theatre hours. He proposed a similar scheme for Bryant Park.

In 1922 the Society of Sculptors made a drive to get space in Central Park for an outdoor exhibition of sculpture.

Planned Mitchel Memorial.

In the same year plans were drawn for a memorial to the late Major John Purroy Mitchel, formerly Mayor of New York, who fell to his death while training as an army aviator in the war. The plan included a driveway connecting the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the American Museum of Natural History. An elaborate entrance for one end of the proposed driveway featured an arch designed by Donn Barber, architect, one of the close friends of the late Mayor Mitchel.

A site for the United States Weather Bureau on the plaza of the Belvedere was sought in 1922. And in the same year the city started the operation of forty sight-seeing buses in Central Park.

March, 1923, was a particularly productive month for proposed park encoachments. Park Commissioner Francis D. Gallatin issued a permit for a taxi stand just outside the Central Park wall at Fifth Avenue and Seventy-second Street. The stand aroused objection on the part of Park defenders and the permit later was revoked.

In the same month the Daily Food Alliance started an agitation for a model farm, where they hoped to give the children and adults of the city an idea of the production of food products.

On March 15, Elkan Naumberg announced his gift of $100,000 for a bandstand to be built on the Mall of Central Park. Ten days later the City Park Department turned over the bridle path to the Amateur Athletic Union three afternoons a week for men in training for the Olympic Games.

In October, 1923, the Transit Commission started to re-route the subway under the Park. In December, 1923, an appropriation of $50,000 was granted to Grover A. Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, to establish a municipal radio broadcasting station. After experimenting with different types of transmitters on the top of the Municipal Building, where conditions were unsatisfactory for 500 watt transmitters, Commissioner Whalen began a move to set the radio plant on top of the workshops just north of the Eighty-sixth Street transverse roadway. He has just abandoned the Park site for the radio because a way has been found to make transmitters work on the roof of the Municipal Building.

Sought Park for Traffic Relief.

At the end of 1923, Borough President Julius Miller announced plans for the development of a new driveway 1,000 feet long to connect Sixth Avenue with the system of driveways in the southern end of Central Park. For his project he required $60,000. As an argument he said that the removal of the Sixth Avenue elevated spur from Fifty-third Street to Fifty-ninth Street would open Sixth Avenue to a greater volume of traffic, and would make the connecting roadway highly desirable.

Although the city has now voted to appropriate approximately six acres of the Park for the municipal art and music centre, it included in its jubilee exposition, showing the accomplishments of the present Administration, a map of Central Park filled with elevations of many of the projects for which park space had been sought and denied. The picture was submitted by the Parks and Playgrounds Association.

The picture showed that if the various persons who had sought to invade Central Park in the last sixty years for projects, in themselves often worthy, but more often grotesque and frequently purely commercial, had their way, there would be nothing now left of the Park except a few walks and drives, and a lake on which steamboats and full-rigged ships would be plying.

Some of the Proposed Invasions.

There have been thirty different plans to invade Central Park, which include the folowing:

Street railway (before 1880).
Steamer and ship on lake (before 1880).
Cemetery for distinguished persons (before 1880).
Circus tents (before 1880).
People's cathedral (before 1880).
Churches for all sects (early '80s).
Exposition building (1880-81).
Asphalt pavement for skating, lower end of Central Park (1880-81).
Merchandise exposition building (late '80s).
Grant's tomb (in '90s).
Speedway around Park (1892).
Proposed cutting of park into building plots (1904).
Academy of Design (1909).
Opera house, baths, pools (1910).
Playground for noisy sports (1911).
Outdoor theatre of 100,000 seats (1911).
Straightening of walks and drives to make park like a checkerboard (1911).
Stadium on reservoir site (1912).
Marionette theatre (1912).

Since 1918 the following plans have been proposed in addition to those mentioned:

Landing station for aviators.
Lenox Library Building.
Institute for Safety.
Rice Memorial stadium.

"The case of Central Park," says the Parks and Playgrounds Association, "only illustrates what is going on all the while. With the population increasing from 2,500,000 in 1898 to nearly 6,000,000 in 1923, and with predictions of, say, 25,000,000 in 1960, it is more necessary than ever to safeguard our parks and breathing spaces."

CITY IN RADIO FIGHT; $50,000 FOR A PLANT

Will Be a Real Broadcasting Station, Says Whalen, and Will Oppose A. T. & T.

WEAF OFFICIAL REPLIES

Harkness Denies That Company Ever Refused Applications to Use Patented Apparatus.

Grover A. Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, opened a new phase of the battle for the air yesterday when he went before the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and obtained an appropriation of $50,000 with which to construct a municipal radio broadcasting station. He also was instrumental in having Corporation Counsel George P. Nicholson instructed to appear beforee the Federal Trade Commission at Washington to tell all the city officials know about alleged attempts of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company to create a monopoly of the air. After the meeting of the Board of Estimate, when he was asked what effect the passage eof the resoiution and the appropriation would have, Mr. Whalen replied:

"It means that the city now can go in and establish a real broadcasting station. It means that we are throwing down the gantlet and there will be a fight. The Corporation Counsel is empowered to study the subject and go to Washington, if necessary, to combat the monopolizing by the A. T. and T. Company. It means that we will not have to take our religion, our education or our politics from the radio trust. It means the broadcasting station we will erect will be as powerful as WEAF, controlled by the A. T. and T. It means that the people of the city and the country at large will be able to listen in to a station that is not operated for commercial gain."

Telephone Company's Denial.

The telephone company was not slow in making a reply. In the office of W. E. Harkness, Assistant Vice President in charge of broadcasting, with another high official of the company present and corroborating, Mr. Harkness said:

"We have never yet refused to license any broadcasting station which applied to us for permission to use our patented appliances."

"Mr. Whalen says you have refused him," said a reporter.

"Just try to get a look at Mr. Whalen's correspondence files," said Mr. Harkness. "If you succeed, you will find that not once, but several times, we have quoted him figures for erecting a broadcasting station for the city. We have never refused his general proposition.

"We have, however, tried to give him some advice. Broadcasting is our business and we think we know something about it. Mr. Whalen wanted to broadcast from the top of the Municipal Building. We told him that was impractical. Then he wanted to put it on the top of Brooklyn Bridge. We advised against that too. We have ourselves found that on account of the great amount of steel in this section of the city, it is almost impossible to obtain anything like a maximum amount of efficiency.

"We also advised him that it would be much cheaper to rent our station from time to time, than to make an initial investment of $50,000 and spend a like amount each year for maintenance, which will have to be done for a city plant."

Independent Makes Complaint.

F. L. Dane, President of the North American Company, against which the A. T. and T. had filed an infringement suit on Thursday in the Federal Court in Newark, came to Mr. Whalen's aid yesterday. He also charged that the telephone company was seeking a monopoly of broadcasting and in addition that it was endeavoring to interfere with his concern's experiments to find a wav of broadcasting over electric light and power lines. In connection with the suit brought against his company, Mr. Dane issued a statement in which he said:

"Yes, we have been sued by the A. T. and T. Co. Why? Probably for the reason stated by Grover Whalen, as we are not aware that we are infringing any valid A. T. and T. patents. They apparently want to control the light and power lines as well as the air.

"One of our subsidiaries, Wired Radio, Inc., has been experimenting with broadcasting over electric light and power wires on Staten Island. This does not in any way interfere with the use of the air. We have paid for a license under the patents of General George O. Squier, but he has been obliged to sue the A. T. and T. Co. to protect its rights.

"We tried to buy a broadcasting set for our purposes from the American Telephone and Telegraph Company or its subsidiary, Western Electric Company, but were unable to do so. We also asked them to lease us a telephone line running to Staten Island for the purpose of operating from a studio in New York. This they declined to do. We are curious to see if the Public Service Commission agrees with this view.

Said Rates Were Too Low.

"Incidentally, Mr. Harkness of the A. T. and T. Co. advised our representative that they would furnish no facilities to any one, but would expect to control everything from the entertainment to the customer wherever wired wireless was involved. He criticized our proposed rates as being ridiculously low.

"Wired Radio's work has thus far been entirely experimental for the purpose of developing a radio broadcast service over electric light and power lines which can be of maximum service to the user and supplied at minimum cost. Like electric light and power service, we believe that such a radio broadcast service is an important public service which should be supplied at a reasonable charge, instead of at patent monopoly prices.

"We do not propose to infringe any valid patent of the A. T. and T. Co. or of any one else, but, if the purpose of this suit by the A. T. and T. Co. is to enjoin the perfection of such a service, it will be disappointed, because our work along these lines will continue; if it has in mind supplying a similar duplicated service over telephone lines, we have no fear of competition which is based on any idea of capitalizing a patent monopoly."

Houston Thompson, Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, said in Washington yesterday thta every complaint against the A. T. and T. mentioned in Mr. Whalen's letter to the commission was covered in the action the commission has instituted against the telephone company and others. Complaint has already been filed against the companise named in the action and their request for an extension of time until March 27 to file an answer has been granted. When they have answered, the commission will begin to take testimony and hearings will doubtless be held in New York as well as other places.

Seven Corporations Involved.

The concerns against which the commission is proceeding are the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the General Electric, the Western Electric, the International Radio and Telegraph Company, the United Fruit Company, the Wireless Specialty Apparatus Company and the Radio Corporation of America.

From officials of radio concerns other than the A. T and T., it was learned yesterday that there was general belief of the correctness of the facts set forth in yesterday's NEW YORK TIMES, which showed that the telephone company has embarked on a campaign to control radio broadcasting and put it on a commercial basis.

The present basis of the oindustry, one man connected with a large radio manufacturing company pointed out, is a pooling of patents through the Radio Corporation of America. Without the interchange of patents, through a combined licensing system, the industry as a whole would not have been possible, this man said. He likened the situation to that which prevailed in the automobile industry, when it was found that no one could get along by himself because he needed some of the other man's devices to supplement his own and make possible the manufacture of a complete car.

A. T. and T. Got Broadcasting.

Consequently, through the Radio Corporation, the various phases of the industry agreed on a system of inter-licensing each other so that broadcasting and receiving could be carried on. The A. T. and T. got the broadcasting end of the business in this agreement, it was said, because its patents and its business were along that line. The other companies got the manufacture of receiving sets. The A. T. and T. is the only concern that can control broadcasting. It permits the other concerns to broadcast for their own uses, but they might not sell broadcasting apparatus, nof may they charge for broadcasting service. Under its franchises as a telephone company for transmission through electricity, the A. T. and T. is allowed to do that and also to charge for advertising service. On the other hand, the A. T. and T. ma ynot sell receiving sets, for this part of the industry is restricted to the other companies in the patent pool arrangement.

An official of one of the companies associated with the Radio Corporation said yesterday there was no doubt in his mind the A. T. and T. could entirely control broadcasting. He said that through its patents it could shut out any station it desired, or at least compel it to take out a license to operate from it.

The other companies in the agreement, he said, could not be prevented from broadcasting as long as they confined themselves to non-commercial service, but they could be prevented from selling broadcasting apparatus or from making any charge for their service.

WJAZ CHARGES MONOPOLY.

Listeners May Expect "Collection Can," Says Chicago Man.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Contradictory interpretations of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's efforts in New York courts to close other broadcasting stations were made here tonight.

"It's a case of trying to tie up the air to such an extent that eventually a collection can will be passed even among the home radio fans who listen in," said E. F. McDonald Jr., head of the WJAZ station at Edgewater Beach.

"We're simply protecting our patents and the public," said H. B. Thayer, President of the A. T. & T.

"The A. T. & T. simply is trying to obtain a monopoly and frankly admits that such is its object," said Mr. McDonald. "Its attorneys are quoted publicly as saying 'that's what patents are for.' The object is to force every broadcasting station—there are now 523 of them—to pay tribute to the A. T. & T.'s own stations or go out of business. Then there would be some forty stations left. The A. T. & T. would control every one.

"An example is shown by the A. T. & T.'s attitude toward the wet and dry radio referendum to be held Saturday night from Station WJAZ. The company refused to string wires into the station for the Western Union or for the Postal Telegraph Company because it knew the wires were part of the broadcasting stunt."

"BOOTLEG" RADIO TUBES.

Dealer Held on Charge of Misrepresenting Apparatus.

Harold Hymans, head of the Micadyne Radio Company, was held in $1,000 bail for trial in Special Sessions after a hearing yesterday before Magistrate George W. Simpson in the Commercial Frauds Court on a charge that he sold "bootleg" radio tubes on the representation they were micadon tubes, manufactured by the Dubilier Condenser and Radio Corporation. Harry R. Vandeventer, Vice President of the Dubilier corporation, appeared as complainant against Hymans, who denied the charge.

Howard F. Mulligan, counsel for the Dubilier corporation, said that Hymans had been ordered by Judge Bondy in the Federal Court to show cause next Tuesday why an injunction should not be issued against Hymans to restrain him from manufacturing, selling and advertising the imitation of the Dubilier tube. He told Magistrate Simpson that the micadon tube was the invention of William Dubilier, founder of the corporation, and that patents obtained by it embrace nearly all the condensers used in broadcasting. Assistant District Attorney Max Salomon said:

"The matter involved is a serious and important one. Thousands of persons, without extensive technical knowledge, have become radio users, and are spending millions each year in buying parts for their sets. By far the greater proportion of them are in the amateur class, and they are easily defrauded by being sold bootleg imitations as genuine standard parts of reputable manufactures."

RADIO BROADCASTS TALKS 7,000 MILES

San Francisco, Hastings, Neb., East Pittsburgh, Schenectady, New York and London, England. It was estimated that the radio waves shot out from these stations covered 1,500,000 square miles.

Participating in the demonstration were three American and one British company. The American companies were the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, the General Electric Company and the Radio Corporation of America. The British company was the British Broadcasting Company. The stations operating were WJZ in New York, WGY in Schenectady, KDKA at East Pittsburgh, KFKX at Hastings, Neb., and KGO at San Francisco. The stations under the direction of the British Broadcasting Company in Great Britain used Station 2AC in Manchester as the pick-up unit.

Hearers Eight Hours Apart in Time.

It was 10:30 o'clock when the toastmaster, Ralph H. Howes, President of the Technology Club in New York, introduced the first speaker. Radio fans in San Francisco were tuning in to listen at 7:30 P. M. Pacific time, while the British listeners were listening for the words in this city at 3:30 A. M. Greenwich mean time. Eight hours difference in time separated those who were at their sets waiting for the faraway words. Agents were posted throughout the country ready to dispatch a flash telegraph message to the diners reporting on the audibility of the test.

Microphones were placed in the main ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria under the direction of engineering experts of the participating companies, who have been working for months in an effort to bring to perfection and into practical use the invention of Mr. Conrad.

"The microphones," said one of the officials, "on the speakers' table led directly to Station WJZ, which transmitted the entertainment on its regular wave length of 455 meters. Connected with WJZ's amplifying apparatus was WGY at Schenectady. WGY transmitted the progress simultaneously with WJZ on 385 meters. KDKA, the Westinghouse's pioneer station at East Pittsburgh, the heart of the relaying system, then intercepted WGY's waves on special receiving apparatus. The received signals were then transmitted through two stations or transmitting units, one broadcasting a strongly amplified repetition of the original signal on a 94-meter relay wave and the other on the customary wave length of 326 meters.

"Listeners within the range of KDKA then listened on the longer wave length, while the shorter wave length serviced the Westinghouse repeating station at Hastings, Neb., and Station 2AC of the Metropolitan-Vickers Company at Manchester, England.

"In England, the Metropolitan-Vickers Station was linked with its seven sister stations, and immediately the KDKA was picked up repeated the program simultaneously all over Great Britain. Hastings, too, was scheduled to broadcast the same signal, but also relayed it to Station KGO in San Francisco, which station also picked up the broadcast waves and repeated them on a different wave length than the one on which they were picked up."

In speaking of the test, Vice-President Davis of the Westinghouse Company, who spoke before the reports on the test had begun to filter in, said that in the repeating feature alone—the relaying by air from station to station—he saw a realization of his prophecy made two years ago regarding the ultimate in radio broadcasting. Mr. Davis then predicted that the time would come and soon when a few powerful stations would serve numerous small repeating stations throughout the country.

See Powerful Aid to Peace.

In developing the uses to which the radio "blanketing" of the world might be devoted, officials said it was a powerful aid to peace. They pointed out that a closer and more harmonious relationship between the peoples of America and those of Europe would be likely to result.

The listeners-in, assigned to flash word to the dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria on the success or failure of the test, were stationed at fifteen points throughout the country. Arrangements were made whereby officials of the British Broadcasting Company were to dispatch a radio on the results of the overseas transmission.

The speakers at the dinner, who did not begin their remarks until almost 11 o'clock, were Major Gen. J. G. Harbord, President of the Radio Corporation of America; Calvert Townley, Assistant to President of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company; Dr. S. W. Stratton, President of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Frank A. Vanderlip, former President of the National City Bank of New York, and David Sarnoff, Vice President of the Radio Corporation of America.

The musical program, which preceded the speakers, included Cecelia Hansen, violinist; Mabel Garrison, soprano, and Mario Chamlee, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

MOORS HARRYING OUTPOSTS

Meanwhile London Gets More Rumors of Disaster to the Spaniards.

Copyright, 1924, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MADRID, March 7.—The Ministry of War has received news that a convoy under the escort of 300 men has entered Tizziazza, an outpost southwest of Melilla, bringing up a ton and a half of water. Biscuits and other provisions and coal are to follow by the next column.

Severe fighting preceded this successful operation. The day began with a clear sky, but a heavy fog descended which made conditions extraordinarily difficult. The third battalion of the Foreign Legion, unable to dislodge the Moors from the commanding heights of Ben Medien by gunfire, charged and cleared them with the bayonet. The activity of the tribesmen has now greatly diminished.

The improvement in the Spanish positions has been made at a loss of some sixty men. The first of the three brigades ordered to reinforce the troops in Morocco, which has been delayed owing to heavy seas, has disembarked at Melilla.

MELILLA, Morocco, March 7 (Associated Press).—The Spanish operations, intnded as "punishment" of the Moors for their recent repeated attacks on the advanced lines of Spanish troops, will probably have to be postponed for several days, because of the terrific storm raging along the coast. This is preventing debarkation of reinforcements and materials arriving from Spain.

Meanwhile the General Staff is preparing its plan of operation, which calls for various columns starting from different bases behind the front line. Small columns are proceeding daily to observe the movements of the Moors, who, however, are difficult to locate, owing to the broken nature of the ground.

In groups varying in strength, the Moors form a semicircle around the Spanish front line stretching from northward of Tizziazza to southward of Izenlasen. The nature of the ground makes communications extremely hard, and there are ravines and rocks which afford the tribesmen excellent shelter and means of retirement when pressed.

Further north, near the seacoast, the Moors are most active in the neighborhood of Tifarun, the garrison of which is compelled constantly to use artillery to repel attacks from numerous groups of tribesmen who are constructing field fortifications from which to attack convoys and small parties leaving the fort on relief service. There is strong sentiment among the army officers against maintaining the advanced line as now constituted, unless operations with the object of capturing Alhucemas are intended.

On nearly every occasion that a convoy proceeds toward Tizziazza with the purpose of revictualing the garrison opposition is encountered, and after dusk it is always dangerous for the soldiers to quit their positions, even if only to go a few yards. Consequently casualties are of constant occurrence.

LONDON, March 7.—Reports that the Spanish forces in Morocco have met with disaster in their campaign against the rebels continue to arrive from Tangier. The correspondent there of The Daily Mail says Riffian tribesmen operating from Tizziazza toward Melilla, the Spanish base, have brought down four Spanish airplanes. The tribesmen are commanded by Kaid Ali Benamor, who lived some time in America, whence he returned a year ago.

The Tangier correspondent of The Daily Express reports that the railway station at Melilia was set afire by rebel aviators.

SCORES PROHIBITION JESTS.

London Daily News Warns England to Take Our Dry Law Seriously.

Copyright, 1924, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 7.—"The real interest in Sir Auckland Geddes's speech at the Pilgrims dinner," says The Daily News, editorially, "is the open confession by the British Ambassador that American prohibition must be taken seriously. There is no question that Sir Auckland is right in this. The habit of alternately jeering at American prohibition as ridiculous and denouncing it as a pernicious attack upon liberty is really very dangerous. It is a serious menace to the good relations of the two countries, and it is, at this time of day, inexcusable.

"We have clearly to understand in this country that there is practically no chance at all in our lifetime of the Eighteenth Amendment being repealed. We have also to understand that a jesting conception of prohibition as mere organized hypocrisy in America is farcical imagination, which will bear no examination at all so far as the country at large is concerned.

"It is clear that, making the largest conceivable allowance for evasion of the law, there must have been an enormous reduction in drinking. Our total export of whisky is round about 1,500,000 gallons. If it all went to America, and were all successfully smuggled, it would be a drop in the ocean of prohibition figures. The only real effect of this sordid traffic has been to anger respectable American opinion against England."

TO USE MORRIS PRESS.

Kelmscott Machine Will Print Plates for the Grolier Club.

Frederic W. Goudy announced yesterday at the Anderson Galleries that the printing press which is on exhibition there, and which he recently acquired in England, would be taken to Marlborough, N. Y., after another week, to be added to the equipment of The Village Press.

The machine, which was used by William Morris at his Kelmscott Press, Hammersmith, London, in the printing of fifty-four books, will be utilized in the production of "Three Essays by Augustine Birrell" for the Grolier Club of New York. The plates have already been prepared for the work and the printing will be started as soon as the press arrives. Mr. Goudy plans to have the work finished early in April.

EARTHQUAKE IN ENGLAND.

It Frightens Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire, but Does No Damage.

LONDON, March 7.—An earthquake shook large sections of Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire last night and early today, without doing any appreciable damage.

The tremors shook the whole Alfreton district of Derbyshire a little before 11 o'clock last evening. House furnishings were rocked by the shocks, and the alarmed inhabitants rushed into the streets. Shocks were also felt early today in Northern Nottinghamshire.

At Sutton in Ashfield chimneys were toppled over by the tremors.

A policeman at Mansfield said his house shook so much he was nearly thrown from his chair.

FRENCH CRITICIZE BRITISH NAVAL PLAN

Profess to See Peril to Them in the Increase of the Mediterranean Fleet.

MANOEUVRE BASE ASSAILED

Temps Calls Choice of Balearic Centre, Between France and Colonies, Unfortunate.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Copyright, 1924, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, March 7.—In England's increase in her Mediterranean fleet, in her coming manoeuvres off the French coast, "between France and her African colonies," and in her endeavor to obtain several Dodecanese Islands, the French critics find material for an answer to Premier MacDonald's indictment of what Englishmen regard as France's militaristic policy, which he expressed so forcibly in his recent note to Premier Poincaré.

If the English are worried, the French say, because France keeps a great army and big air fleet, with Germany powerless, what must the French think about the increase of the British fleet and the growth of the British air service.

The Temps tonight dwells on the increase of the British Mediterranean fleet and the additional £2,000,000 for aviation, and it sees significance in the fact that the British manoeuvres will be executed around the Balearic Islands, "which lie on the route between France and Algeria and Morocco." The Temps think that between the beginning of 1922 and the beginning of 1924 there has been a change in England's attitude. In 1922 she was offering France a treaty guarantee; now she parades her ships between France and the French colonies, and this paper thinks England is not traveling the path of common sense. It pays sarcastic tribute to Premier MacDonald's statement that England is building five new cruisers to give work to the unemployed.

The Temps also charges that the failure of the recent naval armament discussion in Rome was due to the attitude of England in trying to obtain a hold on the Dodecanese Islands, now held by Italy.

Charges have frequently been made in Paris that, in promoting the semblance of an accord in the Mediterranean between Italy and Spain, England sought to prevent an agreement between France and Italy, the only two nations whose combined fleets could rival the British naval power in the Mediterranean.

If one may judge from comment of the French press, the Paris writers have difficulty in reconciling the pacifist declarations of Mr. MacDonald with what they regard as the military preparations of England. In the circumstances they seem to think England should keep quiet about the French Army.

Largest Concentration Since 1919.

LONDON, March 7.—A series of British naval manoevers which will rank amon gthe most important carried out since the war will begin in the neighborhood of the Balearic Islands on Monday. The Balearics are situated near the sea route from France to Morocco and the Paris press has indulged in some comment on coincidence of these manoevers with the increase in the British air estimates.

Never since 1919 has it been possible to bring together so large a proportion of the full strength of both fleets for purposes of practice. A year ago the Mediterranean ships were at Constantinople, Chanak, Smyrna or other places in the Near East, owing to the disturbed condition of affairs in Turkey. In 1922 the situation was very similar, except that most of the light cruisers were off Crete. Now improved conditions permit all the battleships and all but one of the light cruisers under the command of Admiral Sir Osmond Brock to join forces with the Atlantic ships under Admiral Sir John Michael de Robeck.

LONDON, March 7.—The first meeting of the Anglo-Russian commission to settle the differences between the two countries will take place late this month or early in April, it was learned in authoritative circles today.

It is expected that Premier MacDonald, as Foreign Secretary, will preside over the joint commission, which will meet in St. James's Palace, but definite arrangements have not been made.

There is no confirmation in Government circles of Berlin and Riga reports that M. Rykoff, successor to Lenin, is on the way here.

LABOR WILL ENLARGE BRITISH AIR FORCE

Ten Squadrons Will Be Added for Home Defense in the Next Two Years.

Copyright, 1924, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 7.—Steady development of the British Home Air Defense force is provided for in the estimates for the Air Department issued today.

At present there are ten Home Defense squadrons, and eight more are to be raised in 1924-25 and six more in 1925-26, making a total of twenty-four in two years.

This will mean an increase in the personnel of the air force from 33,000 to 35,000 next year, and without counting the reserves Great Britain should have available for its home defense by the end of April next year from 180 to 200 airplanes.

This will increase the cost, in spite of reductions in the air force in Mesopotamia and Palestine. The air force estimates of £14,511,000 show an increase of about £2,500,000 over those of last year, which is the only increase that it is believed the Labor Government will ask for.

Air units working with the navy will also be increased by five squadrons, which can be used through an addition to the number of aircraft carried by the capital ships and enlarged accommodation of the air carriers. A bare £100 is estimated to be sufficient for airships, but £355,000 is asked for civil aviation, including the expenditure of £68,000 for making Croydon an up-to-date air port.

LONDON, March 7.—The Labor Party has appointed a committee to investigate a proposal designed to stabilize wheat prices, says The Daily Mail.

The paper declares it is thought the British Governmight might desirably introduce a system for the purchase of wheat similar to the system of pooling instituted by the Australian, Canadian and some foreign Governments. The committee will hear a number of experts and will report to the Government.

SPEEDY PEACE PROMISED

President Agrees to Spare Lives of Rebels Who Surrender to Peace Commission.

Copyright, 1924, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, March 7.—The revolution in Mexico will be terminated within twenty days and complete peace will prevail in all the republic, President Obregon declared on the eve of his departure for Manzanillo, where he will review troops which are to take part in the campaign against the States of Guerrero, Oaxaca, Tabasco, Chipas and Campenche.

Forces under direct command of Secretary of War Serrano will attack Acapulco by land and sea. Other forces will disembark at Salina Cruz to coöperate with the land advance from Tierra Blanca and Puerto Mexico.

Forces entering from Salina Cruz will clean up the rebel groups along the Tehuantepes railway, joining with the Federal troops working south. The campaign will then start full in force against the other southern States.

Telegrams from Havanna state that a number of chiefs of the rebel movement have arrived at the Cuban port. Mexican consular representatives have asked the Cuban Government to expel them.

Seventy-five Generals have been dropped from the Government roll by orders of President Obregon, charged with rebellion against the Federal Government. In the list figure nine Generals of divisions.

Five Generals on this list have been killed in action or executed and the others are believed to have been killed or have left the country.

General Cavazos has offered to surrender to Government delegates en route to the State of Hidalgo to treat with him. General Manuel Pelaez, who is held in a military prison, will be released today. Pelaez is well known in California, where he owns a large ranch.

General Arnulfo Gomez in a statement to the press declared the present revolution would be the last in Mexico as it had shown the legal institutions were strong and could not be overthrown by disloyal military officials. He adds that the War Department is instituting reforms in the army. All elements of which there is the slightest suspicion will be discharged and only officers of undoubted honestly and loyalty will be retained.

1,000 Rebels Surrender.

MEXICO CITY, March 7 (Associated Press).—One thousand rebels, under orders of six rebel leaders, surrendered unconditionally yesterday at Tlapacoyan, Vera Cruz, according to special despatches from Vera Cruz. The surrender came after failure to obtain certain concessions in a conference with General Alvino Serillo.

General Guadalupe Sanchez, one of the chief leaders of the revolt, is reported to have been defeated yesterday at Teocelo, where he withdrew after abandoning Jalapa. General Salvador Gonzales inflicted the defeat, and reports that the rebels lost 86 killed, 18 wounded and 80 men made prisoners during the engagement.

Romulo Figueroa, the first General who revolted last November, surrendering a short time afterward only to engage in another uprising, is active in Morelos, Guerrero and Mexico. He will be fought in the three States and the offensive, it is expected, will not exceed two weeks. Eight thousand men divided into three columns, under orders from Generals Amaro, Roberto Cruz and Marcelo Caraveo will participate. General Amaro is expected to land at Acapulca. General Cruz has already recaptured Puente de Ixtla, and General Caraveo will start from Zacaolpam.

President Obregon believes the republic will be completely pacified within twenty days, according to leaders of the National Pro-Peace Committee, who conferred with him.

BRITAIN BREAKS OFF MEXICAN NEGOTIATIONS

Obregon's Spokesman Demands 'Unconditional Recognition' and Refers to 'Striking Precedent.'

Copyright, 1924, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 7.—Negotiations between Señor Nieto and the Foreign Office for recognition of Mexico, says The London Times, have broken down. Señor Nieto has not produced any credentials to show that he is officially authorized to conduct negotiations on behalf of President Obregon and it is considered preferable that the matter should be taken up in Mexico City. Great Britain is there represented by Mr. Cummings, who has received local diplomatic rank and has been in charge of British interests since the rupture of official relations between the two countries.

There is considerable division of opinion in business circles in London regarding the advisability of recognizing Mexico. The corporation of foreign bondholders is understoods to have made representations to the Foreign Office that recognition should be withheld until certain definite liabilities of the Mexican Government to British bondholders should have been met.

Señor Nieto, who is Mexican Minister to Sweden, intends to return to his post. Today he issued the following statement:

"The unoficial talks I had with Mr. Ponsonby, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, on resumption of diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Mexico have unfortunately broken down. The Mexican Government can accept nothing short of unconditional recognition and discuss afterward every matter pending between the two Governments. Mexico can wait indefinitely and patiently for a policy which she thinks is just and moral and which has already been applied by the British Government, establishing thus a striking precedent."

MEXICANS HALT VISITORS.

Governor Says Americans Afraid of "Vice" Should Stay Away.

CALEXICO, Cal., March 7.—An American Government order closing the boundary here at 9 o'clock nightly and a Mexican retaliatory regulation went into effect last night. There was a deal of good natured banter on both sides of the line as guards drew a "hog wire" gate across the boundary connection of Calexico with the Mexican town of Mexicali, just across the border, but there was no disturbance nor open defiance.

Hundreds of onlookers congregated on either side at the closing hour, but when the gate banged shut went home peacefully.

Border attachés, in accordance with instructions from General Abelardo Rodriguez of the northern district of Lower California, required all Americans crossing to register and be identified. The result was an unprecedented traffic jam, with no hope of relief while the order is in effect.

Governor Rodriguez pointed out that the American closing order was issued because of complaints of vice conditions in Mexicali and said that if this was the belief of the American public then they should stay away. "We are helping them to do so with this registration order."

Wolvin Line Will Make First Payment on Loan in Return for Concessions.

MEXICO, CITY, March 7.—The Mexican Government will receive tomorrow the first instalment of a $25,000,000 loan made by the Wolvin Line Agricultural Society in return for land concessions. Franklin J. Helm, representing the Wolvin Line interests, interviewed President Obregon today regarding the last details of the agreement.

The British-American Tobacco Company is interested in the loan and the International Harvester Company is also stated to have made heavy investments in the Wolvin enterprise.

As soon as the first instalment is paid the Government will give full details of the agreement.

The Industrial Soap Company of Torreon has been sold for 6,500,000 pesos. In spite of the disturbed conditions of the country, the soap company has a balance of 7,000,000 pesos on hand. Five million pesos will be distributed among the shareholders at the rate of 300 pesos a share. The company is one of the most successful in Mexico and has paid since 1917 dividends from 25 per cent. to 100 per cent. The company was started by John Brittingham and Luis Terrazas.

OUR MINISTER STOPS HONDURAS FIGHTING

Mediation of Mr. Morales Brings Peaceful Occupation of Tegucigalpa.

SAN SALVADOR, March 7.—Through the mediation of Frank G. Morales, the American Minister, fighting has ceased in Honduras, according to advices received here today. Mr. Morales went to Zambrano to negotiate with General Gregorio Ferrera of the revolutionary forces for the peaceful occupation of Tegucigalpa so as to prevent an attack on that city by the rebels.

General Rafael Lopez Gutierrez, who became dictator when his Presidential term expired on Feb. 1, agreed to the appointment of Ferrera as commander of Tegucigalpa.

American marines from the cruiser Denver have established a neutral zone around American property which they are guarding at La Ceiba.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The American forces at Puerto Cortes, Honduras, were withdrawn from that city yesterday, Vice Consul George P. Shaw telegraphed today. The city was evacuated by the Red, or so-called Government forces, early that morning. These forces went to Omoa. The Blue forces, or revolutionists, under General Tosta, then took possession.

SHOUTS LEAD TO ARRESTS.

Brooklyn Newsboys' Scheme to Sell Newspapers Proves Disastrous.

"Extry! Great scandal! Daugherty Case!" as cried by two Brooklyn newsboys at Sheridan Square, Manhattan, led to their arrest last evening. Patrolman John J. Brown charged that when he read the final edition of a Brooklyn newspaper the boys were selling he failed to find scandal enough to justify the noise they were making. He charged them with violating the section of the Sanitary Code regarding unnecessary noises.

Moe Shudensky and Henry Weinstein, earlier in the day, decided to sell Brooklyn newspapers on Manhattan Island. So they took posts at the uptown and downtown entrances of the Christopher Street station.

Patrolman Brown was attracted by the boys' cries of "Extry!" and bought one of the newspapers which were being sold rapidly. Instead of the "great scandal" promised by the boys' cries, he said, all he found was a headline, "Six Men Subpoenaed to Testify in Daugherty Case," and a subjoined story that, in his opinion, was no better. Shudensky and Weinstein gave their ages at 32 and 24, and their addresses as 59 Manhattan Avenue and 103 Division Street, Brooklyn.

LETTER THREATENS HEFLIN.

Bears New York Postmark and Warns Him on Oil Lease Speeches.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Senator Heflin, Democrat, of Alabama, who has been making a series of sensational speeches in the Senate during the debates on the oil leases scandals, exhibited today a letter which he has received threatening his life. It bore a New York postmark. The text was typewritten and there was no signature. Senator Heflin said he would turn the letter over to the Post Office authorities.

The letter stated, said Mr. Heflin, that a "group" which had set itself the task of regulating things desired to serve notice on him that it was following the debate in the Senate and intended to dispose of him. He was advised to keep his life insurance paid up to date. The persons who had been designated as his murderers, said Mr. Heflin, were, according to the letter, to be armed with rifles equipped with Maxim silencers and were to take a shot at him from an automobile.

The word "personal" was written in longhand on the envelope.

WALDO AT HEADQUARTERS.

Refuses to Affirm or Deny Report That He Has Quit Police.

Colonel Rhinelander Waldo visited Police Headquarters yesterday afternoon for the first time in a week and declined to affirm or deny the report that he had resigned as Special Deputy Police Commissioner as a result of his booming Commissioner Enright as a candidate for Mayor. The Enright boom was said to have caused quite some embarrassment to both Mayor Hylan and the Police Commissioner.

Asked about reports that he had removed all papers and personal effects from his desk, he remarked: "There never was anything in my desk."

Asked how the new magazine, Police, was progressing, he said, "It's getting along nicely."

Colonel Waldo is said to have made several speeches at private dinners in which he advocated the candidacy of Enright for the Mayoralty. Friends said last night that the Special Deputy's speeches did not specifically mention Enright for Mayor, but for "something higher" than his present position.

ARRESTED ON FLAGSHIP.

Visitor to Fleet Accused of Attempted "Bootlegging."

Charged with selling liquor aboard the California, flag ship of the battle fleet now in the Hudson River, Salvatore Mascali of 330 Second Avenue was arrested yesterday afternoon by Charles Huckaby, chief master-at-arms, and taken ashore where he was turned over to the police.

Huckaby said he found Mascali, who went aboard with hundreds of visitors, offering pint flasks of whisky to seamen. It was alleged that Mascali told prospective buyers that he could furnish them with liquor from the rum fleet off New Jersey by the bottle or the case.

Mascali was lodged in the Tombs and will be arraigned in the Federal Court today.

$25,000 Verdict for Devoy Reversed

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court reversed yesterday by a vote of 3 to 2 the verdict for $25,000 obtained by John Devoy, editor of The Gaelic-American, against The Irish World, and directed a new trial. Justice Dowling and McAvoy dissented. The suit was based on the republication in 1920 of an article published by The Irish World in 1882 charging that Devoy frustrated a blow at England by misappropriating money of the Irish National Skirmishing Fund.

SET A NEW RECORD FLYING THROUGH FOG

Army Airmen Make Non-Stop Flight of 575 Miles in 3 Hours 45 Minutes.

SKIM BROOKLYN HOUSETOPS

Forced Down From Clouds in Trip Here From Dayton Testing a New Instrument.

Racing against both fog and time, an army D Haviland navigation plane set a new non-stop record of 3 hours 45 minutes for the 575-mile flight from McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio, to Mitchel Field, here, when it landed safely at the Mineola (L. I.) hangars at 5:22 yesterday afternoon. The trial was ordered to test new instruments, whose successful operation enabled the two-seater to make a perfect compass flight. The old record of 4 hour 4 minutes had withstood all attempts since January, 1923.

When Lieutenant Eugene H. Barksdale, pilot, and Bradley Jones, navigator, stepped from the plane they were greeted by Major William N. Hensley Jr., commander here, with:

"You have added another achievement to the records of the Army Air Service."

Barksdale and Jones took off at Dayton at 1237 P. M., Central Time, or 1:37 P. M. Eastern Time here, and thus clipped twenty-three minutes off the record for the route. Jones last night praised the successful trial of the instruments which had enabled the pilot to fly a true course and not zigzag to follow railroads or rivers. A new earth inductor, which places the compass in the tail of the fuselage to avoid magnetic attraction of steelwork, and a flight-inductor, which made the pilot independent of keeping the horizon line in his cross-wires for balance, proved invaluable, according to Jones, who is Instrument Engineer at McCook Field. Both instruments have been developed in the last year at the army flying field there, he said.

Veteran pilots at the Long Island field pronounced the feat the more remarkable because of the unfavorable weather conditions. Lieutenant Barksdale reported that while the earlier leg of the journey was made above the clouds at 12,000 to 14,000 feet, the fog forced him lower and lower as he approached the seaboard. From Perth Amboy across Brooklyn to Mineola, he said he was barely skimming the housetops as the descending banks steadily narrowed the airway between him and the earth.

Lieutenant Cecil E. Archer and Captain John B. Powers, both of McCook Field, but Mineola-bound via Bolling Field, Washington, were also caught by the fog, but made a forced landing about dark in Mount Carmel Cemetery, Glendale, Queens. Earlier in the day fog had forced them down at Elizabeth, N. J. The fliers suffered no mishap and the plane was practically undamaged as it settled in the Cemetery mud. Several radio wires near the cemetery were torn down by the plane in its descent.

Brooklyn Inspector Tells of Task of Breaking Up Ticket Speculation and Gambling.

Suppressing ticket speculation outside and gambling inside of Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, has been one of his hardest problems, Inspector Thomas F. Walsh told Deputy Commissioner John A. Leach yesterday, testifying in his own behalf at Police Headquarters. Inspector Walsh is charged with laxity in enforcing the Volstead act in the Ninth District, Brooklyn.

Ticket speculators were so numerous in the vicinity of the baseball park, Inspector Walsh testified, that it was necessary last Summer for him to assign six of his ten plain clothes men to the task of rounding them up. Inside the field, he said, there was gambling, but after his men had made fifteen arrests and the management of the field had barred the offenders from ball games this also was suppressed.

Inspector Walsh's district includes Brownsville, part of Flatbush, Canarsie, Vanderveer Park, East New York, Crown Heights and part of the Bedford section. During 1923, he said, his men made 9,206 arrests. From June 1, when Commissioner Enright issued the clean-up orders, until Jan. 14, the day charges were filed against twelve district commanders, Walsh's plain clothes staff made more than 1,100 arrests, of which 317 were for violation of the Volstead act. Last year his men seized 850 barrels and 18,555 bottles of various liquors and 139 stills.

Nine members of the Special Service Division testified to making arrests in twelve places in Inspector Walsh's district over his head. Of the twelve defendants seven were discharged in court and five fined. Inspector Walsh said his men made forty arrests in eleven of the places mentioned.

HELD FOR DRUG HOMICIDE.

More Arrests May Follow Death of Hart's Island Prisoner.

Further arrests may be expected in the Hart's Island drug smuggling case, said Commissioner of Correction Frederick A. Wallis yesterday following the arraignment in the West Farms Court of Luigi Ambroso of 2,012 La Fontaine Avenue, the Bronx, instructor in the island's shoe shop, arrested early yesterday in connection with the death of Irving Endikoff, a prisoner, who died of narcotic poisoning last Monday night. Magistrate Charles Oberwager held Ambroso without bail for examination on Monday on a short affidavit charging him with homicide. The detectives, acting under instructions from District Attorney John E. McGeehan, who is conducting an investigation of the case, believe that Ambroso was the one who brought the drugs to Hart's Island as a result of using which Endikoff died.

Commissioner Wallis said that he had made a thorough inquiry and denied that fourteen other prisoners had been overcome after an orgy of drug taking. He said that Endikoff was the only prisoner who had procured any supply of narcotics.

MAXIM OFFENDED BY WOR.

Part of His Radio Talk on Prohibition Was Lost.

Scores of letters and telegrams were received yesterday by Hudson Maxim, the inventor, at his home at Landing, N. J., expressing regret that his talk on prohibition at station WOR, Newark, N. J., was not broadcast in its entirety, although he spoke 3,000 words into the microphone.

"It seems strange to me that my speech was the only part of the evening's program that failed to get over," the inventor said yesterday. "I was offended when I learned that I had been talking to a blank wall. I said nothing that would offend even the most confirmed 'dry.' I simply wanted to say that if the Eighteenth Amendment was enforced in so far as it concerned alcohol, then it should also be enforced to prohibit tea and coffee."

W. H. Moler, Director of Publicity at station WOR, said that it was an accident. "The generator broke down," he said. "It is ridiculous to say we objected to anything Mr. Maxim might say regarding prohibition."

PAT MORAN DIES IN FLORIDA CAMP

Manager of Reds Succumbs to Bright's Disease—Wife and Children at Bedside.

HENDRICKS HIS SUCCESSOR

Former Head of Cardinals and Indianapolis Is Chosen New Pilot of Cincinnati Team.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 7.—Pat Moran, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, died here at 6:07 o'clock tonight of Bright's disease. He died fighting his last grim battle with the same determination he showed on the baseball diamond.

Mrs. Moran and their two children, hurriedly summoned to his bedside from Cincinnati, arrived a few hours before his death, but Moran had lapsed into unconsciousness and was unable to recognize them. He died in his wife's arms. An only brother, Tom Moran of Fitchburg, is en route here.

Hope for the manager's life was abandoned this morning and all efforts were directed toward keeping him alive until his family arrived. The end came peacefully. With him as life ebbed away were Jack Hendricks, lifelong friend and assistant to the pilot, and Mrs. Moran.

Johnny Evers, who came here to be with his friend, left the bedside a short time before he died. Attending physicians said Moran's lungs gradually filled with poison, shutting off his breathing. Moran's last words, addressed to Evers, were:

"Hello, John. Take me out of here." He then lost consciousness.

Moran's health began to fail during the Winter, but he came South with the Reds in spite of his illness. On Monday the break came and he was taken to a hospital, where it was believed his condition was not serious. Early last night, however, his condition became grave and today specialists said only a miracle could save him.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon a consultation was held, after which it was announced that he could not live. During Moran's illness Hendricks had taken charge of the Reds' training.

The Cincinnati club will go into mourning for forty-eight hours.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at Fitchburg, Mass., Moran's birthplace.

Hendricks Is Appointed.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 7.—Jack Hendricks succeeds Pat Moran as manager of the Cincinnati Nationals, it was announced here tonight, following receipt of news of the Red leader's death.

Hendricks managed one major league club, the St. Louis Cardinals, several years ago, and has piloted many pennant winners in the minors.

He joined the Cincinnati club this season as coach and assistant manager. Hendricks managed the Indianapolis club in the American Association last year.

Born in Massachusetts.

CINCINNATI, March 7.—Patrick Joseph Moran, veteran baseball player and manager, was a native of Fitchburg, Mass., where he was born Feb. 7, 1876. He obtained his first professional engagement at Lyons, N. Y., twenty-seven years ago and soon graduated into fast company at Montreal.

Young Moran caught well, played a good game at third base, and while never a heavy slugger, was regarded as a timely and dangerous hitter. He was taken by the Boston Nationals in 1901 and soon became the leading backstop of that club.

When the Chicago Cubs began their wonderful career of triumph they bought Moran from Boston. He acted as Kling's adjutant through all the glorious campaigns of Chance's team and was chief catcher in 1909, the year Kling remained out of the game. After the Cubs ceased to dominate baseball, Moran was sent to Philadelphia, where he later became the manager and brought the first National League pennant to that city in 1915. Against the Boston Red Sox in the world's series of that season, however, his team won only one game in five.

Moran went to the Reds in 1919 when they needed a manager. He had signed as coach of the New York Giants, but was permitted to go to the Reds. That year Moran succeeded in winning the first National League championship for Cincinnati, and after his team conquered the White Sox in the world's series, was termed "the Miracle Man of the baseball world."

Moran maintained a residence in Fitchburg, Mass., while managing and playing in the major league. He is survived by a wife and two sons, Gabriel, 8, and Patrick Joseph Jr., 14.

Daubert Lauds Dead Leader.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., March 7.—Jake Daubert, first baseman of the Cincinnati Reds, who resides four miles from this city, learned of the death of Pat Moran as he was preparing to leave for the Reds' Spring training camp. He expressed his high regard for Moran who he said was "one of the whitest men" in baseball.

ROBINS' REGULARS IN HITTING MOOD

Pound Vance, Green and Decatur for 12 Safe Blows and Beat Yanigans, 10 to 1.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 7.—Manager Robinson has had his Robins hustling ever since they reported here for training, but this morning the pilot was in a good humor and inclined to take pity on his hired help. He notified the athletes that no morning workout would be held, but to be prepared for the usual strenuous afternoon session. The boys welcomed the short vacation and several of them went fishing.

In the afternoon all men showed up at the park full of ginger and went through a long drill. The session was opened with batting practice and, after each man had an opportunity to hit straight pitching, the infielders were put through a peppery fielding workout. Then the usual nine-inning game between the Regulars and Yanigans was staged, and the contest ended in a 10 to 1 victory for the Regulars. Paul Schreiber, Rube Yarrison and Harry Shriver each hurled three innings for the Regulars and only four hits were made off their combined delivery. Dazzy Vance, Nelson Green and Art Decatur pitched for the Yanigans, and the Regulars made twelve hits off them.

Zack Wheat drove one of Decatur's curves over the right field barrier in the eighth session after Nels and Loftus had doubled. It was Wheat's first home run of the training season and the slugger derived considerable joy from the blow. The three boys who were sent to find the ball reported to Robbie, after a long search, that the missing ball must have rolled to Dunedin, the neighboring town.

RUTH BACK ON LINKS.

Plays 36 Holes of Golf Despite Recent Influenza Attack.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 7.—Thirty-six holes of golf constituted a day's work for Babe Ruth, the Yankee slugger who has been ill of influenza for ten days, here today. Ruth played with Shawkey, Bush and Schang. Although he would not reveal his score, it was said to be "very good."

The Babe is still weak, but otherwise appeared none the worse for his illness.

Huggins Praises Pat Moran, 'Friend, Neighbor, Confidant'

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, March 7.—Word of the death of Pat Moran brought sorrow to the camp of the Yankees here. Miller Huggins, manager of the New York team and a fellow townsman of Moran's in Cincinnati, said:

"This is a particular shock to me. Pat Moran was a friend, neighbor, confidant. Pat was the salt of the earth—a genial, kind soul, who was beloved by everybody who came into contact with him. He was as great a baseball man as he was a friend. Moran's was one of the widest minds in the game. As a handler of pitchers he was without a superior. As a quick thinker in a pinch he stood with the best managers of all time. As a strategist he was a marvel—and I don't think that he ever did get credit for his true abilities."

ROWLAND ARRIVES AT YANKEES' CAMP

Umpire Joins Champions to Handle First Game Against Pelicans Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, March 7. — The twenty-three Yankee ball players in training here at last have found something to complain about in New Orleans. There is an umpire in camp. Clarence ("Pants") Rowland, American League arbiter and former manager of the Chicago White Sox, arrived today, and on Sunday he will get a chance to sharpen up his eye and his repartee when the Yankees and the New Orleans Pelicans meet in the first real baseball game of the budding season.

With an umpire on the ground and the first woman fan of 1924 looking on from the grand stand at today's practice, the national pastime is rapidly reaching its normal state. It won't be long now until the fans, who so far have been on their Winter behavior, begin "riding" the players. When some extremely portly individual, seated safely behind a wire screen, starts shouting at a 140-pound recruit, "Come on, you big stiff, stand up there like a man and hit it," then, and only then will the season actually be under way.

Rowland was particularly interested in the progress of Lou Gehrig. He worked behind the plate in several games last season while Gehrig was substituting for Wally Pipp and formed the opinion that Gehrig was quite a hitter. The umpire, they say, is always right, and from the manner in which Gehrig has been pounding them down here, this case was no exception to the rule.

Manager Huggins crossed Gehrig and his other fence busters at today's batting practice by devoting most of the time to bunting. Nevertheless, several of the boys sneaked in a few lusty smashes while the boss had his back turned. Once more it was Gehrig, Haines, Bengough and Gazella who came in for the most personal attention from Huggins. These four had a short batting drill of their own in which the manager took up their shortcomings at the bat in detail and alternately ordered and pleaded with them.

Huggins Misses Little.

"Not that way, not that way," he would say to one or the other. "Look, this is what I mean," and then he would illustrate. Huggins gives the impression of being much more haphazard about instructing his young players than he really is. An outsider visiting the camp might get the impression that he wasn't paying any attention at all, but he is and it is a pretty keen and knowing sort of attention, too. The leader of the world's champions is not given to talking much. He rarely raises his voice, but he misses very little that goes on about him. He may be sitting on the bench talking of the delights of St. Petersburg and the opportunities in real estate down there, his golf game or the days when he played second base in Cincinnati, when suddenly he will interrupt himself to call some pointed instruction to a player he didn't seem to be watching at all.

"Keep your foot on that base, Gehrig," he will call. "Don't try to throw until you cacth it." Then he will add in explanation, "These young fellows are apt to be in too big a hurry," and go on with his story of how he raised the St. Petersburg course record.

Line-Up Is Announced.

Huggins today officially announced the team which will play against the Pelicans on Sunday. The batting order follows: Haines cf, Hendrick lf, Gehrig 1b, Hofmann rf, Johnson ss, Gazella 2b, McNally 3b, Autry c, Arguijo p.

George Redfern probably would have been listed to start at short except for the fact that he is suffering from a Charley horse, thus achieving the undesirable distinction of becoming the first Yankee cripple of the season. He was out at practice today and his injury is in no way serious, but he is hobbling about, and Huggins doesn't intend to take a chance on having him aggravate the injury.

The pitchers and catchers undoubtedly will be changed every inning or so. None of the Yankee hurlers have been allowed to curve the ball yet, so their first opportunity of really displaying their wares will come in this game. Newberry, Owen, Olsen, Gaston and Swenson, all the hurlers Huggins never has seen in action, likely will have a chance. How well these fellows can pitch remains to be seen. From a fielding standpoint several of them have much to learn. The old problem of whether to play the ball or the bag on a bunt down the first-base line had them guessing this morning, and with no great amount of success. New York baseball fans who remember how "Shufflin' Phil" Douglas fielded bunts can, by picturing him, get a fair idea of how several of the Yankee rookies go about it.

RICHARDS WINS FINAL.

Outplays Feuer in Florida Tennis Tourney to Triumph, 6-1, 6-1.

PALM BEACH, March 7.—Gus Feuer, the Philadelphia and Miami school boy who fought his way to the semi-finals in the men's singles at the Poinciana tennis tournament, today played his cool, steady game against Vincent Richards, the indoor champion, but could not make an impression. He succumbed 6—1, 6—1, although he was fighting all the time.

Feuer won only one point in the opening game but carried the next game to deuce before cracking and allowing Richards to run it off. Richard's mastery of court here asserted itself and he ran off the games in rapid order. The second set was a repetition of the first. In the only games that he won, the youngster rushed the net and played on more than equal terms with Richards.

Purdue Wins on Track.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Purdue nosed out Northwestern, 42 1-3 to 38 2-3, in a Western Conference indoor track meet tonight.

GIANTS MAY RETURN TO SARASOTA IN 1925

Plan to Make Permanent Camp There if Hotel Accommodations Can Be Arranged.

SOUTHWORTH'S TEAM WINS

Beats Frisch's Nine in Practice Game When Marsans Triples—Maun Shows Form.

Special to The New York Times.

SARASOTA, Fla., March 7.—If satisfactory hotel accommodations can be arranged next year the Giants probably will establish a permanent training camp at Sarasota. This was the message which Secretary Jim Tierney delivered on behalf of John J. McGraw at a luncheon of the local Kiwanis Club at noon today. Tierney was the last speaker on the program, and his speech brought down the house for there is nothing that Sarasota wants more than to have the Giants come here year after year.

Tierney told the local business men at the luncheon that McGraw had written a letter to Charles A. Stoneham yesterday praising conditions here highly. McGraw wrote the Giants' President that in all his twenty-odd years as manager of the Giants he had never seen a finer training camp than Sarasota.

"If satisfactory hotel accommodations can be arranged," wrote McGraw "the Giants will come back here next Spring and for many years to come."

The hotel accommodations referred to have to do with the question of getting all the players together under one roof. At present the club officials, the regular athletes and the newspaper men are at the Miramar, the newest and best hotel in town, while the other players are lodged at another hostelry nearby. What McGraw undoubtedly means is that if arrangements can be made to take care of the entire party at the Miramar next Spring the Giants will not look elsewhere for a training camp.

McGraw Likes Weather.

McGraw is tickled with the excellent weather that has been provided since his arrival last Sunday. The days have been hot and the nights cool, and the squad has made remarkable progress in the conditioning work.

"Give me good weather, a good ball park and adequate hotel facilities, and I will be satisfied," McGraw has said many times, and Sarasota, so far, has lived up to that formula, except that because of insufficient notice the leading hotel could nt prepare long enough in advance to accommodate all the party.

McGraw was unable to attend the Wiwanis luncheon. The Giant chieftain is suffering from an aggravated case of sunburn and deemed it best to remain away from the affair. Hughey Jennings and Secretary Tierney represented the club, and most of the New York newspaper men attended, several making speeches.

Today was the hottest that the Giants have yet encountered in Sarasota, and the boys went through a workout which ended in a six-inning practice game between the "Frisches" and the "Southworths." The latter won, 3 to 1, when Solemn John Watson was battered for two runs in the fourth inning. Watson was not putting much on the ball, and the "Southworths" leaped on his offerings for four singles and a triple by Armando Marsans for a total of two runs.

Maun Fans Several.

Harold Baldwin and Solemn John twirled for the losers and Joe Bradshaw and Ernest Maun toiled for the winners. Maun looked to be the best of the lot by a considerable margin. In his two innings he allowed no hits and struck out several with a fast ball over the plate.

Bradshaw, who worked four innings, depended mainly on unusual speed, backed by the biggest physique among the young pitchers. He was not quite as finished a pitcher as Maun, nor as finished as Baldwin, who is small but self-confident. The Newark iron man left the game with the score tied at 1—1, but when Watson took the reins in the fourth things began to happen.

The "Southworths" outhit the "Frisches" by 11 to 5, Southworth, Wilson and Ainsmith getting two hits apiece for the winners and Jimmy O'Connell two safeties for the losers. James collected a triple for the "Frisches," running the bases like an antelope.

Today's line-ups were as follows:

ILLINOIS ATHLETES IN MEET TONIGHT

Seven Stars From West to Compete in Post Office Clerks' Games Here.

A total of seven representatives of the Illinois A. C. will be seen in action tonight at the tenth annual indoor athletic meet of the Post Office Clerks' Association in the 165th Infantry Regiment Armory, formerly the old Sixty-ninth. Andy Walker, Chairman of the Games Committee, yesterday disclosed that more than 500 individual entries have been received for the meet, which promises to be one of the most interesting of the season. The wearers of the Tricolor who are scheduled to compete are Joie W. Ray, America's leading middle-distance runner; Harold M. Osborn, national high jump champion; Ivan H. Riley, Samuel H. Rosen, George T. Stevenson, Joe Heineman and Emil Krogh.

Ray and Krogh are scheduled to start in the James R. Murphy special mile invitation race which features the program of fifteen events scheduled. Krogh has been entered to replace Mal Douglas, Yale runner, who notified Walker he would be unable to compete. Osborn has consented to give an exhibition of his high jumping ability. The other four members of the squad will start from back marks in the 300-yard handicap run.

VOGLER AND HARRIS WIN.

Dr. Andrew Harris of the Chicago A. A. took his match with E. C. Wainwright of Pittsburgh, 50 to 43, in eighty-four innings. Each had a high run of five.

Dr. R. N. Roscow of Baltimore won tonight from Frank I. Fleming of Chicago, 50 to 41, in 76 innings. Roscow had a high run of 5.

Boston College Sextet Defeated.

Dugan, Witt and Pennock Off For Yankees' Training Camp

Joe Dugan, star third baseman of the Yankees, and Whitey Witt, diminutive centre fielder of the world's champions, left this city yesterday for the team's training camp at New Orleans. They departed from the Pennsylvania Statioin at 5:05 P. M., and Herb Pennock, star lefthander, was scheduled to join them when their train reached Wilmington, Del. The three players are due to arrive at the Yanks' training camp tomorrow morning.

COACH TO BE NAMED FOR U. S. TEAM TODAY

Track Committee of Olympic Body Is Expected to Select Robertson of Penn.

Important action in connection with America's participation in the Olympic games at Paris this Summer will be taken today at meetings of the Track and Field Selection Committee, of which William C. Prout, President of the A. A. U., is Chairman, and the Executive Committee, of which Colonel Robert M. Thompson, American Olympic Committee President, is Chairman. The sessions are scheduled for the Hotel Astor, the Track and Field Selection Committee meeting to start at noon and to be followed by the session of the Executive Committee.

The outstanding subject which is expected to come up for the consideration of the track and field officials is the selection of a board of coaches and a manager for the team which will make the trip abroad. Lawson Roberston, University of Pennsylvania track coach, who has been associated with Olympic competition as a competitor and adviser for the past eighteen years, is regarded as almost certain to be named head coach. He has been recommended for the position by the Amateur Athletic Union.

Efforts to obtain some information on the likely choice for team manager have not been very successful. From reliable sources, however, it was learned that George V. Brown, Boston A. A. official, is one of the leading candidates for the position held by Matt Halpin of the New York A. C. four years ago.

Advancement of Robertson as head coach has met with popular favor generally in athletic circles throughout the country, according to reports. The Red and Blue coach is regarded as ideally equipped for the position. In his days as a competitor Robertson showed himself one of the foremost sprinters ever developed. He held the national 100-yard title in 1904 and still has a 65-yard indoor sprint record of 7 seconds, in addition to several three-legged marks which he made with Harry Hillman, Dartmouth coach, to hi scredit on the record books. Roberston was a member of the American Olympic team in St. Louis in 1904, at Athens in 1906 and at London in 1908.

Approval of Chairman Prout's plan for a series of eight sectional tryouts for track and field athletes is expected at the Track and Field Committee session. Several other important recommendations with respect to the preparation of America's athletic army and the selection and training of the Olympic team are expected to be submitted to the Executive Committee following the session of the track and field body.

FUND GROWS SLOWLY, OLYMPIC LEADERS SAY

Response Must Quicken, Officials Point Out at Dinner—New Campaign Planned.

A strong and urgent appeal for immediate contributions, large and small, to the American Olympic Fund was made last night by members of the Olympic Committee at a dinner tendered to metropolitan sports writers at the New York Athletic Club. Attention was called to the fact that the American people, although they undoubtedly intended to contribute to the fund, are slow in doing their bit toward defraying the expenses which will attend the housing, feeding and general welfare of the small army of athletes which will represent the United States in the games at Paris.

It was pointed out that approximately 350 athletes will be sent to Paris, and that the country's total quota to be subscribed is $350,000, of which about $70,000 already has been realized. New York City's quota has been placed at $100,000.

Colonel Robert M. Thompson, President of the American Olympic Committee, gave a general outline of the plans which had been made for taking care of the athletes from the time they embark for France until they return to the United States. Colonel Thompson said that the athletes are to be taken care of in a manner becoming representatives of the United States. The men and women are to be entertained, royally but not extravagantly. It is planned to have both foreign and American artists entertain the team at the château where they will be quartered.

Gustavus T. Kirby, a member of the Executive Committee, briefly outlined the work which the committee has done toward the raising of the fund. Mr. Kirby stated that the proprietorship plan was working out well, as it enlists the personal interest of the contributors, and that between $10,000 and $15,000 had been subscribed this way.

Another plan put forward by the committee was the institution of an intensive advertising and publicity campaign, which will be carried on within the next three or four weeks through the cooperation of all the metropolitan dailies with the committee. A boxing show, to be held at Madison Square Garden, in which the professional boxer may do his bit to aid the amateur athlete, is also planned by the committee.

Major General Henry T. Allen, Vice President and executive officer, paid glowing tribute to the Olympics as an institution which fosters the physical prowess and fitness of the youth of the fifty or more countries competing. Julius Barnes, Treasurer of the committee, also spoke briefly on the importance of the Olympics as an international institution.

Billiard Results.

Erwin Rudolph, representative of this city in the National Championship Pocket Billiard League, won his special 600-point match with Charles Harmon, New York State pocket billiard champion, at the Fourteenth Street Academy yesterday by the score of 600 to 571. In the afternoon Rudolph won the fifth block by the score of 99 to 92 in 12 innings, making a high run of 29, to 33 for Harmon. This brought the score to 505 to 437 in Rudolph's favor, as he led at 406 to 345 at the end of the fourth block Thursday evening. In the evening Harman made more carroms than did Rudolph, but the latter went out when he reached 95 in the 29th inning. Harmon's total for the final block was 134. Both made a high run of 23.

Two games were played in the Manhattan pocket-billiard handicap tournament at the Recreation Academy, Manhattan, yesterday. In the first game E. Enequist defeated J. Faglon, 75 to 39, in 28 innings. The winner had a high run of 15 and the loser 8. W. Manning won the second game from H. Adams, 60 to 56, in 31 innings. The high runs were 11 and 10 respectively.

E. J. Faglon defeated J. Mills in the New York State amateur pocket billiard championship at the Recreation Academy, Brooklyn, last night, by a score of 100 to 81 in thirty-four innings. The winner had a high run of 14 and the loser 13.

T. Dick won from twenty entries in the three-cushion Rapid-Fire handicap tournament at the Strand Academy last night. The winner was playing for nine points. M. Letzler and P. Henf, both playing for fifteen points, were second and third, respectively.

HAHN DEFEATS RAY IN JASPER SPECIAL

Boston A. A. Runner and Larrivee of Holy Cross Both Finish Ahead of Chicagoan.

RAWLINGS IS SPRINT VICTOR

More Than 6,000 Athletic Enthusiasts See Manhattan College Game at 102d Engineers' Armory.

Joie W. Ray of the Illinois A. C., national middle-distance star, suffered his first defeat of the metropolitan season in a scratch race last night when he finished third in the Jasper Three-Quarter Special, the feature event at the indoor meet of Manhattan College held at the 102d Engineers' Armory, Broadway and 168th Street. Lloyd Hahn of the Boston A. A., who defeated Ray earlier in the season in a handicap race, was the winner of the run, covering the distance in 3:11 1-5. Leo Larrivee of Holy Cross College was second.

The meet marked the first held by Manhattan College in seven years. It was a big success, more than 6,000 fans attending it. Larry Rawlings of the New York Athletic Club won all three races in the invitation sprint series, finishing first at 50, 75 and 100 yards. The order of finish was the same in all three. W. A. Dowding of Georgetown University was second and Joe Sullivan of Boston College was third. Rawlings's time for 50 yards was 0:06 1-5; for 75 yards, 0:08 2-5, and for 100 yards, 0:81 2-5. The points scored were 3 for Rawlings, 6 for Dowding and 9 for Sullivan.

Dick Landon, Olympic running high jump champion, formerly of Yale and now representing the New York A. C., took the honor in the running high jump, scaling 6 feet 5¼ inches. The world's record indoors is 6 feet 5¾ inches. Landon tried for a new record at 6 feet 6⅛ inches, but failed in three attempts. Harold M. Osborn of the Illinois A. C., the national A. A. U. champion, was second with 6 feet 4 inches and Tom Halloran of the New York A. C. third with 6 feet 2 inches.

Italian Sprints Into Lead.

Ray's defeat in the Jasper Special came about after he had led the field up until the last lap. Rounding the first turn of the final lap, Hahn spurted and came up shoulder to shoulder with the Kankakee flyer and then passed him on the backstretch, taking Larrivee with him. Ray tried to keep up with them, but, to the surprise of the crowd, weakened. Hahn put all he had into a last sprint over the last half lap and won by five yards over Larrivee, who finished ten yards ahead of Ray.

Hahn's time for the first quarter was 1:01 2-5, for the half mile 2:06. Ray's time was 3:13 4-5.

Willie Plant of the Morningside A. C., national walking star, was unable to get better than fifth place in the one-mile walk handicap, finding the allowances set against him too large to overcome. M. Weiss of the Knights of Columbus Centre, Long Island City, who was allowed 25 seconds, won the race in 7:03 3-5. Charles Eschenbach of the Pastime A. C. was second and A. Rozniak of the Jersey Harriers A. A. was third. Eschenbach and Rozniak both had a time allowance of 30 seconds.

The St. Charles Borromeo School won the 440-yard relay race, closed to the Catholic Schools Athletic League, and the 880-yard relay, closed to the same schools, went to the Holy Name School. Sidney Borock, running unattached, captured the 70-yard dash for novices in 0:08 1-5.

Craw in Exciting Finish.

In one of the most exciting finishes of the local indoor season, Andy Craw of the Glencoe A. C., holder of three Metropolitan A. A. U. senior titles, won the two-mile run handicap by the margin of less than a foot from G. Lermond of Boston College. Roland Payne of Colby College was a close third. All three men started from scratch and were closely bunched all the way. The fight for the lead over the last quarter mile was of the stiffest sort, Craw just getting home first in 9:42 2-5.

The Holy Cross College quartet won the one-mile intercollegiate relay race, leading all the way and finishing 25 yards ahead of Boston College in 3:31 1-5. Fordham University was third. Ed Higgins, Walter Mulvihill, J. Burns and Joe Tierney composed the winning team. De La Salle Institute won the one-mile interscholastic relay race in 3:37 2-5. The 1,000-yard run handicap went to J. Geoghegan of Manhattan College, who started from the 50-yard mark and finished in 2:19 3-5.

PRINCETON PROTEST OF GAME IS UPHELD

Defeat by Dartmouth Five Is Stricken From Intercollegiate League Record.

CONTEST TO BE REPLAYED

Winning Goal Was Made After Foul Had Been Called, Body Rules—Tigers Have Chance in Race.

The decision of the Executive Committee of the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League made at a meeting at the University of Pennsylvania Club here yesterday, will cause the game played between Princeton and Dartmouth at Hanover, N. H., last Saturday night, which was won by Dartmouth, to be stricken from the records, and the race for the championship is still open. By defeating Yale, while Princeton was losing to Dartmouth, Cornell apparently clinched the title last Saturday night. The standings have been ordered revised, however, and under the new arrangement Princeton has a mathematical chance of tying for the championship.

The action taken by the Executive Committee was the result of a protest filed by Princeton, according to Ellwood W. Kemp Jr., Secretary of the league, wso said that Princeton charged that the final goal made by Dooley, which allowed Dartmouth to win by 36 to 34, was made at a time when the ball was dead as a result of a personal foul called on a Dartmouth player. The statement of Secretary Kemp says that the protest was the result of an erroneous decision. Edward Hastings of Cornell was the referee. The game has been ordered replayed at Hanover on March 18, "with such officials as are approved by the Executive Committee of the League."

Statement Is Issued.

The following statement was given out after the meeting:

"Ellwood W. Kemp Jr., Secretary-Treasurer of the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League, announced that at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the league, held in New York City on Friday, March 7, it was unanimously decided that the Princeton-Dartmouth basketball game, played at Dartmouth, N. H., on the evening of March 1, 1924, which game reslited in the score of 36 to 34 in favor of Dartmouth College, be stricken from the records of the league and be replayed on March 18 at Hanover, N. H., with such officials as are approved by the Executive Committee of the league.

"The action of the Executive Committee was had as a result of the report made by the referee in charge of the game, by reason of an erroneous decision made under the Note to Rule 7, Section 7 of the Official Rules of the League. Both Princeton and Dartmouth colleges have concurred in the decision of the Executive Committee and are making arrangements for the game to be played on March 18."

A number of versions of the play in question were submitted to the Executive Committee, but the one which was said to have been accepted by them said that after Dooley made his throw of thirty-three feet Goas, another Dartmouth player, had stepped forward and crashed into Kneass of Princeton and by so doing was guilty of a personal foul. The protest was based on this part of the Note to Rule 7, Section 7: "If a foul or violation is called on the team throwing for goal, the ball shall be dead at the time of the foul or violation is committed and the goal, if made, shall not count."

Incident First of Its Kind.

This is the first time that the Executive Committee ever was called upon to pass upon a case of this nature since the league was re-formed in 1910, according to Secretary Kemp. He added that he could recall no such incident as long as he had been associated with basketball. He said that early next week a meeting would be held at which the officials for the game ordered replayed would be named.

The following members of the Executive Committee attended yesterday's meeting: W. M. Barber of Yale, H. H. Salmon Jr. of Princeton, T. J. Cullen of Dartmouth, Ralph Morgan and Ernie Couzens of Pennsylvania, E. W. Butler of Cornell and E. W. Kemp Jr. of Columbia.

Princeton again is in a tie for second place with Columbia, having won three games and lost three, against four victories and four defeats for Columbia. Cornell has two games remaining on the schedule, and if Cornell defeats Columbia here tonight the Ithacans will clinch the title, regardless of the outcome of the remaining games on the Princeton schedule.

Cornell has won seven games and lost one. After the game with Columbia tonight Cornell will close the season against Princeton at Princeton on March 15. Princeton's remaining games will be against Pennsylvania tonight, Dartmouth at Princeton on March 12, Cornell at Princeton on March 15 and the play-off against Dartmouth at Hanover on March 18. The other game on tonight's schedule brings together Dartmouth and Yale at Hanover.

The revised standing of the league follows:

	W.	L.	Pts.	Opp. Pts.	P.C.
Cornell	7	1	192	152	.875
Columbia	4	4	179	161	.500
Princeton	3	3	151	152	.500
Dartmouth	3	4	149	154	.429
Yale	3	5	174	194	.375
Pennsylvania	3	6	171	201	.333

Medical Unit to Accompany U. S. Olympic Team to Paris

That the health and general well being of the American Olympic team of 350 athletes will be carefully safeguarded while the men and women are abroad is evidenced by the fact that the committee is to send a fully equipped medical unit with the team when it leaves aboard the steamship America. The unit will consist of several doctors and nurses, under the supervision of Dr. Graeme M. Hammond. The committee considers the formation of this unit as of paramount importance because of the fact that, if illness should occur it might, without medical attention, spread and thus seriously affect the showing of the Americans in the games at Paris.

FIRPO KNOCKS OUT SPALLA IN THE 14TH

LOSER DISPLAYS GAMENESS

Crowd of 30,000 Sees Bout, 5,000 Less Than One Which Witnessed Lodge Contest.

BUENOS AIRES, March 7 (Associated Press).—Luis Firpo tonight knocked out Erminio Spalla, the Italian heavyweight champion, in the fourteenth round of what was to have been a fifteen-round bout.

The European champion's hopes to meet Jack Dempsey were dashed when Firpo put over one of his famous rights to the jaw and laid him flat upon the canvas of the ring.

Spalla put up a remarkably game fight against the Argentine. During the latter rounds, when Firpo was rushing, he successfully blocked many hard rights, any one of which would have sent him down for the fatal count.

In the infighting Spalla punished Firpo severely. The Argentine often was wild, so intent was he on giving his adversary the coup de grace.

During the early partt of the fight Firpo used his left, but with little success. After the fifth round, when Spalla took the offensive and fought his best of the contest, Firpo used his right almost exclusively.

In the tenth round Firpo was staggered by Spalla with a right to the jaw. The Argentine was knocked off his balance. Spalla followed through with a left, but slipped and fell, and both men went down, with Spalla on top.

In the eleventh Firpo slammed Spalla against the ropes with a left. The Italian, however, tightly clutched the ropes with both hands, thus saving himself from a fall.

The knockout blow was delivered in Spalla's own corner, 1 minute 45 seconds after the gong had started the fourteenth round

Firpo entered the ring at 11:06 P. M., followed two minutes later by Spalla. The weights as announced were, Firpo 216½ pounds, Spalla 184½.

The expectation that the bout between the Argentine and the Italian titleholder at the River Plate Football Field here tonight would draw a bigger attendance than the recent bout between Firpo and "Farmer" Lodge was dissipated. It is estimated that only 30,000 persons saw the bout tonight, as compared with 35,000 who witnessed the Firpo-Lodge contest.

Leader, Brocco. Record, 2,390 miles made by Lawson and Drobach in 1914.

Sensational riding on the part of the Belgian pair, Fredericks and Stockelynch, in the evening sprints and a gained lap by the newly formed combination of Declerck and Georgetti as a result of a jam during the fifth sprint, were the outstanding features of the fifth night of the six-day bike race at Madison Square Garden last night. The arena was filled to capacity while the riders were going through their paces and the jam served to lend excitement to an otherwise dull evening.

Stockelynch and his partner, Fredericks, captured the prize offered for the most points won during the 9 o'clock sprints. When the session was over, the Belgians had added forty-six points to their total of 330. Out of the ten two-mile spurts, they finished first in five, Stockelynch carrying off the honors with four victories to his credit. In four others the team finished second.

Georgetti, who has shown considerable sprinting ability during the week, was the rider who started the jam which resulted in a stolen lap and which brought himself and Declerck into a tie with the Hill-McBeath and Fredericks-Stockelynch teams, one lap behind the six leading teams.

Georgetti Starts Jam.

The fourth sprint had barely ended when Georgetti sprinted away from the rest of the field, gaining a quarter of a lap before the pursuit started. He rode several laps unassisted, for DeClerck was unable to get up sufficient speed to render assistance for a time. As a result it looked as if the effort would prove fruitless, although the leading teams showed no indication to prevent the team wearing the Italian colors from gaining their objective.

DeClerck, however, took up the jamming and threw the entire field into a scramble. Goullet came to Grenda's assistance, but merely contented himself with seeing that none of the dangerous teams got away. Finally DeClerck rode up on the tail-end of the pack. Although the jam involved none of the leading combinations, there was some hard riding while the session lasted, the reliefs being frequent and all the riders being on the track most of the time.

There was no other change up to the time that the sprint session came to a close. Six teams remained tied in laps with Egg and Beckman leading in points, their total being 277. Goulet and Grenda have gradually crept up until they are now only nine points behind. Madden and Horan are third with 220 points. The other three teams in the lead are Kockler and Stockholm, Azzini and Nefatti and Brocco and Buysse.

The first sprint was a listless affair, which Stockelynch won. The Belgian rider maintained the lead for the last quarter of a mile. Grenda was second and Horan and Beckman followed at wheel-length intervals. The second sprint was won by McBeath with Madden, Egg and Goullet dividing the remaining points. There was some rough riding during the last few turns, McBeath passing Fredericks on the inside and jostling the Belgian.

Following the third sprint, which was won by Stockelynch, Buysse hit up his pace and, closely followed by Grenda, opened a slight margin on the other riders. Buysse was relieved by Brocco but Goullet took up the pursuit and Brocco soon decided it was a bad job.

A few seconds later Georgetti tried to get away, but Madden rode him up on the track and he was unable to get into open territory. Madden was booed by the crowd for his tactics.

Goullet nipped Fredericks in the last lap of the fourth sprint, barely getting his wheel across the line ahead of the Belgian rider. It was the first time that Goullet made a bid during the session.

Georgetti-Declerck Gain Lap.

While the riders were coasting around on the early part of the fifth sprint, Georgetti started a jam which resulted in a gained lap for himself and his new partner, Declerck, putting the team within one lap of the leaders. Declerck was in the lead at the finish of the sprint, followed over the line by Stockelynch, Grenda and Brocco.

Madden accounted for the sixth sprint when at the sound of the bell he shot out of fourth position and past all except Fredericks, who kept in front until the stretch, where Madden's speed carried him to victory.

Stockelynch out-jockeyed Horan in the sevtnh sprint and Fredericks was the winner of the eight sprint, which was a duel between him and Norantonio. After being apparently hopelessly pocketed by Hill and Horan, Stockelynch shot out to win the ninth sprint, his fourth victory of the evening series, and Egg outmanoeuvred Fredericks in winning the final sprint.

Kopsky and Norantonio were presented with a lap by the other riders as a result of a jam that was started by Norantonio shortly before 11 o'clock. This put them three laps behind the leaders.

The results of the evening sprints follow:

First—Stockelynch, Grenda, Horan, Beckman.
Second—McBeath, Madden, Egg, Goullet.
Third—Stockelynch, Horan, Beckman, Hill.
Fourth—Goullet, Fredericks, Madden, Egg.
Fifth—Declerck, Stockelynch, Grenda, Brocco.
Sixth—Madden, Fredericks, Buysse, Kockler.
Seventh—Stockelynch, Horan, De Wolfe, Grenda.
Eighth—Fredericks, Norantonio, Egg, Goullet.
Ninth—Stockelynch, Horan, Hill, Grenda.
Tenth—Egg, Fredericks, Nefatti, Norantonio.

The standing of the teams at the conclusion of the 9 o'clock sprints and the points scored last night follow:

LEADERS.	Total.	Last Night.
Egg-Beckman	277	14
Goulett-Grenda	268	16
Madden-Horan	220	26
Kockler-Stockholm	74	1

Brocco-Buysse	25	3

Stockleynch-Fredericks	376	46
McBeath-Hill	301	9
Georgetti-Declerck	124	6
TWO LAPS BEHIND.
De Wolfe-Wynsdau	54	2
Grimm-Spencer	26	0
FOUR LAPS BEHIND.
Kopsky-Norantonio	48	5

Hill and McBeath were the big point gatherers in the afternoon sprints, adding thirty-one points to their team total. McBeath won two of the sprints, while the remaining points were made through seconds, thirds and fourths, the team scoring at least one point in each of the team two-mile dashes. Of the leading teams, Madden and Horan improved their lot the most, for they gathered twenty-seven points.

Class D—101st Cavalry vs. 105th Field Artillery.

The two outstanding classes in the national indoor polo championships will start tonight when the intercollegiate and Class A tournaments will get under way, one at the 101st Cavalry Armory, Brooklyn, and the other at the Squadron A Armory, New York. In addition to these two classes, contests also will be played in the B, C and D divisions, which already have started toward the final round. In the opening of the Class A competition the present titleholders will go into action in defense of their crown when the Riding Club meets the Brooklyn Riding and Driving Club at the Squadron A ring. The first intercollegiate contest on the schedule brings together the Cornell trio and the Pennsylvania Military College horsemen at the Brooklyn armory.

The Riding Club Class A team this year will have an entirely different line-up from the one which captured the national honors last season. George C. Sherman will take the field at No. 1 in the place of J. Fahys Jr. Hugh B. Blackwell will be at the No. 2 position instead of W. A. Harriman, who is abroad, and Walter Camp Jr. will take the place of R. A. Granniss at back.

Both Sherman and Blackwell were members of the American team which won the international challenge cup presented by John R. Townsend, from the representatives of Great Britain last year. The new Riding Club combination will aggregate a total handicap of 19 goals, while the Brooklyn Riding and Driving Club will send a team on the tan bark with an aggregate of 15 goals and will receive a handicap of four points at the start of the contest.

The Brooklyn combination will consist of Jerry Smith, a six-goal man, at No. 1; Harold C. Parsons, rated at five goals, at No. 2, and Bernard Spence, carrying four goals, at back. Blackwell will be the highest rated player in the game, being one of the two men listed in the Indoor Polo Association with nine goals. Sherman and Camp are both five-goal men.

The intercollegiate contest is expected to bring a great crowd of spectators to the 101st Cavalry Armory. Six teams have entered the event and some of the closest competition in the tournament is promised. All of the intercollegiate contests will be played without handicap.

TIGERS TO HAVE BIG DAY.

Hockey Game With Yale Will Be One of Four Major Contests.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 7.—With four major contests scheduled for tomorrow, Princeton athletes face the most important day of the Winter season. The hockey, swimming and water polo teams will meet Yale while the basketball team will meet Pennsylvania in an intercollegiate contest.

The hockey team is badly crippled by the loss of several stars, Sayles, Trenholm and Stout being out of the game because of injuries, and Davis because of ineligibility. A Yale victory will mean the Big Three championship for the Elis while a Princeton victory will produce a triple tie, Harvard having lost to Yale and won from Princeton in the series.

COWARD DEFEATS MORGAN AT SQUASH

Outgenerals Opponent and Gains Final Round in National Amateur Tourney.

HYDE CONQUERS GUERNSEY

Harvard Club Star Plays Steady Game and Wins Semi-Final Match, 15-7, 15-9, 15-13.

Yale and Harvard will meet on the squash tennis courts of the Princeton Club at 3 o'clock this afternoon for the national amateur championship. Yesterday afternoon in the semi-final round of the tournament Thomas R. Coward of the Yale Club defeated Hewitt Morgan of the Harvard Club at 15—7, 15—6, 15—4, and Fillmore Van S. Hyde of the Crimson eliminated Otis Guernsey of Elis at 15—7, 15—9, 15—13. Both finalists, who have won the championship in previous years, reached the title round without being extended.

Guernsey, who defeated R. Earl Fink, the defending champion, on Thursday, played brilliant squash against Hyde, and the play reached thrilling heights at times, but there was never any doubt as to which was the better player of the two. Coward won far more easily against Morgan than was expected, playing as magnificent squash as he has shown on any court. The final match today promises to equal in interest any of the fourteen years during which the title has been played for.

Coward's straight-wall smashes and his court covering did not give Morgan a chance to show his best squash. The Crimson player went into the lead at 7—4 in the first game, mainly on the other's errors, but as soon as Coward had found himself it was practically a walk-away for him. The Yale star hit the ball with murderous force, catching his opponent out of position on the opposite side of the court again and again. Occasionally these straight-wall smashes returned so fast from the front wall that Morgan was unable to get out of the way of them and was hit in the face or the body and lost the point. Morgan, as usual, played a slow ball, seeking to earn his pointso n angle shots and position play. Only occasionally did he maul the ball and he won hardly more than three points in the match on smashes.

He played a faster game than ordinarily though, for Coward's attack was so cyclonic that the other had to keep on the jump every second. The Yale man maintained a terrific pace, never letting down except for a short period toward the end of the second game. With marvelous agility he twisted and dashed around the court, taking the ball from every sort of position and sending it back with an attacking shot.

Morgan Is Powerless.

Morgan was overwhelmed by the fury of the attack at times and it was apparent that he realized the futility of trying to stem it. It was impossible to plug all the gaps in his court before the devastating fire of Coward's smashes, and his own shots, no matter how skillfully placed, were recovered by the tireless Yale star. Morgan's best strokes were made mainly when Coward had the hand, so that he did not win points on them.

After leading at 7—4 in the first game, Morgan never stood a chance of winning. Coward went into the lead at 9—7 with a run of 5 points in his eighth hand, scoring three times on placements and getting his two other points on an out and a telltale. Neither player added anything to his total in the ninth inning, and in the tenth the Yale man ran six for the game at 15—7. Two misses by Morgan, who was caught out of position on the first; a telltale, a service ace and two straight-wall smashes for placements were the points.

Morgan won the first point of the second game on an out by Coward. The latter got the service and ran four, playing the ball so skillfully that twice in succession Morgan had to take it off his feet. A placement accounted for the third point and then Coward drove the ball with savage power to hit Morgan on the rebound. The Yale star added three points to his total in the next hand and five more in the three following. With the score 12—2 in his favor he paused for a spell and did not win a point for the next five hands, in which time Morgan added four to his total, winning three of them on placements that won applause from the gallery. Coward then scored on a placement, the ball hitting the other, and brought the game to an end in the next hand with a run of two.

Coward Takes the Lead.

Morgan played with little spirit at the start of the final game and was guilty of frequent error-making. Coward went into a lead of 7—1 in the first four hands and increased it to 10—2, a corner shot and a placement that caught Morgan far out of position accounting for two of his points. After the Crimson player had won two points Coward brought the game to an end by running 5. The last point was won on a miss by Morgan of a round-the-corner shot by Coward.

Both Hyde and Guernsey played a sensational squash in the other semi-final. The Harvard star maintained a position in the forward court and there volleyed and smashed in the most dazzling style. Guernsey furnished stiff opposition and the rallies were of the most interesting sort, causing the gallery to burst into applause again and again. Both men made astonishingly fine gets, with Guernsey doing most of the running. Hyde placed his shots so well and manoeuvered so prettily for position that the other was kept moving fast to get his racquet on the ball. The result was that after long, hard-fought rallies he was usually the one to make the errors and Hyde won the first two games by a margin of almost two points to one.

In the third game Guernsey ran five points in a single inning and led at 6—0. Hyde then spurted and got twelve points while holding his opponent to one. The score went to 1—12. Guernsey got the next point and was within one of setting the game. But Hyde brought the game to an end after a sensational rally, scoring his fifteenth and final point.

CENTIMETER TAKES URSULINE HANDICAP

Bernhardt's 6-Year-Old Beats Moonraker by Half a Length at New Orleans.

PARKE RIDES THE WINNER

Also Captures Second Race With Sizzle—Mary Dear Best in Juvenile Event.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, March 7.—The Greentree Stable's Broomstick colt, Moonraker, was beaten by half a length this afternoon in the Ursuline Handicap at Jefferson Park by T. H. Bernhardt's six-year-old horse, Centimeter. Mrs. Whitney's colt was asked to take up 122 pounds and he found it too much of a task to bring it home in front. Centimeter covered the five and one-half furlongs in the fast time of 1:06 3-5. Parke was in the saddle and the winner carried 119 pounds over the fast track.

Only six were named overnight and all went to the post, with Moonraker the public choice at 6 to 5, while Centimeter was well fancied and backed down to 9 to 5 at post time. There was considerable play on Tuscola at 4 to 1. Centimeter, which ran many good races at the Fair Grounds, was up to his best form. He was away well and saved much ground all through the race. At the end he held on gamely and outstayed Moonraker.

The Greentree entry was away fast from the barrier and followed Centimeter, running wide and under restraint. He came fast in the last furlong under a hard ride. Mrs. R. M. Hoots's Jack Atkin mare, Tuscola, was taken back sharply when she raced into close quarters in the first quarter mile and again before the stretch was reached. She tired in the last furlong, but was four lengths in front of Raffles to take the short end of the money. S. Cowan's Last One lived up to his name, the gelding bringing up the rear.

Fourteen in Juvenile Race.

Fourteen answered the call for the opening four-furlong dash for the juveniles and they went away to a good start after five minutes at the post. E. C. Walker's filly Mary Dear came home in front. The daughter of Moss Fox and Dispatch, got away nicely and was lucky all through the sprint. She moved into the lead with a rush and held on well under a strong ride to outstay E. W. Newman's Little Jimmy. Mary Dear was a length to the good past the finishing post.

J. C. Furst's filly Sizzle, with Parke up took the second race, which was for three-year-olds exclusively over the six-furlong route Fifteen went to the post, with the winner the public choice backed down to 6 to 5. From an outside post position the daughter of Frizzle and Lady Fanchon moved up steadily after going the first quarter and drew out in the stretch drive to win easily.

Sympathy Is Easy Winner.

T. M. Botts's McGee filly Sympathy, which has been racing extremely well at the Fair Grounds, was the overwhelming favorite in the fifth race at a mile. She was heavily played and backed down to 9 to 20 at post time. The filly had the post position on the rail, was away like a shot when the barrier rose and raced in front all the way. She had a lot left at the end and won with ease by three lengths from Miss Fortune.

Norwegian Yachtsmen Enter Olympics; Challenge British

Copyright, 1924, by Chicago Tribune Co.

CHRISTIANIA, March 7. — The Norwegian Royal Yacht Club has definitely decided to take part in the Olympic regatta in the six and eight meter classes at Havre and in the whip class at Meulen. The club has also sent to England a challenge for the Seawanhaka Cup, offered by Americans and won for the last two years by British yachts. If the challenge is accepted a regatta will probably be held off Clyde in August.

BABBLING IS FIRST IN HAVANA FEATURE

Florida Stable Filly Finishes With a Rush and Wins Easily —Irish Lace Victor.

HAVANA, March 7.—A race for three-year-olds at a mile and fifty yards, which was featured by the Cuba-American Jockey Club this afternoon was won by the Florida Stable filly Babbling. Ridden by W. McCabe, Babbling trailed off the pace until rounding the far turn, where she moved up on the outside. Entering the homestretch she went to the front with a rush and at the end won in rather handy fashion from Mrs. Gardner.

Irish Lace won the first race for two-year-olds in easy fashion. She was ridden by H. Callahan and raced under restraint until straightened out in the homestretch, where she overhauled the tiring pacemaker Great Waters and beat the latter two lengths and a half.

EAGLE THREE GIVES MISS COLLETT TITLE

Beats Mrs. Hurd at the 540-Yard Sixteenth for Belleair Honors, 3 and 2.

BOTH REACH TURN IN 40

Victor Is One Down at Tenth, but Squares Match on Twelfth Green With Birdie Three.

BELLEAIR HEIGHTS, Fla., March 7.—Miss Glenna Collett of Providence won the Belleair championship today when she defeated Mrs. Dorothy 2Campbell Hurd of Merion Cricket in the final round, 3 and 2.

The match was close and exciting and was enjoyed immensely by a large gallery up to the twelfth hole, where it turned abruptly in Miss Collett's favor. She was 1 down approaching this green, but a birdie 3 squared the match. She won the fourteenth and Mrs. Hurd took three putts at the short fifteenth. Both played into a ditch, and had to lose a stroke. Miss Collett won the hole with a five.

The match ended in a burst of glory for the Providence girl on the long sixteenth. This hole measures 540 yards, but Miss Collett was in the middle of the green with her second shot, twelve feet from the hole. She sank the putt for an eagle 3. Golfers here say that is the first time a 3 has ever been made. This gave Miss Collett the hole and the match, making the fourth tournament she has won in the South this Winter.

Alex Smith, who has been here for fourteen years, insists that no threes have ever been scored on the twelfth green until today and few stars have ever duplicated Miss Collett's feat in reaching the green with a second shot.

The match today was well played from the very beginning. Both were out in 40, with Mrs. Hurd leading by one hole. She was playing exceptionally good golf and it looked as if the match would surely go to the last green. Miss Collett was driving a long ball, but Mrs. Hurd was evening the score with her very accurate short game.

PARSONS BEATS CHAPMAN.

Wins From Medalist and Gains Final at Pinehurst, 2 and 1.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 7.—Donald Parsons defeated J. D. Chapman of Greenwich, the medalist, by 2 and 1, in the semi-finals of the twentieth annual Spring tournament here today. Twice, while pressed hard, the Youngstown player, who is the defending champion, played his ball from sand pits to drop it within inches of the cup, from where he holed out for life-saving halves.

Rokuro Akahoshi of Pine Valley defeated William McPhail of Brooklyn, 2 and 1. McPhail is one of the best amateurs in the Massachusetts district.

Parsons exhibited his skill with the niblick for the first time on the sixth green, where he shot his ball from the trap for the pin. There was plenty of spin in the ball and it stopped almost where it fell. A four, and a half was the result. He repeated the performance on the ninth and was all even with Chapman, both having a 41 going out. Parsons won the tenth, eleventh and fourteenth holes and then came out of a trap to halve the fifteenth. He was 2 up when the seventeenth hole was halved in threes.

McPhail won the first hole in 6 and the second with a 5, but the next two were halved.

Both players overdrove the seventeenth and then left themselves ten-footers. McPhail putted and missed, but Akahoshi's tap sent the ball straight into the cup for what proved to be the winning stroke.

LIMITS AND REACTIONS.

It was a mistake to suppose that there was no limit to which the Senate committee would not go in making public private telegrams. Ex-Secretary Fall's lawyer put in an appearance yesterday to protest against publishing private communications between him and his client. They are privileged. Senator Walsh saw the point and stated that no alleged evidence of that kind would hereafter be placed in the public record. He seemed to be a little chagrined, as himself a lawyer, at the slip which the committee had made, but did not express mortification at the way in which it had handled the private and innocent telegrams of the President of the United States. It would be absurd to expect as much consideration for the Chief Executive as for a lawyer.

Some of the new telegrams given out yesterday may add to the gayety of nations, but scarcely to their understanding. After Senator Heflin had summoned on Friday all his vast resources of logic, rhetoric and moral discrimination to prove that the word "principal" in one of the McLean dispatches must have meant the President, it was slightly amusing to find from yesterday's testimony that a brother Senator was really implicated. In what the latter, Senator Curtis, had done there was nothing blameworthy, but the whole mystery made of the telegram is a striking illustration of the false scents on which the Senatorial hounds are all the time running off merely at a word. Senator Heflin's ridiculous mistake may deter others—nothing can deter him—from rushing out with a sinister interpretation of a telegram that is on the point of being shown to mean nothing culpable.

One of the dispatches put in evidence spoke of the "reaction" which sets in when false or exaggerated charges fall to the earth. This is certain to be the case when the President of the United States is concerned. Loose and vague attacks upon his character will rebound upon their authors with terrific force when it becomes plain that they had nothing to go upon except rumor and their own malicious inferences. When you strike a king, said Emerson, you must make sure that you kill him, or it will go hard with you. The ineffective blows aimed at President Coolidge by hasty Senators will hurt them more than they possibly can him. Americans do not like to see the personal rectitude of the President reflected upon in any way; and when it is done from low partisan motives, and without adequate justification by unimpeachable evidence, they reserve a special kind of wrath for the offenders.

POLITICS VS. COMMON SENSE.

Certain Democrats and the Radicals in both houses oppose the adoption of the joint resolution reducing by 25 per cent. the personal income taxes to be paid this year. They don't care anything about tax reduction apart from its political bearing. If the provision for the instant reduction of personal income taxes is kept in the general Tax bill, however objectionable some other clauses of that bill may be to him, the President, they think, will either have to sign it or, if he vetoes it, attach to himself and his party the "odium" of preventing tax reduction, and, in particular, a form of it known to be generally popular. On the other hand, if the personal income tax clause is passed separately, he will be at liberty to veto the general bill.

This is a method of "playing politics" that looks absurd to less gifted intelligences than that of Senator Pat Harrison, for example. All that the Democrats have to do is to vote for the resolution. Then there will be, as there should be, no politics about it. At Washington, as at Albany, the two parties will have agreed to an intelligible and immediate personal income tax reduction. Looked at even from the ground of taxation for politics only, it is a dangerous measure to oppose. Millions of income-tax payers are getting nervous. They are delaying to fill their income-tax blanks until they know whether they are to have the benefit of the proposed reduction before March 15. They will be disappointed and disgusted if they don't get it. If the joint resolution doesn't pass, they will be in a state of uncertainty, perhaps for months. If it does, they will know before March 15 exactly what they are to pay on their incomes for 1923. They will know whom to thank if that knowledge is denied them.

We will not speak of the additional administrative troubles that the postponement will cause the Treasury, in the matter of refunds and the division of the reduction among instalments; of the slower pouring in of tax money on account of the increased number of even small taxpayers who are waiting for the reduction. These considerations are nothing to the taxers for politics only. A clear and simple plan that every taxpayer can understand is offered. It is not wise, even from the sordid ground of political advantage, to resist it.

The voice of Mr. Crisp of Georgia, who fought the reduction clause in the general bill, is still for war. He says that "these taxes have already "been collected from the consumers, "and the reduction would only be a "bonus to business." Apparently, income-tax payers are not consumers; and we had thought that Mr. Crisp, in common with sounder economists, held that an income tax can't be "passed along." Perhaps Mr. Crisp has confused the personal income with other Federal taxes. At any rate, the great majority of income-tax payers, including the whole "salariat," will be greatly obliged if Mr. Crisp will communicate his secret. Business is a wicked thing to some politicians, but, in a good sense, this tax reduction will be a bonus to business. It will stimulate business because it will allow a tidy sum of millions to be saved and invested in business enterprises. Moreover, it will make tax reduction, though incomplete, a reality and a force, quicken confidence and give assurance that more reasonable income taxes are to be the future policy of the Government. To business certainty is vital. Mr. Crisp and his friends want to leave it in doubt.

Mr. Crisp blurts out another underlying political motive: "Yet they say "they have no money to pay a sol-"diers' bonus." Billions to give away for votes. Tax reduction twinned with tax increase! Mr. Crisp is ingenuous. It is to be supposed that the majority of the Democrats in Congress have a little more political, as well as economic, shrewdness.

THE FALL OF THE FRANC.

The decline of the franc this week below 4 cents, as against a price of 5 cents at the beginning of January and 7⅜ in January, 1923, naturally attracted wide attention. It evoked a multitude of explanations, none of which has been entirely convincing. Most of them harked back to the French Government's mistaken policy, in its budgets since the war, of stating the greater part of the estimated deficit as due to "recoverable expenditure"—meaning that it would be covered by the illusory German reparation payments. Curiously enough, however, last Autumn's talk of "the franc following the mark" is no longer heard. One reason for this is the fact that France is now taking the remedial financial measures which Germany made no effort to adopt until the mark had become virtually worthless. But a stronger reason is that the markets have come to understand the radical difference between the French and German situations.

As far back as 1922 and 1921, Germany was doing two things which France has never even considered. Germany sold continuously at a discount on foreign markets huge sums of actual paper marks, in order to build up foreign credits, and she met the rapidly increasing public deficit through Government borrowings at the bank. In 1922 the Reichsbank's loans, much the greater part of which were made to the Treasury and all of which were offset by new paper currency issues, rose from 132 billion marks to 1¼ trillions, and the process went on far more rapidly in 1923. But France has never shipped out her paper currency for sale on foreign exchange markets, and as for the Government's debt to the Bank of France, that was reduced from 27 billion francs in the middle of 1921 to 21¼ billions in March of 1922, and now stands at 23 billions. France was able to make this reduction, notwithstanding her enormous outlay for reconstruction of the devastated area, because her Government did what Germany refused to do—financed the public deficit through public loans subscribed by her own people.

That the public debt as a consequence reached proportions difficult to manage, and that the Government was forced as a consequence to rescind the agreement of 1922 for arbitrary reduction of two billion francs per annum in its debt to the bank, are well-known facts. They doubtless account largely for the present uneasiness of the markets and the action of the franc. But the singular aspect of the matter, the real source of the exchange market's perplexity over this latest decline, is that the franc should be falling most violently and should be reaching its lowest price, not when the debt situation presented itself with no apparent remedy in sight (which was true two or three months ago), but when powerful remedial measures to meet the deficit by higher taxes are about to be enacted and when most people have the feeling that a practicable "reparations settlement" is in sight.

KEEPING GERMANY DISARMED.

The vehemence of Foreign Minister Stresemann in denouncing Ramsay MacDonald's proposal that supervision of Germany's military establishment be resumed brings into relief the common sense of the latter's contention that if Germany has nothing to hide she has nothing to fear from having that fact established before the world by the Interallied Mission of Control. Mr. MacDonald's logic is obvious. If, as the German Government claims, all the stipulations of the Versailles Treaty relating to the disarmament of Germany have been complied with, there is no reason for not allowing the Allies to prove it.

Dr. Stresemann is not alone in taking a recalcitrant attitude. The German Nationalist press is bitter. Even the liberal Vossische Zeitung has held during the last months that the resumption of military control would be an infringement of German sovereignty and an insult to German integrity. That the officers and royalists who are openly urging preparations for the arrival of "Der Tag" should resent the proposal angrily is natural. They consider the present plight of Germany as merely an interlude, and look forward to the time when they can finish the work that was interrupted by the armistice in 1918. These are the same persons who insist that Germany never suffered military defeat and that she was "tricked" into surrender by the Fourteen Points. But why the others should feel this way if Germany is disarmed, as they contend, is not easy to understand.

Supervision of Germany's military establishment has been a cause of friction between the French and British ever since the Disarmament Commission stopped work last April as a result of the failure of the Germans to cooperate. Many Englishmen in high places have held that Germany was disarmed in complete accord with the treaty stipulations. Frenchmen in authority have vigorously denied this and asserted that Germany is secretly rearming. But the fact that the Council of Ambassadors has accepted Mr. MacDonald's suggestion for a final inventory removes this matter from the realm of unsettled questions.

There is no point in blinking the fact that the demilitarization of Germany is one of the most important factors in the permanent European settlement. Not only must she be disarmed, but she must be kept disarmed. Otherwise France will maintain large forces against a renewed war, and other nations, in turn, fearing a strong Germany or an overpowerful France, will continue overarmed. Security for France is essential. With the memory of two wars still alive, the French are determined that their country shall not be made the scene of a third. Hence anything that places a check on Germany's arming not only removes a just cause for apprehension on the part of the French, but makes it possible for them to cut their military establishment.

HOW WOMAN SUFFRAGE WORKS.

That woman suffrage is not producing the results hoped for by its ardent advocates is not a pleasant thought. But in the February number of the Atlantic Monthly and in the March number of the Century Magazine two critics present discouraging facts. In her Atlantic article Mrs. A. R. Martin states that having spent fourteen months criss-crossing the United States, and having mingled freely in club, social and hotel life, she failed to find among women any large interest in public questions. "I am saying," she goes on, "that in my judg-"ment women generally are not inter-"ested in public affairs, national or "local, in the concrete or abstract." She specifies such subjects as lynchings, the World Court, the Sheppard-Towner law and Fundamentalism, and in each instance found either "total ignorance or general indifference." She raises the question whether American women have not brought enfranchisement upon themselves when in the mass they did not care for it:

> Whatever the explanation, I am forced to conclude that, among American women the world over, apart from those few disinterestedly thoughtful and those directly concerned, there is a lack of interest in public affairs, an apathy, an absence of concern, not so much in the issue at hand as in the principle behind it.

This is pretty definite, but Charles Edward Russell in his Century article is even more so. Not only does he dare to ask the question, "Is Woman Suffrage a Failure?" but he answers it with an even deeper note of discouragement. He begins by saying that the fears entertained about it expressed by politicians have not been realized. So far as they are concerned, nothing particular has happened. Where trouble, confusion and wreck were looked forward to by these gloomy political prophets, now not one of the disasters has come to pass that four years ago glowered so fearsomely upon the politician's trade. Not a boss has been unseated, not a reactionary committee wrested from the old-time control, not a convention has broken away from its familiar towage. Nothing has been changed, except that the number of docile ballot-droppers has approximately been doubled.

Congress contains only one woman member and she was elected out of respect to her late husband. It has been discovered that women will not vote for women. Out of five thousand members of State Legislatures chosen, only sixty-three were women. "Even "the most ardent woman suffragist, "like the humble presenter of these "facts, is forced to admit that so far "in public affairs the ennobling influ-"ence of womanhood is still a matter "of faith." Only one bright ray of sunlight illumines the drab picture. Women, it seems, are still as gentle, as feminine, as lovable as ever.

These opinions are not cited here as if they were the sum of the whole matter. But they clearly deserve fair consideration.

SOME DO OBJECT.

It is precisely because the city, to use the Mayor's own words, is proposing to sell its "gold dollars for 55 cents" that he will find some people objecting to taking any portion of Central Park for something else than park purposes—whatever that something else may be. This Park, in the heart of the congested city, is a most precious possession, something that we ought not for any consideration to part with, much less for what would be but a fractional part of its worth as an open space. Whatever the city might get for it would not be comparable in value with what it would give away.

It would be a most inconsistent and foolish policy for the city to acquire open spaces in outlying, sparsely settled parts of the growing city and at the same time restrict and diminish the area where the present need for open spaces is greatest, and so not only rob the present population of what has been held in trust for us, but also take away from generations to come what we ought to keep undiminished for them. The fact that 2,237½ acres have been added to the park area in the several boroughs may show, as Mr. Berolzheimer says, that they "are not trying to rob the parks," but it does not touch the fact that they are robbing Central Park. It is a diverting gesture to offer the aqueduct site of thirty-seven acres as if it were more than an offset for what it is proposed to surrender for the Art Centre site. The aqueduct site should and will eventually come to the Park Department of right. And as for the small space which the proposed buildings would occupy, Mr. Thomas Adams of the New York Plan Committee warns of the probable demand for increased acreage as the plan develops.

The Art and Music Centre is an institution that New York should have, but the people of this city are able to provide the land for it if their heart is set on it. It would be a reflection upon their interest in art or their sense of honest trusteeship if they were to rob the city of a natural gift which man cannot replace or repay by art.

NEEDS OF THE NAVY.

Admirals of the fleet which has been engaged in war games from Panama to Culebra had something to say about our naval deficiencies at the Union League Club dinner on Thursday night. Rear Admiral Cole, reminding the country that at the Washington limitation conference the United States relinquished its right to construct a naval base at Guam and to improve the Manila Bay fortifications, made a plea for such a base at Alameda, San Francisco. Our naval policy, which now requires that the battleship fleet be stationed in the Pacific most of the time, would seem to be futile without the Alameda base. Our Hawaiian outpost is vulnerable for want of a great Pacific Coast base. Beyond Hawaii the fleet could not operate in the event of war without fuel and supply ships in great numbers, as there is no advance base at either Guam or Manila. Therefore Hawaii and Alameda should be made ready with full equipment of material and personnel for all the needs of the navy on a war basis.

Rear Admiral Cole is quoted as saying that by the Washington naval treaty the United States is "obligated" to maintain the 5-5-3 ratio of armament. It was certainly the purpose of Secretary Hughes to extend the ratio from capital ships and airplane carriers to cruisers and all other auxiliaries. He made that plain in his proposals. The "total tonnage" of cruisers, flotilla leaders and destroyers was to be fixed for Great Britain and the United States at 450,000 tons and for Japan at 270,000 tons; of submarines, for Great Britain and the United States 90,000 tons, and for Japan 54,000 tons. In the discussions that followed, these proposals were finally dropped, and it became optional with all the parties to the conference to build auxiliaries without limit, except that cruisers were not to exceed 10,000 tons, nor to carry guns of a larger calibre than 8-inch. For the games and manoeuvres in the Caribbean, only two modern cruisers, the Omaha and the Richmond, were available. Eight more are nearing completion. For their displacement (7,500 tons) there will be no finer cruisers afloat, but they should be regarded as only the pioneers of the American light-cruiser strength, approximation to that of Great Britain, if not exact parity, being the aim. With a larger trade and more possessions in the seven seas, Great Britain perhaps needs more light cruisers than we do. At any rate, to build against her in strenuous competition does not appear to be necessary.

Fast supply ships and an adequate number of them are indispensable. And it would be fatuous not to keep up the merchant marine, for the day may come when liners and great cargo carriers will be sorely needed in an emergency. As Rear Admiral Pratt says, the United States may have "to go it alone." Rear Admiral Plunkett called for a powerful naval reserve, to be always ready. We cannot boast that we have an organization like that of Great Britain. The want of it is felt all the more because the American term of enlistment is short and the percentage of re-enlistments is not large. British crews are more seasoned than ours, and behind them is a strong reserve.

TWO NEW YORK BOYS.

That two boys, born in New York City, both students of a modest college in the city and graduated in successive years in the '80s, should on the same day become Cardinals is something of which the people of the city of their birth and training should, without regard to creed, be proud. And Manhattan College, their Alma Mater, has special reason to be solemnly glad. Patrick Joseph Hayes and George William Mundelein were as other boys of their time and years. Indeed, young Hayes was not so well off, being left an orphan when a small boy. The youthful Mundelein, whose grandfather was killed in one of the first battles of the Civil War, was offered a cadetship at the Naval Academy in Annapolis, but declined it to study for the priesthood. Each rose from the humblest position to an Archbishopric, and they now see their widening service crowned in the Church to which they have devoted their lives.

There will now be four American representatives in the College of Cardinals. While they are but a small group in the assembly of nearly seventy, it may be expected that these two new members, by reason of their personal qualifications as well as great practical experience, will, as the Vatican has suggested, add much strength to the highest Church councils and give the great American Catholic constituency a more adequate representation, not only numerically but geographically and personally—and one that has promise of long continuance, since both the prospective Cardinals are in the early prime of life.

Archbishop Hayes has a warm place in the hearts of the multitude of his coreligionists in this city and the respect of citizens at large. He is not only a patriot of proved devotion and public service, but a real New Yorker, and that is a distinction in this vast cosmopolis. Archbishop Mundelein has not been so long away from the Diocese of Brooklyn and out beyond the Alleghanies that he is not still claimed by this his mother city as one of her children. As they go forth on their joint pilgrimage to the Eternal City, they go with something more than ecclesiastical sanction. They have the good-will of the cities and the land which they have served while serving their Church. May they come back with renewed patriotic and spiritual zeal.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Archaeologists Were Not Invited.

Anxiety, if not something like despair, will be felt by archaeologists all over the world when they read of the reception and exhibition held by the Egyptian Government in the tomb of Tut-ankh-Amen on Thursday. It is true that the Egyptian officials make large promises as to what they are going to do in the future for the preservation and proper study of the wonderful and precious relics so strangely preserved for more than 3,000 years; but there was nothing to prove such intentions when the great crowd of people were admitted to the tomb simply to gratify an idle curiosity.

The affair was wholly in the nature of a raree show, with nobody present who could understand what was seen or to learn anything from it. Whether or not real Egyptologists were excluded, as none was there, it is evident that no effectual efforts to secure their presence was made, and the guarding of the treasures must have been left to men who had little appreciation of their value. But it was a great day for the tourists, and presumably there will be many more such days, with the spending of a lot of money and consequent prosperity for all the exploiters of strangers.

Incidentally, the occasion was turned to political advantage by those who are clamoring for the complete independence of Egypt and the abolition of all foreign control or supervision.

Later we may hear that the sarcophagus, the gilded mummy-case and the mummy itself of the Pharaoh have been rented out to the highest bidder for exhibition in other lands. We have men ourselves who would offer a million or so for the "American rights," and likely enough they could make money out of a "gate" of a dollar or two per head. Tut-ankh-Amen has been advertised magnificently, and there are no end of people who would be eager to pay for a glimpse of his well-preserved Majesty. By the time he came here, probably the invasion of Central Park would have become so easy that he could be exhibited there as one of many shows, entertainments and performances. The Board of Estimate couldn't be expected to object to that or any other like use of the Park, so long as alleyways were left between the multiplying buildings and access to the several ticket offices could be gained.

Denies It Seeks a Monopoly.

What any lawyer would call a good case has been made out by the spokesman of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in explaining why it is seeking to enjoin other broadcasting operations than its own and those of broadcasters who recognize its legal rights and pay the tribute it demands. Its asserted object is the protection of its many and important patents from unauthorized use, and there is not a little force in the company's statement that many of the devices now employed in radio-telephony were invented by or for it in its efforts—extremely successful efforts, by the way—to give the American public the best telephone service that is to be found anywhere in the world.

Mr. Whalen, New York's Commissioner of Plant and Structures, is extremely harsh in his characterization of the telephone company; but most of his charges, including that of desiring to establish a radio monopoly, it denies, and its contentions are considerably strengthened by its ability to say that it is not interested, directly or indirectly, in the manufacture and sale of radio receiving sets.

Undeniable, too, is what the company says about present conditions in the radio domain—conditions that will grow steadily worse if broadcasting is left in its present state of irresponsibility. How regulation is to be effected is a great and difficult problem. That the telephone company would like to undertake its solution is natural enough and not a crime. Possibly it foresees and wants to guard against the coming of a day when radio-telephony will replace ordinary telephony, and wants then to have the former in its hands as it now has the latter. Such a change is not very probable, however. Telegraphy did not replace the mail service, nor ordinary telephones the telegraph. All three have prospered and will continue to be needed, no matter what improvements may be made in radion.

He Acted After His Kind.

That unnamed member of the German Reichstag who so brilliantly illustrated his manners and his wisdom by browbeating and insulting three American women in a railway carriage is likely to get the same sort of appreciation from the more sensible of his fellow-countrymen that was allotted to the men of exactly his kind who prevented the half-masting of the flag of the German Embassy after Mr. Wilson's death. As it happened, the women who owned the luggage he thought was taking up room needed by his own have husbands of the highly articulate class, well able to make their resentment widely known; and while there are Germans, more than a few, who will approve the haughty legislator's manifestation of Teutonic and masculine superiority to foreigners in general, and women in particular, there are other Germans who have acquired a realizing sense of the fact that unpopularity is expensive and good-will an asset to be recovered as soon and as fast as possible.

So the Reichstag man will be scolded as harshly in Germany as out of it for getting into an unseemly and unnecessary squabble over next to nothing, instead of winning favor for himself and other Germans by a display of kindness and courtesy. He will be vastly surprised at this, of course, and more vastly aggrieved, when official apologies are made for his boorishness. As for the normally stupid railway guard who sided with him in the quarrel and reproved the women for contradicting a man, he probably will think himself cruelly ill-treated when he loses his job.

Liked for Reasons Unknown.

That annual mystery, the six-day bicycle race, has been presented again this week for the contemplation of psychologists, sociologists and the plain possessors of common sense. Again all these must puzzle over the interest which these absurd and meaningless contests have for thousands and thousands of men and women who are allowed to go about New York without guardians, and again, probably, they will abandon the problem as insoluble.

As now conducted, these races do not offer even the morbid joy of seeing men in a state of nearly complete exhaustion, suffering and almost dying on the track. That joy of other days was rather horrible, but at least it was understandable. Now there is not even that. Yet the crowds are as great as ever!

Poor old Barnum was called a humbug, but he always gave the public more for its money than do the managers of these strange affairs.

SEA CHANTEY.

Oh, say, do you know the sounding sea?
(Yo ho, my lads, with a boom, splash!)
Well, you'll know her now that you're out with me,
And you'll bow your head and you'll bend your knee
When she tunes herself to her highest key.
(Swish, boom, splash!)

Now say, do you get the taste o' salt?
(Yo ho, my lads, with a thud, smack!)
Do you find your sea-legs a bit at fault
When you see the waves over bulwark vault?
Can't you draw deep breath and the gale exalt?
(Boom, swish, thud!)

There, say, do you note the sudden lull?
(Yo ho, my lads, with a lip, lap!)
Do you lose your nerve when a lonely gull
Like a Bird of Fate seems to haunt our hull?
See the sunset now! Can you call that dull?
(Lip, lap, swish!)

I say, do you feel the joy of Night?
(Yo ho, my lads, with a splash, boom!)
When the watch is set and the ship made tight,
And we ride the waves in the soft moonlight,
Then you love the power of old Ocean's might.
(Splash, boom, swish!)

And say, do you catch that scent o' tar,
(Yo ho, my lads, with a long roll!)
And o' fish and hemp, and the creak o' spar?
There's the guiding light o' the good North Star,
So you're not so lost as you think you are!
(Roll, boom, splash!)

BLANCHE ELIZABETH WADE.

THE SOLDIER'S "STIPEND."

Washington's Letter Not Applicable to the Bonus Question.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As reported in your issue of today, State Commander Spafford compares the present bonus to land grants given to an ancestor of Senator Wadsworth for Revolutionary War services. He wrote to the Senator, of the Adjusted Compensation bill, "This bill provides for the payment of a debt owed by this Government," and continued:

"Certainly it is no more un-American to accept an insurance policy payable in twenty years than it was for your ancestors to have accepted land from the Government. Alexander Hamilton found a way to meet the claims of the army because of the depreciated value of the currency of his day. The present honored Secretary, with a following I regret to see, has found excuses to prevent the payment to the soldier of his stipend, but found money available to pay every other public creditor regardless of the service rendered."

In an address on Washington's Birthday, Mr. Spafford first tried to draw the historical parallel, giving a very touching quotation from a letter of Washington's, written in 1783 to the Governors of the thirteen Colonial States, asking for their cooperation in providing back pay for the soldiers, as follows:

"Where is the man to be found who wishes to remain indebted for the defense of his person and property by the blood and bravery of others, without making one generous effort to pay the debt of honor and gratitude? In what part of the continent shall we find any man or body of men who would not blush to stand up and propose measures coldly calculated to rob the soldier of his stipend and the public creditor of his due?"

What are the facts? The Revolution ended with the Government practically bankrupt and with large claims held by the army against it for pay, as promised in the terms of enlistment, long overdue. It was for the settlement of this contractual debt that Washington was asking the cooperation of the State Governors. When the Government under the Constitution was established these claims were still outstanding, and, as the currency was still unstable and the Government burdened with debt, Secretary Hamilton wisely determined that grants of land, which was then a drug on the market, were the most economical way to settle these valid claims.

The present situation is totally different. Senator Wadsworth and Secretary Mellon are not trying to "prevent the payment to the soldier of his stipend," and the soldiers are not "public creditors." Stipend is a word referring to payment for services according to the terms of a contract. The soldier was discharged fully paid and with a bonus of a month's pay besides—it is interesting to note that the present demand for the bonus originally grew out of a desire to increase this bonus—and consequently he has no claim against the Government comparable to the Revolutionary claims. Mr. Spafford is beginning to rival Mr. Hirshfield as a historian.

No debt is owed to the soldiers by the Government of the United States. No contracts would be broken by the failure to pay a bonus, as would have been done if the back pay of the Revolutionary soldiers had not been settled. If the people of the United States out of their generosity, soft-heartedness or light-headedness wish to present the soldier or any one else with money, insurance policies, land or what-not, that is another matter. Then, I maintain, with Senator Wadsworth and others, that it would be against the best interests of the soldiers themselves, as well as of the country in general, to provide for a bonus, extra pay, adjusted compensation, or whatever other term may sound better.

STOLEN PARK ACRES.

Indignant Protest Against Proposed Site for the City's Art Centre.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Six acres of Central Park for an art centre! Then why not six more for an art circle, six more for an art bubble—and surely the art of grafting should be rewarded by being allotted six additional ones! In any event, whether six or sixty-six times six, they are acres stolen from the parents and children of New York City, who have more need of the art in acres of green grass and the soft shadows of trees and shrubs than they have of any art in brick and mortar that rears itself to fling more life-crushing shadows upon us.

There is no enterprise in the name of art or hen's-teeth that if promoted by practiced guile cannot convoke the names and favors of a scattering of the injudicious "Mighty." What use have they of the sunlight and soft earth of these six acres? They have the sweet country air to motor through. What matters a little green grass more or less—how can it compare to a temple for the promotion of the particular art or arts with which their honored names are identified?

If this art centre is worth promoting, as I dare say it is, let its patrons bestir themselves and pay the cost of legitimately acquired land, and not put a curse upon their project by the destruction of more art than they could ever rear to replace it.

Gift Tax Illegal?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On the heels of the report that almost one hundred and twenty-four millions of taxes "illegally or erroneously collected" have had to be paid back by the Federal Government, Congress is now proposing a new illegal tax which will make a new legal mess for lawyers to fight over while the business of the country suffers. From the Congressional Record of Feb. 29 it appears that a tax is proposed "upon the transfer of property by gift whether made directly or indirectly, by every person whether a resident or nonresident of the United States." The tax is to be a tax on the giver based on "the sum of all the gifts made during the calendar year" and "where property is sold or exchanged for less than a fair consideration in money or money's worth, then the amount by which the fair market value of the property exceeded the consideration received shall * * * be deemed a gift." An information return is to be made each year of all such gifts or transfers with certain arbitrary exemptions as to amounts.

Mere ownership or the mere existence of the owner with the capacity to give cannot thus be taxed by Congress because "direct taxes" must be apportioned among the States according to the census as required by the Constitution. When analyzed, the proposed tax is a poll tax on generous persons which is as arbitrary and illegal as the old law school example of a poll tax on red-haired men—a "direct tax" based on arbitrary discrimination.

BEGIN STATE BONUS WORK.

Controller Fleming Is Arranging Floating of $45,000,000 Bond Issue.

ALBANY, March 7.—Machinery for administering the New York State soldier bonus and distributing $45,000,000 among 525,000 World War veterans is being assembled. An office equipment firm yesterday began putting filing cabinets and other furniture in a room at the Capitol which will contain duplicates of all the records now on file in the office of the Adjutant General.

Controller Fleming is in New York City arranging for the floating of the $45,000,000 bond issue. The life of the bonds has not been definitely fixed but it is expected that it will be twenty years. The Controller believes that as the bonds are tax exempt, the premium from their sale will more than pay the estimated cost of administering the payment of the bonus, or $600,000.

Duplicating the records of the Adjutant General's office will be completed in about six weeks and by that time, it is hoped, the bonds will have been placed on the market and there will be money available to begin immediate payment of the bonus.

Frank S. Harris of this city has been appointed Director of the work. All employes of the commission will be appointed by that body and no man will be employed who was not in the military or naval service in the World War. It is expected that checks in payment of the bonus will be sent out at the rate of 1,000 a day, and that the work will be completed within eighteen months.

Application blanks will be available at banks, post offices and veterans' organization headquarters. Each application must be accompanied by a certified copy of the applicant's discharge from service.

SAYS BLOOM SHOULD STAY.

Crisp States Chandler Voted Against Unseating in Similar Case.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Representative Charles F. Crisp, Democrat, of Georgia, today issued a statement relative to the action of the House Committee on Elections No. 3 in recommending that Representative Sol Bloom of the Nineteenth New York District be unseated and the seat be given to former Representative Walter M. Chandler.

Mr. Crisp stated that in the Sixty-third Congress Mr. Chandler voted with other members of the Election Committee to retain Representative J. M. C. Smith of Michigan, whose election was contested on virtually the same grounds as those applying in the Bloom-Chandler contest.

"The Sixty-third Congress was Democratic and the committee which passed on the Smith case was controlled by Democrats," said the Crisp statement. "The committee was a unit in approving the legality of Smith's election, and the House adopted the report without debate. A Democrat, Claude S. Carney, sought to unseat Smith on charges which he insisted would warrant throwing out the entire vote in certain election precincts. The Democratic committee refused to sustain these charges.

The precedent thus established, to which Mr. Chandler gave his assent, according to Mr. Crisp, would justify the House in retaining Mr. Bloom.

MORGENTHAU VISITS LONDON

Reports Half of 100,000 Greek Refugees Provided With Work.

LONDON, March 7 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—Henry Morgenthau, Chairman of the League of Nations Commission for the Relief of Greek Refugees, arrived in London today to interview a number of political and financial personages in connection with his work in Athens. Mr. Morgenthau was invited to London by Sir Eric Drummond, General Secretary of the League of Nations. He will report to the League's Council.

Mr. Morgenthau declares that of the 100,000 refugees about half have already been provided with work, and that the $1,000,000 lent to the commission by the Bank of England is being used to provide tools, animals and other requisites for reconstruction.

Concerning the unrest in Macedonia, Mr. Morgenthau declares that if Greece were to become [illegible], Macedonia would remain quiet.

CEREMONIES AWAIT FUTURE CARDINALS

Archbishops Hayes and Mundelein Will Have an Active Time in Rome.

ELABORATE FAREWELL HERE

Diocesan Bodies Organize Hastily to Cheer Prelates Sailing This Morning.

ROME, March 7 (Associated Press).—Strenuous days lie ahead for Archbishop Hayes and Archbishop Mundelein on their arrival in Rome to receive the high recognition that the Catholic Church is to bestow upon them, elevation to the cardinalate.

Numerous formalities are to be exchanged by the American prelates and the members of the Sacred College, such as visits and receptions, prior to the secret consistory on March 24, when they will be elevated to the cardinalate, and the public consistory on March 27, when they will formally receive their red hats.

Then, after the latter consistory, there is to be the ceremony of giving to the new Cardinals possession of their titular churches, which usually is an elaborate function, attended by the prelates of the Papal Court, other high church dignitaries, the hundreds of Americans making up the American colony, and hordes of tourists who invade Rome on such occasions.

No hint has yet been made as to what churches are to be assigned to the Cardinals. The announcement of these usually comes after the holding of the public consistory.

Rome is preparing for a great influx of Americans for the coming ceremonies. As the prelates are to be elevated just a little more than three weeks before Easter, it is thought certain that there will be a rush of thousands of American pilgrims from all parts of Europe to the Holy City.

Archbishops Are Notified.

Archbishop Hayes of New York and Archbishop Mundelein of Chicago are sailing for Rome this morning with the full knowledge that they will be created Cardinals. They will go aboard the Berengaria of the Cunard Line at 9 o'clock. The vessel sails at 10.

The Catholics of New York will give their archbishop an elaborate farewell, although there has been very little time to prepare for it. Archbishop Mundelein arrived yesterday afternoon from Chicago and was driven immediately to the residence of Archbishop Hayes, 452 Madison Avenue, where he was a guest of his brother prelate.

Both prelates were born in New York, they went to school together in Manhattan College, and now they together will receive the red hats.

All yesterday afternoon and up to a late hour last night Archbishop Hayes stood in his drawing room and received callers. Until yesterday he did not acknowledge any congratulations or felicitations. Up to that time he had received only a summons to come to Rome, but yesterday there arrived a message from Cardinal Gasparri, Secretary of State at the Vatican, stating that the Pontiff was pleased to inform the Archbishop of New York that it would be the pleasure of his Holiness to nominate him for Cardinal at a consistory to be held March 24.

Immediately the Right Rev. John J. Dunn, Auxiliary Bishop of the archdiocese, began preparations for a farewell to the Cardinal-elect in which all the principal diocesan organizations will have a part.

It is known that Archbishop Mundelein received a communication from the Vatican of virtually the same nature, although he stated he would have nothing to say until this morning.

Procession to the Docks.

The two Cardinals-elect, followed by scores of automobiles, will leave the archiepiscopal residence at 8:30 this morning. The two Archbishops will ride together to the Cunard dock, where there will be hundreds of priests and laity to congratulate them and bid them farewell.

A motorcycle squad will escort their automobile. Bishops of the Province of New York and all the Monsignori of the archdiocese will ride in cars to the Cunard line.

Among the organizations which will send delegations are the Catholic Club headed by Martin Conboy, the President; the St. Vincent De Paul Society, the Diocesan Holy Name Society, the Knights of Columbus, the Consultors of the Archdiocese, the trustees of St. Patrick's Cathedral. Some 350 members of the Catholic Club will be waiting at the pier.

It is planned to assemble the 400 boys in Cathedral College, of which the Archbishop was the first President, in the avenue in front of the house and have them salute as the Archbishop appears on the steps and enters his car.

In addition to the party already announced to accompany Archbishop Hayes to Rome, two other local priests yesterday booked passage. These are the Rev. Cornelius F. Crowley, pastor of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, New Rochelle, and the Rev. Louis Riccio, pastor of the Italian Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, West New Brighton, Staten Island.

Archbishop Hayes's Party.

The other members of Archbishop Hayes's party are:

Mgr. Michael J. Lavelle, rector of the Cathedral; Mgr. George J. CHARITY TAX BILL PASSED AT TRENTON

Both Houses Put Through Measure for Benefit of State Institutions.

LAST NIGHT FOR ACTION

Appropriations Total $17,441,598—Utility Corporations Win Fight on Street Paving.

TRENTON, N. J., March 7 (Associated Press).—The Legislature entered the last hours of the 1924 session, in so far as the passing of bills was concerned, with the half-mill tax for institutional development adopted by both houses and with the appropriation bill ready for third reading in the Senate. Republican members of the Assembly in caucus agreed to put through the appropriation bill without further amendment. Final adjournment is to be taken March 14, a two or three-day session being planned for next week to take action on bills vetoed by the Governor. The House late today adopted the Senate concurrent resolution to this effect.

The Half-Mill Tax bill, substituted by the Senate for the bill passed by the Assembly levying such a tax for four years, provides for a one-year tax and specifies the institutions for which the funds derived are to be expended and the amounts. The original bill would have allocated the money to the department of institutions and agencies for institutional development.

Additions and development for seven State institutions, the State Home for Girls, Trenton; the Institution for Feeble Minded at Vineland; State Hospital for the Insane, Trenton; State Village for Epileptics, Skillman; State Colony for Feeble Minded Males, New Lisbon; Glen Gardner Sanatarium, the State Home for Boys, Jamesburg, and the North Jersey Training School for Feeble Minded Women are provided for in the bill.

$17,441,598 in Appropriation Bill.

The appropriation bill as introduced in the Senate carried a total of $17,441,598.23, of which $13,294,530.33 was to be taken from the general funds of the State. This was $1,431,553.31 in excess of the Governor's budget recommendations. The Senate amended the bill by including an appropriation of $25,000 for the North Jersey Traffic Commission and $25,000 for the National Encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars in Atlantic City. An attempt by Senator Simpson, Hudson, to include an amendment appropriating $900,000 for the Jersey City Normal School received two votes. The bill carried also an appropriation of approximately $1,050,000 for institutional development.

The discovery late today of the Black Horse Pike bill in the desk of Philip D. Elliott, Speaker Eaton's secretary, ended a dispute which stirred the House twice today. The measure, introduced by Mr. Pine of Camden, would permit addition of the Black Horse Pike to the State highway system. It was passed in the House yesterday on a reconsideration of Monday's vote when it was defeated.

Governor Silzer today sent to the Senate the nomination of Frank B. Jess of the State Tax Board to be Judge of the Circuit Court.

The Senate at its early session passed the Hoffman bill making children of a ceremonial marriage declared void legitimate.

The Senate bill permitting bond issues for mosquito extermination and the Camby Assembly resolution petitioning Congress to pay Hoboken for money lost in taxes through the taking of money by war proclamation were passed by the House.

Utility Corporations Win.

The hard fight of the day was on the Thompson bill which would have permitted municipalities to relieve public service corporations of all or any part of the cost of paving and keeping in repair pavement between tracks and within eighteen inches on either side. The bill was lost, 27 affirmative to 29 negative. Assemblymen Devoe, Middlesex; Anderson, Osborne and Kenworthy, Essex, and Camby, Hudson, were among the opponents. Assemblymen Corio, Atlantic, Pascoe, Union, and the sponsor defended the measure.

PALATINATE AGAIN UPSET.

Complaints of Reprisals Caues New Inquiry to Be Ordered.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COLOGNE, March 7.—The situation in the Palatinate is again disturbing. Telegrams from that area show that on the departure of the Interallied Special Committee something approaching a system of reprisals on prominent anti-Separatists was undertaken in many towns.

In Pirmasens 100 citizens were selected as hostages and were told they would be arrested if harm befell and Separatist, while more than 200 fled to unoccupied territory. A number of Separatists still retain their arms and their quarters in Pirmasens Rathaus.

General de Metz appears to have observed the Speyer agreement loyally and no complaints have come from Speyer.

The result of reprisals elsewhere has been to cause a general revival of unrest and bitterness, and complaints have poured in to the High Commission. The seriousness of the situation has been realized and the Interallied Special Committee, consisting of Lieut. Col. Darbonneau of France, Major Harms of Belgium and Captain Berry of Great Britain, reassembled this morning to proceed to the Palatinate to ascertain the actual state of affairs.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y., March 7.—Lucius N. Littauer, former member of Congress from this district, and head of the Littauer Glove Corporation of Gloversville and New York, today announced plans for the building of a $300,000 addition to the Nathan Littauer Hospital here, which, with the Harriet Littauer Home for Nurses, he established many years ago as a memorial to his father and mother.

It is estimated that he has already expended more than $500,000 in the construction and upkeep of the institution.

REED PROBABLY LOSES STATE ENDORSEMENT

Partial Returns From Counties Indicate Failure to Get Backing for Presidency.

ST. LOUIS, March 7.—Reports from Democratic wards and mass meetings, held in Missouri today outside of St. Louis, indicate the probable defeat of Senator James A. Reed for the endorsement of the Democratic State Convention for President.

These reports, which came from more than half of the counties in the State, indicated that a majority of the delegates elected are hostile to Reed, but not necessarily friendly to the candidacy of William G. McAdoo, who contested with Reed for delegates to the National Convention.

Reports from forty-two counties indicated that thirty-four are anti-Reed and eight are pro-Reed.

$10,000,000 THE COST OF INTERCHURCH DRIVE

Final Accounting Made in the World Movement Which Was an Admitted Failure.

The Interchurch World Movement of North America, Inc., which was dissolved, December last, cost nearly $10,000,000 and wound up its affairs with a cash balance of $2,548.28, according to an audit made public last night. The report made on the 1919 steel strike by the organization attracted much attention.

Contributions and underwritings provided the Interchurch movement with funds of more than $9,700,000 to meet such expenditures as:

General and administration	$2,497,837.93
Survey group	2,271,592.78
Promulgation group	2,465,375.28
Financial campaigns	1,977,074.21
Organizing and operating, 1919	1,083,280.58

The audit embraced the period from the beginning of the movement in 1919 to Oct. 31, 1923, inclusive, and was made by Patterson, Teele & Dennis, accountants and auditors.

In December last a majority of the directors obtained permission from Supreme Court Justice Burr to dissolve on the ground that the purpose of the organization to unite churches and charitable agencies in a cooperative spirit and action "could not be accomplished in the particular manner undertaken by the board."

TURNING AGAINST RIVERA.

Barcelona's Enthusiasm for Dictator Has Changed to Disgust.

Copyright, 1924, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BARCELONA, March 7.—An astounding change has taken place in the space of a few months in the attitude of the people of Catalonia toward the Military Directory, which at first they welcomed with enthusiasm.

A variety of causes has contributed to this fundamental and far-reaching change, the chief of which is what the Catalonians call the persecution of their national language and the measures the Directory has taken to banish it from the schools, and even from the Church. Failure to keep the promises, too hastily made, to revise commercial treaties, has also caused grievous disappointment in Catalonia.

The industrial crisis, coinciding with the recent rapid fall in the value of the peseta and the rise of the prices of foodstuffs, is another cause of discontent and is creating a dangerous situation; for the measures taken by the authorities to deal with profiteers have completely failed. The fall in the value of the peseta with a corresponding rise in rate of the gold surcharge on customs duties is having a devastating effect on import trade.

REPUBLIC AGAIN DEMANDED.

Greek Army Officers Say Monarchy Must Be Overthrown.

Copyright, 1924, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, March 7.—A committee of five officers of high rank in the army, representing the newly reconstituted League of Officers, waited upon Admiral Konduriotis, the regent, this morning and demanded the immediate overthrow of the Glucksberg dynasty. The regent, who apparently favored the views of these officers, summoned Prime Minister Kaphandaris to the palace after their departure.

A special meeting of the Cabinet was summoned to consider the situation. After the Cabinet meeting M. Kaphandaris said the Government did not intend to resign. Nevertheless, it is apparent that M. Kaphandaris may be compelled to relinuish power, in which event the Republicans will form a new ministry. The Republicans are holding a mass meeting tonight at which resolutions will be passed demanding the immediate dethronement of the dynasty and proclamation of a republic.

HOUSING REPORT RESENTED

Harlem Women Besiege Hulbert, Who Promises a Hearing.

Criticism of the housing report of a special committee named by Murray Hulbert while Acting Mayor was made yesterday by a delegation of Harlem residents, mostly women, who appeared at the City Hall. Several of them carried banners bearing inscriptions denouncing the report, which declared that there was no congestion in tenements and that there were no slums here. Mr. Hulbert could not see the delegation because of a meeting of the Board of Estimate.

"We'll wait right here for you in the City Hall, and you'd better see us," said one woman. "If you don't, you'll hear from us."

Later Mr. Hulbert told the delegation that the report had been submitted to the Mayor, but it had not yet been approved. He promised a public hearing would be held before action on the report was taken.

"Andrea Chenier" Performed.

"Andrea Chernier," patterned on France's poet of freedom, still pursues its revolutionary way with a revolving cast. The opera, never twice alike, was sung early by Easton, Gigli and De Luca, and later afforded the season's return of both Ponselle and Ruffo. Last night's third performance brought again new leading singers. The lovers' triangle was enacted by Rethberg, Lauri-Volpi and Danise, and Moranzoni conducted. Despite Lent's first Friday, there was the usual large house.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CAIRO, Egypt, March 7. — Tomorrow the referee of the court of mixed tribunals here resumes the hearing of the application for the appointment of Howard Carter as sequestrator ot Tut-ankh-Amen's tomb and of the objects still in the Valley of the Kings, and for authority for Mr. Carter, if necessary, to shut the tomb and preserve the objects during the Summer.

Original application, which was made in the name of Mr. Carter and of the three executors of the will of the late Lord Carnarvon came before the court on Feb. 23, when the proceedings were postponed, owing to a question as to the authority on which Mr. Carter had acted. Proper authority has now been received from Almina, Countess of Carnarvon, as well as from the executors, and the old writ has been withdrawn and a new one substituted, her name being added to those of the previous applicants.

Meanwhile the negotiations for an amicable settlement of the dispute continue, but nothing has become known in regard to their progress.

PLANS TO ENFORCE OHIO SUNDAY LAWS

Youngstown Attorney Holds Mandamus Writ Over Steel Mills and Newspapers.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, March 7.—If steel mills and newspapers operate here next Sunday warrants will be sworn out for their executives under a mandamus writ granted by Common Pleas Court here ordering the city to enforce the Ohio blue laws. A statement to this effect was issued today by Nathan Kaufman of the law firm which procured the mandamus for the Independent Gasoline Dealers.

Warrants will also be asked against any theatres, cigar stores, confectionery stores or dairy depots which remain open, Mr. Kaufman says. The petition for a mandamus filed and granted yesterday alleged that allowing these places to open while closing the filling stations constituted discrimination.

Among the steel plants here are a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation and some of the largest independent mills in the country.

No statement was issued by any manufacturer, but W. Maag, manager of The Sunday Vindicator, said the paper would be issued Sunday "if they arrest every man in the office."

Clyde Osborne, city law director, said today that there was nothing for the Mayor to do under the mandamus but enforce the old blue law statute strictly.

$164,160,000 IN TAXES LOST.

Expert Figures What Smuggled Liquor Should Have Netted.

The United States Government has lost $164,160,000 in taxes on 14,400,000 gallons of liquor brought into the country in the last two years by rum-runners operating off shore from Montauk Point, L. I., to Atlantic City, N. J., according to figures given yesterday by Edward Barnes of the legal division of the Custom House. The statistics were compiled with the assistance of the Coast Guard, which has kept a close watch on the liquor boats.

"There are about twenty vessels along rum row in the liquor smuggling business," he said. "They average fifteen trips a year to our coast, each craft carrying an average of 8,000 cases of liquor. Simple multiplication shows that they have brought 4,800,000 cases. At three gallons to the case the result is 14,400,000 gallons. The custom duty and internal revenue tax on this would be $11.40 a gallon."

Magistrate Vitale in the Morrisania Court yesterday held Frank Rastone, a bartender in a saloon at 1,014 Brook Avenue, the Bronx, in $1,000 bail on a charge of felonious assault, growing out of the alleged sale of a bottle of gin which caused the blinding of Mrs. Julia Thompson of 429 East 165th Street, the Bronx. Mrs. Thompson is in Lincoln Hospital totally blind, it was stated in court.

Federal Judge John C. Knox issued an order closing a saloon at 1,537 Third Avenue for six months on a charge of violating the prohibition law.

Conviction Carries One-Year Prison Term and a $5,000 Fine—Sentence Monday.

Burrill Ruskay, active head of the brokerage firm of S. S. Ruskay & Co., which failed in February, 1922, for $10,000,000, was found guilty yesterday by a jury in Judge Nott's part of General Sessions of trading against the order of a customer. The conviction brought with it a maximum penalty of one year in Sing Sing Prison and a fine of $5,000. Ruskay, who is 43 years old, lived at 110 West Forty-eighth Street. He was remanded without bail to the Tombs for sentence on Monday.

The jury returned the verdict fifty-five minutes after Judge Nott had completed his charge. Frank Aranow, counsel for the convicted broker, had refused to present any defense. The Court denied the lawyer's motion to dismiss the indictment on the ground that Assistant District Attorney Frank A. Carstarphen had failed to prove that Ruskay had any knowledge that 200 shares of Mexican Petroleum stock, valued at about $25,000 and purchased for Huldreich Brunner of East Williston, L. I., had been sold through a "dummy" account maintained by the firm, without Brunner's consent, two days before the failure.

The trial began on Monday last and three former employes of the firm testified against Ruskay. Alexander Adler, formerly Ruskay's confidential secretary, told the jury the defendant had ordered him before the failure to open "dummy" accounts on the firm's books in the names, "King," "Liederman," "Porter" and "McCullom."

Five indictments charging trading against the orders of customers were returned against Ruskay and Joseph B. Shelby, a lawyer; George D. Proctor and Eugene Greenhut, partners in the firm. S. S. Ruskay, father of the convicted man and founder of the firm, had died before the indictments were returned. Assistant District Attorney Carstarphen developed during the trial that the defendant, his father and the other three partners had formed a "cabinet" for the conduct of the firm. Adler testified that the four "dummy" accounts ordered opened by the defendant had been discussed at "cabinet" meetings.

The prosecutor said he was not in a position to state what action would be taken against Ruskay on the indictments remaining against him. Shelby, who gave the firm his seat on the Consolidated Stock Exchange; Proctor, who was in charge of the firm's publicity campaign, and Greenhut, who was the firm's office manager, are to be called for separate trials on the indictments after sentence is imposed on Ruskay.

28 DOCTORS QUIT HOSPITAL.

Medical Staff at Odds With South Side Managers at Bay Shore.

BAY SHORE, L. I., March 7.—Because of a difference of opinion in regard to the administration of the hospital, twenty-eight doctors, or 60 per cent. of the medical staff, of the South Side Hospital have tendered their resignations, to take effect within two weeks.

It is understood that the action on the part of the physicians marks the culmination of a disagreement that has existed for some time between the Board of Managers of the hospital and the members of the medical staff. Some of the physicians say that the managers have encroached on the prerogatives of the medical staff.

This is the second wholesale resignation of members of the staff of the hospital to take place in less than a year. On June 2 the hospital closed its doors as a result of the resignation of the entire nursing staff, according to a statement made at that time by Arthur Butler Graham, President of the Board of Managers. At that time the hospital was at Babylon, where it had been since its establishment by Dr. Daniel W. Wynkoop in 1911. On July 1, 1923, the hospital was moved to Bay Shore, where it occupied a building erected and equipped at a cost of $225,000.

Mr. Butler is still President of the Board of Managers and Frank Sutton is Secretary. The Medical Board is headed by Dr. William H. Ross and Dr. James S. Ames of Babylon is Secretary. While every effort has been made to keep the action of members of the medical staff secret, Dr. Ames admitted today that the majority had sent in their resignations. At the same time he said he hoped that the differences which existed between the doctors and laymen, jointly charged with the conduct of the hospital's affairs, would be settled amicably.

None of the physicians who have sent in their resignations lives at the hospital. Dr. A. M. Baker, the resident physician, said that he was unaware of the action of the members of the medical staff and that he had not tendered his resignation.

The action has created a sensation in this section of Long Island. Many of the residents of the section are prominent New Yorkers who have contributed to the maintenance of the institution.

PROTEST PLUNKETT BAN.

Rear Admiral Called to Washington After "Y" Men Complain.

Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett, Commandant of the navy yard in Brooklyn, left for Washington last night following an order received earlier in the day for him to report at the Navy Department today for a conference with the officials of the department. While the Admiral stated he did not know the reason for his call to Washington, it is known that W. L. Tisdale, Secretary of the Naval Branch of the Y. M. C. A. on Sands Street, Brooklyn, and F. A. McCarl, General Secretary of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A. for the Army and Navy, visited the Navy Department early yesterday and protested against the order of Admiral Plunkett establishing, for the second time, a restricted area about the navy yard.

The Y. M. C. A. officials told Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt that the new order worked a hardship on the naval "Y." When Admiral Plunkett ordered his original ban on the navy yard district the naval "Y" was closed for ten days. This caused a loss of more than $1,000 a day. Now that the battleship fleet is here it is believed that the loss caused by the new ban order will be even greater than the loss caused by the original order.

Admiral Plunkett was a little more communicative yesterday than heretofore. In answer to inquiries he said: "These people, business men and others in the Sands Street area, said they would clean up the district if the ban came off five weeks ago. I lifted the ban and gave them a trial. It did not work at all. I said I would put the ban on again if it did not work. And I have."

Drunk, Jailed for Taking Out Baby.

Carrying his 3-month-old daughter in his arms, Patrick J. O'Connor, 28 years old, of 466 East Tenth Street, was arrested Thursday night at Avenue D and Second Street for intoxication. His wife said he always insisted, when drinking, on taking the baby out "for air." Magistrate Jean Norris yesterday sent O'Connor to the workhouse for thirty days.

FELDER AND MEANS INDICTED FOR PLOT

Accused of Conspiracy to Bribe Attorney General Daugherty in Fraud Trial.

$65,000 FUND IS INVOLVED

Attorney and Detective Charged With Promising "Influence" to Halt Prosecution.

FELDER EXPLAINS CASE

Says Indictment Is Due to Politics—Calls Money Paid His Firm a Legitimate Fee.

Thomas B. Felder, lawyer, Gaston B. Means, private detective, and Elmer Jarnecke, associate of Means, were indicted by the Federal Grand Jury yesterday on charges of obstructing justice and conspiring to bribe Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, United States Attorney William Hayward and two of the latter's assistants—John Holley Clark and Peter J. McCoy.

The indictment alleged that five defendants in the Federal courts, who were charged with mail frauds in the sale of stock in the Glass Casket Company of Altoona, Pa., paid $65,000 to Felder's law firm to "fix" the case on representations that Felder was a secret partner of Attorney General Daugherty in the practice of law, that Means was an important official in the Department of Justice, and that Felder and Means could influence the Federal authorities in such a way as to prevent indictments or stop prosecutions.

Felder, Means and Jarnecke agreed, according to the indictment, to offer part of the $65,000 to Daugherty, Hayward, Clark and McCoy to bring about a dismissal of the prosecution, "although the prosecution was well-founded and meritorious." According to the indictment, the conspiracy also provided that Felder and his associates should procure the return to the defendants of certain books and papers that had been turned over to the Federal Attorney's office, and should cause Attorney General Daugherty to write a letter to the defendants stating that an error had been made in their arrest and arraignment. The indictment also charged that it was part of the conspiracy that the defendants should continue in their stock-selling business and that Felder and his associates should see that subsequent complaints received no attention from the Federal authorities.

Obstruction of Justice Charged.

In that part of the indictment which alleged the obstruction of justice, Felder, Means and Jarnecke were charged with conspiring to misrepresent the facts to Daugherty, Hayward, Clark and McCoy, "and to threaten, intimidate and influence" those officials to bring about a dismissal of the prosecution.

The indictment charged that the conspiracy began on Oct. 5, 1922, with a meeting at the New Willard Hotel in Washington between Samuel Safir and Harry E. Siedman, defendants in the glass casket case, and Jarnecke. It said that Means and Jarnecke came to New York from Washington on Oct. 11, 1922, and had a conference at the Hotel Vanderbilt the next day with Siedman and Samuel Rosenblatt, another defendant.

About the same time, the indictment went on, Isidore D. Padorr in furtherance of the conspiracy sent a Western Union money order for $10,000 from Chicago to Washington, payable to Jarnecke. It charged that Rosenblatt and Joseph G. Kostner, attorney for Safir, paid $47,800 to Edward J. McCrossin, William H. Chorosh and Harold Spielberg, law partners of Felder, in Felder's office on Oct. 31, 1922, to carry on the conspiracy. It added the charges that Rosenblatt paid Means and Jarnecke $1,500 on Nov. 2, 1922, and that Benjamin Crager, another defendant, about the same time executed an assignment of $5,000 then on deposit with the New Amsterdam Casualty Company as collateral for his bail bond, to Felder, McCrossin, Chorish and Spielberg in connection with the conspiracy.

Suit Asks for Return of $65,000.

Safir on Dec. 19, 1923, filed a petition in the Federal Court asking that Felder be required to show cause why the $65,000 should not be returned. Judge John C. Knox on Dec. 21 issued an order to show cause. On Jan. 25 Felder, through his counsel, moved to have the order dismissed, but Judge Francis Winslow denied this motion on Feb. 26. The action is still pending.

In his effort to recover the $65,000 Safir said that Felder, Means, Jarnecke and Padorr represented to him that Felder was so close to the Attorney General that he could procure the dismissal of the indictment. Safir charged that it was also represented to him that Felder was well known to the Federal Judges, and that Means had access to Attorney General Daugherty and to William J. Burns, head of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice. According to Safir, he was told that if he and his codefendants paid the $65,000 Felder and his associates would procure the suppression of the indictment, and that if they did not pay the money the prosecution would be continued and Safir would be convicted.

Safir was convicted and sentenced on Feb. 1, 1924, to two and one-half years in the Atlanta Penitentiary. The other defendants, some of whom pleaded guilty, were sentenced to shorter terms.

Politics, Says Felder.

Mr. Felder asserted yesterday at his law office, 165 Broadway, that the indictment against him had been returned for political reasons. He alleged that enemies of Daugherty and Burns were seeking to attack them through Means by discrediting Felder, who is Means's counsel.

Mr. Felder said that he had been informed that Hiram C. Todd, the Special Deputy Attorney General who presented the evidence against Felder, Means and Jarnecke to the Federal Grand Jury, had been appointed by the Department of Justice at the request of another department of the Government about a year ago to investigate charges that Means was accepting bribes to protect criminals, especially violators of the Prohibition law, from prosecution by the Department of Justice. In consequence of this investigation, he went on, Means and Jarnecke were indicted on Oct. 18, 1923, on charges of bribery, violation of the Volstead act, and using the mails to defraud. They are out on $15,000 bail each pending trial, which has been set for March 31. Mr. Felder is their attorney.

He said that the whole thing would be cleared up when Means testified before the oil and Daugherty committees in Washington.

The political nature of the indictment, Mr. Felder went on, was indicated by the fact tat his three law partners, who were charged with actually receiving most of the money, were not indicted, and that he was indicted, although none of the money was paid to him. He admitted that about $55,000 had been paid to his firm, but asserted that the money was a legitimate fee for legal services, not for corruption.

At the United States Attorney's office it was pointed out that there was no charge that Felder had actually approached any Federal prosecuting official in connection with the case.

Radio Dots and Dashes Guide Flight of Blimp

DAYTON, March 7.—For the first time in history, airships have been guided from one point to another by means of radio. This was accomplished at Wilbur Wright Field yesterday when Captain W. H. Murphy and Lieutenant R. E. Robillard of McCook field piloted the blimp O-R-1 in a straight course by means of radio signals, it became known today.

The device was arranged so that if the balloon went higher than a fixed point, a dot and a dash were caught in the receiving instrument. If it fell below its course, the signal was reversed. Going straight, just a dash was recorded.

In times of stress or at night balloons and airplanes can fly entirely out of sight of land. With the aid of the device which is being perfected at McCook Field, they can be sure of their course under such circumstances.

Additional tests with the radio equipment and the blimp will be made next week.

REFORMED CROOKS MAY FORM A CLUB

Its Object Will Be to Win Criminals Back to Honest Careers.

GEER TELLS OF MOVEMENT

Founder of Marshall-Stillman Work Addresses Dinner of Ex-Thieves and Civic Leaders.

Former criminals sat beside some of the most prominent men in the city last evening at the annual dinner of the Marshall Stillman movement for reclaiming members of the underworld. The affair was in Luchow's restaurant in East Fourteenth Street. Among those present were judges, prosecutors, publishers and industrial leaders, as well as former highwaymen, burglars and pickpockets who had been brought back to honest pursuits through the efforts of Alpheus Geer, President and originator of the movement.

Mr. Geer announced that on March 14 the Advisory Board, composed of former gangsters, would discuss plans for increasing the present membership of 300 to 1,000 to be drawn from those now leading criminal careers in the city.

Mr. Geer also said that the Advisory Board intended to start a movement for a clubhouse where "man-to-man kindliness, without coddling, without sentimental bosh" could be enlisted to divorce criminals from their tendencies and bring them into the membership of the movement with a "confidence that can be obtained only through honest toil."

He said that he believed that there was need for institutions in which to incarcerate the incurable criminal, who is a menace to society, but that it was the experience of those who had taken an active part in the Marshall Stillman movement since its organization about three years ago that many men who have been led into crime can be redeemed through kindness and the opportunity to support themselves through their own labors. He made it plain to the gathering that he did not criticize the police for their handling of crime.

Mr. Geer said that he and others in the movement, including all of the former criminals present, had approached members of the underworld in pool parlors, soft drink establishments, in coffee houses and on street corners, and declared that in every instance where they had asked a gangster if he "wanted to go straight" the answer had been "Yes." The problem was easily solved, he added, when he and others in the movement got the man a job and enrolled him as a field member of the movement with a mission to bring his former confederates into line. He said that the slogan of the movement was "men serving men."

Present were Judges John F. McIntyre and Francis X. Mancuso of General Sessions; Justices Clarence Edwards and John J. Freschi of Special Sessions; Supreme Court Justice Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Justice Gustave Hartman of the City Court, Chief Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora, Assistant District Attorney Harold W. Hastings, Ogden Reid, editor of The New York Tribune; Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of The New York Times, and a dozen newspaper reporters.

VIENNA BANK STRIKE ENDS.

Social Democrats Are Blamed for Employes' Walkout.

Copyright, 1924, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, arch 7.—The strike of bank employes has ended in a compromise after a two week's walkout.

Besides other points agreed upon, the employes have consented to work two and a half hours longer weekly, making forty-three and a half hours, beginning in the Fall, while the banks have agreed to raise wages 5 per cent.

The strike, which meant serious loss to the financial and economic interests, is only one more sign of the social unrest prevailing in Austria. The striking bank employes are said to have been tools of the Social Democrats in their fight against the capitalists, and it is asserted that unless the tide of social democracy overseeping the country is checked, the pillars of reconstruction erected under the auspices of the League may gradually be washed away.

The Social Democrats appear to become more opposed daily to the long term loan and international control. They still maintain that Austria could have been saved from chaos by a wholesale levy on Austrian capital as the Socialist Government in power for two years before the present Government then proposed doing.

BANS TOBACCO PRICE FIXING

Trade Board Cites Two Associations and Two Companies.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Two orders forbidding wholesale tobacco dealers from "combining and cooperating for the purpose of fixing prices" were issued today by the Federal Trade Commission.

One order was directed against members of the Cincinnati Wholesale Tobacco Association and the P. Lorillard Company, Inc., while the second named the Wholesale Tobacco and Cigar Dealers' Association of Philadelphia and the American Tobacco Company. Commissioner Van Fleet dissented from the majority in so far as the orders affected the American Tobacco Company.

In Cincinnati members of the association were said to have obtained uniform discounts in purchases from the Lorillard Company, and this corporation, engaged in manufacturing, was alleged to "have suggested that the Cincinnati jobbers get together and fix uniform prices on tobacco products."

LAWYER DISBARRED, 2 ARE DISCIPLINED

Amos H. Stephens Is Found Guilty of Unprofessional Conduct by Court.

BECKER IS SUSPENDED

Former, Special Prosecutor, Is Called "Overzealous"—Marcus Punished for One Year.

In an opinion written by Presiding Justice John Proctor Clarke the Appellate Division yesterday took action against three attorneys and refused to discipline a fourth. The decision of the Justices was on complaint filed by the Grievance Committee of the Bar Association, represented by Einar Chrystie and Henry W. Taft.

Amos H. Stephens, a practicing attorney for thirty-three years, one of the best-known New York lawyers, and counsel for the Travelers Insurance Company, was disbarred. Alfred L. Becker, formerly a special Attorney General, was suspended for three months. Benjamin Marcus was suspended for a year, and Martin Dolphin, assistant corporation counsel assigned to the Police Department, was exonerated.

The complaint against Mr. Stephens was the result of his connection as counsel for the Emerson Motors Company, stock of which was put on sale in New York, Boston and other cities, and an advertising campaign conducted. The Boston sales were in charge of Robert T. Matches, who in September, 1916, notified Willis G. Emerson, President of the company, that District Attorney Pelletier of Boston was conducting an investigation there concerning the methods used in selling Emerson Motors stock.

The opinion of Justice Clarke states that on Oct. 2, 1916, Mr. Stephens, who had become counsel for the company two months before, was sent to Boston by Emerson to find out about the inquiry. He interviewed Matches's attorney and was told by him substantially that Daniel H. Coakley, a Boston attorney, was a personal and political friend of District Attorney Pelletier and could be of assistance. Mr. Stephens interviewed Coakley and as a result he conferred with the District Attorney, and later on discussed with Coakley the possibility of having the inquiry pigeon-holed. Coakley agreed to stop the investigation for $500 cash and $20,000 if he succeeded.

Paid $20,500 to Boston Lawyer.

Mr. Stephens later went to Boston with $20,500 in cash, giving the money to Matches's attorney, a Mr. Carroll, with instructions to make payments as agreed, and to hold $20,000 until satisfied that the investigation had been dropped. Carroll was notified on Oct. 6, 1916 by District Attorney Pelletier that he had decided to take no further action against the Emerson Motors Company. Carroll then paid over all the money with the exception of $5,000, which he kept for himself.

The charge against Mr. Stephens, as framed by the Grievance Committee, was that while acting as attorney for the motors company he took part in a scheme to induce the District Attorney to abandon the inquiry. Matches was a witness in the hearing before the referee appointed by the Court to hear the charges against Stephens and Coakley was also called.

In the opinion of Justice Clarke, it is stated that the case has been heard twice by the official referee and that the Appellate Division had made a careful independent examination of the evidence. In the first proceeding the referee decided in favor of Mr. Stephens on the ground that Matches had been indicted and convicted for using the mails in selling Emerson Motors stock and that his credibility was affected. District Attorney Pelletier and Coakley, who then "stood before the Court as reputable and successful practitioners," testified in favor of Mr. Stephens.

Later the Attorney General of Massachusetts brought charges against Pelletier and he was removed from office. Coakley also was disbarred on charges growing out of the Emerson Motors affairs. The Bar Association then moved to reopen the proceedings against Stephens.

According to the record the allegation against Mr. Becker developed out of his rôle as Special Deputy Attorney General in prosecuting the cases growing out of the murder in 1914 of Barnett Baff, West Washington Market poultry dealer, who was slain by two hired gunmen. Joseph Sorro, a State's witness, recanted his testimony after the conviction of Joseph Cohen. Sorro had been assured of the protection of the Attorney General's office if he would tell the truth. He then made an affidavit exonerating Cohen. He was later indicted for perjury and Mr. Becker, who has resigned as Special Attorney General, was retained as his counsel. That was in April, 1920, and in January, 1921, Cohen's application for a retrial was filed. Mr. Becker was reappointed a Special Attorney General on Feb. 1, 1921, a day later he took his oath of office and withdrew as counsel for Sorro and undertook to handle the State's case against Cohen.

Calls Becker Overzealous.

On March 23, 1921, the Court deliberating on Cohen's plea for a new trial announced that decision would be reserved until after Sorro's perjury trial. On April 4 of that year, Mr. Becker, to use his own words, "went back into the Sorro case so as to protect not only Sorro, but also the interests of the State in maintaining the conviction of Cohen, which would be jeopardized if Sorro was convicted."

"He went too far, we think," wrote Justice Clarke, "in re-entering upon the defense of Sorro while a Special Deputy Attorney General. We think that it is a very dangerous practice for any member of the bar, who has been connected with the Attorney General's or District Attorney's offices, engaged in the prosecution of persons charged with criminal offenses, to thereafter appear in subsequent proceedings of a criminal nature. We cannot overlook the gravity of the question here presented, and while we do not think respondent was wicked or corrupt, we do think that he was overzealous and careless."

At another point Justice Clarke wrote that he had no doubt Mr. Becker acted in good faith, "and from a desire to aid a client whom he believed to be deserving the courts cannot too severely condemn the practice of public officials, placed as Mr. Becker was, in the Attorney General's office, defending persons charged with crime." Charles Albert Perkins, former District Attorney, appeared for Mr. Becker.

Mr. Marcus was charged with neglecting to properly look after the interests of eight tenants in an uptown apartment house who had engaged him to represent them.

The exoneration of Mr. Dolphin was in connection with the arrest of Mrs. Juliet Barrett Publee during an investigation at Police Headquarters on Dec. 2, 1921, to determine responsibility for closing a meeting of the American Birth Control League held at Town Hall on Nov. 13 of that year. The Appellate Division held that Mr. Dolphin, acting as Assistant Corporation Counsel, and advising Chief Inspector William J. Lahey in the investigation, in causing the arrest "was not acting in a professional capacity and was not amenable to discipline for unprofessional conduct."

Policeman Accidentally Shot.

Patrolman Joseph Spindler, 213 East 203d Street, was shot in the abdomen when his pistol, carried in a holster, was accidentally discharged, yesterday. He was sent to St. Vincent's Hospital where it was said his condition was serious.

Meyer Charges Foes 'Planted' Two Girls In the Fifteenth District to Get Signatures

The charge that the Republican organization in the Fifteenth Assembly District had resorted to "colonization" in its efforts to defeat him and had "planted" two girls in a tenement at 1,274 Third Avenue was made yesterday by former State Senator Schuyler M. Meyer, insurgent candidate for the Republican leadership of the district, against Frank J. Coleman Jr., the present leader.

Mr. Meyer said that this had been for the purpose of designating organization candidates for members of the Republican County Committee in the Fifty-fifth Election District, two signatures being necessary and the Meyer faction having succeeded in getting all the enrolled Republicans of the election district to sign its designating petitions. Mr. Meyer supported his charge by filing a protest with the Board of Elections and will take legal steps to have William Williams, who lives at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street, and Mrs. Lillian M. Spafford, who lives in East Sixty-third Street between Fifth and Madison Avenues, the organization candidates for the County Committee, removed from the ballot.

Mr. Meyer said that the two girls, who live with the parents of one of them at 1,226 Madison Avenue, were induced on Feb. 29 to swear to affidavits that they had moved to the Third Avenue tenement. "On the very same day," he continued, "the two girls signed the designating petitions for Mr. Williams and Mrs. Spafford, thus establishing beyond peradventure that the purpose of the 'move' was colonization. Of course, neither Mr. Williams nor Mrs. Spafford knew anything of what was being done in their behalf. This shows, however, the danger of letting one's name be used by the Koenig-Coleman faction.

"Last night in company with two other men I visited this 'residence' of the two girls. After climbing four flights of dark and dingy stairs, we found the janitor and his wife feverishly at work painting the floor and hanging bright chintz curtains. In one corner was a bed with a bright chintz cover to match the curtains; in another was piled some furniture. On the ground floor we found a brand new mail box. The ink was hardly dry on the card announcing the names of the new residents.

"This is a sad commentary on the depth to which our opponents have fallen. At least Tammany Hall would have planted men in this 'residence' instead of hiding behind the skirts of two young women as the Koenig-Coleman faction has done. What do Mr. Wickersham, Mr. Sheffield, Mr. Mills and the other supporters of Coleman think of this kind of politics? Do they approve of Tammany practices in our Assembly District?"

Mr. Coleman denied Mr. Meyer's charge of colonization. "I resent his imputation upon my workers," he said. "It is in keeping with his campaign of vilification to divert the voters from the issue as to whether or not he is fit to be leader."

MANDIL, VIOLINIST, TAKES LIFE BY LEAP

Director of Alamac Orchestra Jumps From Roof of West End Avenue Apartment.

WIFE WAS GOING TO EUROPE

He Could Not Bear Being Parted From Her—Had Had Successful Musical Career.

Dr. Carlos de Mandil, violinist, former director of the Paris Symphony Orchestra, jumped from the roof of the fifteen-story apartment house at 255 West End Avenue yesterday morning and was instantly killed. The reason given for the suicide by his friends was despondency over the prospect of being separated from his wife, who was going to Europe to take part in a motion picture production. It was said he also had suffered business reverses.

Dr. Mandil, who was 31 years old, and of distinguished appearance, lived with his wife, who has appeared on the screen as Marie Hall, at the Hotel Alamac, Broadway and Seventy-first Street, where for the last two months he has been playing the violin and leading the three-piece string orchestra in the Blue Room. When he took the position at the hotel he told the management that he was a member of the Spanish nobility, that his uncle had been in the diplomatic service of Spain, and gave his title as Count Carlos de Mier.

About 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning, Dr. de Mandil entered the West End apartment building with a camera, and asked the elevator boy to take him to the roof, where he wished to take a picture of the hospital under construction at Seventy-second Street and West End Avenue. As he stepped off the elevator, he turned and said: "And may God bless you."

The elevator boy reported to the Superintendent that he had just taken a man up to the roof who talked as if he was going to kill himself. The two went up and found Dr. de Mandil's hat, overcoat, cane and camera. The body of the musician was in the rear courtyard.

Mrs. de Mandil was found at the home of her mother, Mrs. G. B. Littel, at 422 West Seventy-second Street. Mrs. de Mandil became hysterical. She said that she had told him Thursday night of her intention to go abroad with the Good Luck Film Company of Cuba, with whom she was to sign a contract today, but that she loved him and had never meant to leave him for good.

Before leaving the hotel yesterday morning, Dr. de Mandil had called his mother-in-law on the telephone and in a rambling way told her that he meant to "hurt" himself. Two notes were found pinned to his shirt—one addressed to "Marie," his wife, and the other to "the Coroner." The latter was turned over to Dr. Thomas Gonzales, Assistant Medical Examiner. In the note to his wife, Dr. de Mandil said he could not stand to have her part from him.

Dr. de Mandil came to this country from Madrid, his birthplace, in 1913, after playing in concerts in the large cities of Europe, and was said to have been wealthy. In a business venture in Chicago, it is stated, he lost $70,000. Then he went to the Pacific Coast, where he directed orchestras with great success. His mother, Mrs. Carolos di Mandil, resides in San Francisco.

He was married to his present wife in Kansas City about a year ago after his divorce from his first wife, who was said to have been a motion picture actress. He spoke eight languages, it was said by his friends, was highly cultivated and had luxurious tastes. His scrapbook showed that he was a gold medalist graduate from the Conservatory of Music in Madrid and a former student at the Paris Conservatory.

Falls Dead in Fifth Avenue.

Pedestrians at Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday morning ran to the assistance of an unidentified man who staggered and fell to the pavement. He was dead when an ambulance surgeon arrived at the scene. Through a card found in the coat pocket, the body was later identified as that of Michael Burns of 353 West Fifty-eighth Street, employed at the Rodin Studio, 200 West Fifty-seventh Street.

HUNDREDS ON PIER SEE AUTO KILL MAN

Longshoreman Who Stepped in Front of a Truck Hurled Ten Feet and Run Over.

WOMAN'S CAR CRUSHES BOY

Four Nurses Hurled From Their Machine by Another Auto and Bruised.

Several hundred workmen employed on the New York Central Railroad Company's pier at Harrison Street and the Hudson River last night saw a motor truck hurl Salvatore Vetty, 56 years old, a longshoreman of 83 Mulberry Street, ten feet and kill him. Vitty had stepped from behind a pile of freight in the path of the truck. Louis Jaeger, the driver, of 981 Gates Avenue, Brooklyn, was locked up in the Beach Street Station on a technical charge of homicide.

Eugene Stelle, 9 years old, of Harrison Place, Lynbrook, L. I., was killed in the afternoon when he was run over by an automobile operated by Mrs. Otis Fowler of 8 Harrison Place, when the boy ran out of the Union Place Public School near his home. Mrs. Fowler placed the body of the boy in her car and hurried to Rockville Centre Sanitarium, where physicians said death was instantaneous. Then she surrendered to the police, but was paroled in her own recognizance, pending a hearing in the Police Court this morning.

Four nurses of a hospital at Grasslands near Yonkers were bruised yesterday when a speeding car overturned the automobile in which they were driving near the hospital. The driver of the other car continued on his way, and the four young women were rescued from beneath their upturned vehicle by passers-by. Miss Maud Myers of Valhalla, N. Y., was driving the car. She with the other occupants, Florence Anderson, Flora McNaughton and S. B. Hanna, were attended at their place of employment.

LEWIS NIXON INJURED.

Fell Into a Pit While Examining Explosion Debris.

Lewis Nixon, President of the Nixon Nitration Works at Nixon, N. J., where eighteen persons were killed last Saturday in an explosion at the Ammonite Company factory, has been confined to his home most of the week suffering from an injury received when he fell into a fifteen-foot pit on the property after the explosion. In a statement issued Wednesday relating to complaints of further danger of explosion, Mr. Nixon made passing reference to the injury, which was a bad cut in the leg from a piece of iron he struck when he fell into the pit while examining débris. Mr. Nixon fell into the pit, which was partly filled with water, on Sunday afternoon. His calls for help were answered by workmen who helped him out. He was able yesterday to leave for his office.

Assistant Prosecutor John E. Toolan of Middlesex County said yesterday at New Brunswick that he would present to the Grand Jury within a few days the evidence gathered in his examination of the grounds, as well as the evidence obtained from interviews with survivors and with R. Norris Shreve, President of the Ammonite Company.

Mr. Shreve said yesterday that three carloads of amatol had been sent recently from the Raritan Arsenal, on the adjoining property, by the Columbia Salvage Company. Amatol is a high explosive. Mr. Shreve said the amatol was not consigned to his plant. He declined to say where the amatol went, though he admitted it had been sent out on his order.

Tardy Check Plea Saves Model.

The failure of a check to arrive at the expected time resulted in her arrest for not paying a $44 hotel bill, Miss Mary Richards, 19 years old, an artist's model living at the Hotel Pennsylvania, told Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan yesterday. She was paroled until Monday, by which time, she said, the check should arrive.

ROBBERS RAID SHOP WITH POLICE NEAR

Jewelry Valued at $10,000 Is Taken in Hold-Up Close to the Bronx Headquarters.

ALLEGED BOY THIEF SHOT

Home of Tax Commissioner George H. Payne Looted of $4,000 in Personal Effects.

The Bronx drew most of yesterday's hold-ups, though Manhattan robbers did their bit toward keeping the police worried.

In one robbery, in a jewelry store a few hundred feet from the Bronx Police Headquarters, the proprietor was forced to open a safe from which $10,000 worth of jewelry was stolen. He then was bound and gagged.

The jeweler was Julius J. Chamelin. His store is at 484 Tremont Avenue. Nearby is the Bathgate Avenue police station, which also houses headquarters. Seventy-five feet away stood a policeman.

Chamelin was repairing watches in his store about 8:30 o'clock in the morning. The place was not open for business and the door was locked. A man rapped at the door. He told Chamelin he was an inspector and wanted to test the Western Union clock. He was admitted.

Once in the place, the stranger asked for an alarm clock. Chamelin became suspicious and was about to start for the street when a second man entered and asked about some silverware. Then the first man drew a pistol. Chamelin appealed to the second man for aid. The second man's answer was a pistol. Chamelin was ordered to the rear, where there was a large safe containing $35,000 worth of jewelry. He was directed to open the safe. He parried for time, hoping his clerk would come in. He was so slow that the robbers kicked and punched him into faster motion. The safe door was swung open after fifteen minutes.

Tied to a Chair in Rear Room.

One of the robbers took a stretch of picture wire from his pocket and bound Chamelin's hands behind his back. Chamelin then was tied in a chair in the rear room and gaged. The hold-up men took several watches and rings from the safe and $175 in cash.

Two other men entered and conversed with the pair at the safe. It is believed by the police that these had been lookouts and had come in because they were alarmed at the period of time their accomplices had been in the store. The original two immediately walked out with the second pair, leaving behind $25,000 worth of jewelry.

A few minutes before 9 o'clock, the clerk, Charles Dwinnell of 452 East 186th Street, the Bronx, arrived. He found the door open, but saw nobody in the store. On the floor were strewn velvet jewelry boxes. In the rear room, to which he hastened in alarm, he found his employer in a state of collapse. Dwinnell released him and notified the police.

Four hours earlier, Patrolman James McElroy of the Morrissania police station, saw a large touring car stalled in front of 573 Cauldwell Avenue, the Bronx. Three young men were seated in it. Another was trying to crank the car. As McElroy came near, all four ran. The policeman fired a number of shots without effect. The fugitives separated at Eagle Avenue and 149th Street. Two disappeared. The others, Thomas Austin, 16 years old, of 595 St. Ann's Avenue, and Charles Sigmon, 15, of 541 East 150th Street, darted into a tenement basement. McElroy followed, flashlight in hand.

McElroy called to the boys to surrender. He reached into the coal bin, into which they had run. Austin sprang out. McElroy said that he feared the lad was drawing a pistol, so he drew his own and fired. Austin fell to the floor. Sigmon was subdued with the nightstick.

Austin was taken to Lincoln Hospital, a bullet wound in his abdomen. He is expected to recover. He was charged with grand larceny in the theft of the automobile. Sigmon was charged with juvenile delinquency and sent to the Bronx Children's Society to await arraignment this morning.

The automobile belonged to Clarence J. Clark of 36 Bedford Park Boulevard, from in front of whose home it had been stolen Thursday night.

Tax Official's Home Looted.

Burglars stole $4,000 worth of jewelry, silverware and clothing from the home of Tax Commissioner George Henry Payne of the Bronx. Payne, former President of the Bronx National Bank, is Eastern Manager of the Hiram Johnson campaign. Mr. and Mrs. Payne were at their home in Islip, L. I., for a few days. When they returned yesterday to their two-story house at 2,969 Decatur Avenue, the Bronx, they found that all of the fourteen rooms had been ransacked. Entrance had been forced through the front door with a jimmy.

A policeman stood less than seventy-five feet away, assisting school children across the road, yesterday when a well-dressed man of about 20 walked into the butcher shop of Max Borodkin at 1,668 Park Avenue and after forcing him to back into a refrigerator robbed the cash register of $200. Borodkin was locked in the refrigerator. He was released later by a customer.

Two men who failed to heed a traffic signal at Eighth Street and First Avenue were arrested yesterday and held by Magistrate Jean Norris in Essex Market Court in $10,000 bail each for a hearing Monday morning on suspicion of stealing $5,000 worth of silks found in their car. The men were Abraham Ackerman, 23 years old, of 131 Avenue A, and Abraham Faher, 24, of 1,430 Forty-second Street, Brooklyn.

Patrolman Nathan Whitman of the Fifth Street Police Station ordered the men to halt their taxicab. When they failed to heed him he jumped on the running board and threatened to shoot unless they stopped. This time they obeyed. Ackerman, according to the police, told Whitman that a stranger whom he described as "a little black man" had asked him to take the taxicab and its silk downtown to an address at which he would meet them later. Faher refused to make any explanation.

Six indictments charging burglary were returned by the Bronx Grand Jury yesterday against George Patio, known as the "matinee burglar." Patio was arrested at his home at 244 East 121st Street recently by detectives who said they found there property stolen from thirty-seven apartments in the Bronx. Patio is held under $50,000 bail.

REFUSES POLITICAL DEBATE

Mrs. Pratt Declines Challenge in 15th District Contest.

Mrs. John T. Pratt, associate Republican leader of the Fifteenth Assembly District, declined yesterday the challenge of Mrs. James Russell Parsons, supporter of former State Senator Schuyler M. Meyer, insurgent candidate for the leadership of the district, to debate the issues of Mr. Meyer's contest against Frank J. Coleman Jr., the present leader and a candidate for re-election.

"I have your letter inviting me to debate and complaining that the issues are sadly obscured," Mrs. Pratt wrote to Mrs. Parsons. 'I am a little surprised at the latter, since, if the issues have been obscured, Mr. Meyer and his supporters are responsible. In addition, it is not entirely clear to me how they can be clarified by debating a question which you have carefully framed so as to further confuse them.

"In my judgment the voters are quite competent to decide the merits of this controversy without our indulging in a battle of words which might advertise the debaters but would serve no good purpose. I feel compelled, therefore, to decline your offer."

Airplane Liquor Runners Forced Down Near Border

WINNIPEG, Man., March 7.—An aerial liquor-smuggling enterprise, in which at least three planes are believed to have been used, was uncovered by the police at Waugh today when they found an abandoned airplane fitted with runners for landing on ice. It was equipped to carry freight.

Another plane, which the police think is a liquor runner, was forced to land forty miles from Waugh not long after the first had been seized, while a third is believed to have succeeded in reaching the United States.

The authorities believe that a syndicate in Minneapolis and St. Paul was directing the smuggling. Six men operating the plane found at Waugh escaped, but later the police consigned to these men at the St. Boniface railway station.

FIND LOST RECORDS OF JEWS IN CHINA

Dr. Oko Returns With Hebraic Papers Covering Ming Dynasty, 1368-1644.

LONG SUFFERING REVEALED

Valuable Manuscripts Include Prayer Books—Go to Union College, Cincinnati.

Adolph S. Oko, librarian of the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, has brought to New York complete records of a Hebraic community life and culture which existed in China during the Ming dynasty, 1368-1644, of which all trace had been lost to civilization.

Mr. Oko returned on Thursday on the Berengaria from an extended book scouting expedition in Europe, in which he succeeded in finding fifty-nine Chinese Hebrew manuscripts bound in original Chinese silk, which, with the exception of four, which were stolen several years ago from an exhibition in London, constitute all the manuscripts known to have been written by Jews living in China.

The manuscripts consist of hymnals and prayer books and were brought from China to London by the London Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews in China, an organization which sent missionaries to that country for the first time in 1849. They werep urchased by the missionaries of that society in the village of Kae-fung-foo.

The manuscripts are curious in that, instead of being in the form of scrolls, they are in the shape of fans. The oblong pages are folded one upon the other, and the reader pulls the pages out fan-wise. Several books, consisting of hymnals and prayer books, contain translations of hymns into the Jewish-Persian dialect, thereby indicating a relationship between the Chinese and Persian-Hebrew rituals.

"The money for the purchase of these books," said Mr. Oko yesterday, "was made available by a group of Jews in the West, headed by Ben Selling of Portland, Ore., and Rabbi Jonah Wise, son of Isaac M. Wise, late founder of the Hebrew Union College, also of that city. With the new acquisitions the Hebrew Union College library will now house 70,000 books, among which are the largest Spinoza and Hebrew musical collections in the world."

Experience of Missionaries.

Accompanying the manuscripts is a history of the experience of the missionaries of the village of Kae Fing-foo. The introduction shows how in the middle of the nineteenth century once powerful Jewish groups had sunk into poverty and whole communities were in danger of disintegration. Persecution and starvation were the familiar lot of the remnants of the Ming dynasty Jews at that period. The writer of the history appends interesting notes on how the manuscripts were acquired.

The introduction to the history reads, in part, as follows:

"Since the British treaty of Nanking in 1842 many Christians in Europe have directed their attention toward the Jews in China. It was at their request that the writer of these introductory remarks undertook to direct the general plan and management of the undertaking • • • A friendly feeling was generally evinced toward our visitors, which is in no small measure attributable to the Hebrew letter of introduction from Shanghai, of which, although the Jews understood not the purport, they readily perceived its identity with their own sacred writings. Without such an introduction they would probably have been received with suspicion and distrusted as spies.

"Our visitors learned that during the year 1849 the whole of the little Jewish community at Kae-fung-foo were thrown into great alarm and exposed to danger of persecution, on account of suspected connection with foreigners, by a letter written in Chinese and dispatched some time before by the late Temple Layton, H. B. M. Consul at Amoy, for the purpose of procuring some Hebrew M S S. • • •

"Here in the midst of a surrounding population, two-thirds of whom were professors of Mohammedanism, and close adjoining to a heathen temple dedicated to the 'god of fire,' a few Jewish families, sunk in the lowest poverty and destitution, their religion scarcely more than a name, and yet sufficient to separate them from the multitude around, exposed to trial, reproach and the pain of long-deferred hope, remained the unconscious depositaries of the oracles of God and survived as the solitary witnesses of departed glory. Not a single individual could read the Hebrew books; they had been without a rabbi for fifty years.

Synagogue in Ruins.

"The expectation of a Messiah seems to have been entirely lost. The rite of circumcision, which appears to have been observed at the period of their discovery by the Jesuits two centuries ago, had been totally discontinued. The synagogue itself was tottering in ruins; some of the ground had been alienated to pagan rites, and a portion of the fallen materials sold to the neighboring heathen. Some time previously they had petitioned the Chinese Emperor to have pity on their poverty, and to rebuild their temple. No reply had been received from Peking, but to this feeble hope they still clung. Out of seventy family names or clans, only seven now remained, numbering about 200 individuals in all, dispersed over the neighborhood. According to present appearances, in the judgment of our native messengers, after a few years all traces of Judaism will probably have disappeared."

WHEAT DUTY RAISED 12 CENTS A BUSHEL

President Fixes Rate at 42 Cents—Flour to Pay 26 Cents More a Hundredweight.

BY-PRODUCTS RATE LOWER

Bran, Shorts and Feeds Rate Cut in Half, Making the Tariff 7½% Ad Valorem.

EFFECTIVE 30 DAYS HENCE

Coolidge's Statement Explains How Flexible Tariff Provision Was Applied in First Case.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Acting under the flexible section of the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Law, President Coolidge today increased the duty on wheat from 30 cents to 42 cents a bushel, the duty on wheat flour and other wheat products from 78 cents to $1.04 a hundred pounds and reduced the duty on bran and by-products produced in milling wheat from 15 per cent ad valorem to 7½ per cent. ad valorem.

This is the first time the President has acted under the flexible clause of the tariff law. He made his action known in a proclamation after an investigation into the cost of production at home and abroad made by the tariff commission. The new rates go into effect 30 days after the date of proclamation. After citing the law applicable to the tariff changes, the proclamation reads:

Now, therefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby determine and proclaim that the increases and decreases in the rates of duty provided in said act shown by said ascertained differences in said costs of production necessary to equalize the same, are as follows:

An increase in said duty on wheat from 30 cents per bushel of sixty pounds to 42 cents per bushel of sixty pounds;

An increase in said duty on wheat flour, semolina, crushed or cracked wheat, and similar wheat products not specially provided for, from 78 cents per hundred pounds to $1.04 per hundred pounds;

A decrease in said duty on bran, shorts, and by-product feeds obtained in milling wheat (within the limit of total decrease provided for in said act) from 15 per centum ad valorem to 7½ per centum ad valorem.

Statement by the President.

In explanation of his action the President issued this statement:

"The Tariff Commission has submitted to the President, pursuant to the provisions of Section 315 of the Tariff act of 1922, a report on wheat and wheat products dutiable under paragraphs 729 and 730 of the Tariff act of the United States Tariff Commission to increase or decrease these duties (as well as any others in Title 1 of that act), provided the investigation by the Tariff Commission shows that such a change is necessary to equalize the difference in costs of production between the United States and the principal competing country. The law authorizes the President, in ascertaining the difference in costs of production, to take into consideration also any advantages or disadvantages in competition which he may find to exist. It further provides that no proclamation shall be issued until after the Tariff Commission has made its investigation, and that changes in rates so proclaimed shall not take effect until thirty days after the date of the President's proclamation.

"The Tariff Commission made the investigation required by law expeditiously. The desirability of an investigation of the wheat industry was brought to the attention of the commission last November by Hon. Sidney Anderson, President of the Wheat Council of the United States.

"Following its regular procedure with respect to applications, the Tariff Commission on Nov. 14, 1923, ordered an investigation. A preliminary hearing was held on Nov. 26 and immediately thereafter a field investigation was begun by the Tariff Commission for the purpose of ascertaining the difference in costs of production in the United States and Canada. Expert agents of the Tariff Commission carried on this investigation in the United States and in Canada, and the actual field work was concluded on Jan. 26, 1924. Field reports and records were obtained from a total of seventy-nine regions in the United States and Canada. The field work in the case of flour and mill feeds was begun on Jan. 23, 1924, and completed on Feb. 14. A public hearing was held by the commission in accordance with the law on Feb. 18-19 and Feb. 25-26, 1924. At this hearing interested parties were given an opportunity to be present, to present evidence, and to be heard.

"As a result of this investigation the Tariff Commission's report, containing data on costs and other competitive conditions relating to wheat, wheat flour and mill feeds, was laid before the President.

Results of the Investigation.

"On the basis of the record of the Tariff Commission's investigation, the President finds:

"1. That the principal competing country in the case of wheat, wheat flour and mill feeds is the Dominion of Canada.

"2. That in the case of wheat the difference in costs of production between the United States and the Dominion of Canada is 42 cents per bushel of 60 pounds.

"3. That in the case of flour, the difference in costs of production between the United States and the Dominion of Canada is $1.04 per 100 pounds. This consists of two elements, the one an amount designed to compensate the millers for the duty which they must pay on wheat imported into the United States, and the other, to cover the difference in conversion costs in the two countries.

"4. The difference in costs of production of mill feeds between the United States and the Dominion of Canada is $0.003 per 100 pounds.

"The President, therefore, in the proclamation issued today has ascertained and determined the rates of duty necessary to equalize the difference in costs of production thus ascertained between the United States and the Dominion of Canada in the case of wheat and wheat products and, therefore, proclaims as the new rates of duty, 42 cents per bushel of 60 pounds on wheat (an increase over the present rate by 12 cents per bushel), $1.04 per 100 pounds on wheat flour, semolina, crushed or cracked wheat and similar wheat products (an increase over the present rate of 26 cents per 100 pounds), and a duty of 7½ per cent. (the maximum decrease permitted under the law) on bran, shorts, and byproduct feeds obtained in milling wheat (a decrease of the present rate of 7½ per cent.)"

BRADY SAYS EQUITY WILL SMASH P. M. A.

Enforcement of "Closed Shop" Will Wipe Out Organization of Managers, He Says.

THEN CHAOS WILL RETURN

Declares Public Is Against Actors This Time as It Was For Them Before.

In a letter to Frank Gillmore, Executive Secretary of the Actors' Equity Association, which was made public last night, William A. Brady assailed the "closed shop" and declared that Equity was "on the eve of smashing the Producing Managers' Association into bits." The letter was in reply to the following from Mr. Gillmore:

William A. Brady, The Playhouse, 137 West Forty-eighth Street, New York City.

Dear Bill: Would you mind telling me how you reconcile signing that statement of the Producing Managers' Association this morning with the interview which Emerson and I had with you and Lee Shubert at the Ritz Hotel? At that time you and Mr. Shubert stated that you were willing to concede equity shop to the Actors' Equity Association as well as other things. Since then Equity has included a number of concessions, and therefore, I am at a loss to understand this apparent change on your part. Sincerely,

FRANK GILLMORE,
Executive Secretary, Actors' Equity Association.

Brady's Reply to Him.

Replying to the above letter, Mr. Brady wrote:

Frank Gilmore,
Executive Secretary, Actors' Equity Association, 115 West Forty-Seventh Street, City.

My dear Frank:

I have your note of March 6. I did not sign any statement issued by the Producing Managers' Association. Certain producing managers asked me if I were willing to sign a protest against the closed shop in the theatre—you will call it Equity shop. In my opinion both terms mean the same thing and, once made operative, will cause the ultimate ruin of the theatre.

You know my ideas. I have often stated them to Mr. Emerson and yourself, and I firmly believe if the rank and file of the Equity were permitted to hear the other side of the closed shop question clearly stated to them there would be no necessity of bringing about another disastrous breaking up of the morale of the theatre. It has taken five years to restore the good feeling that now exists between actor and producer. Neither finds much cause for complaint. All disagreements have been quickly and pleasantly settled. Disputes are few and far between.

The producers in meetings held during the past year with yourself and Mr. Emerson have granted every demand you have made except the closed shop. They all believe in the equity and the good that your association has accomplished and would fight to a finish any movement made to destroy your organization. They have worked shoulder to shoulder with you now for nearly five years and you will admit, I am sure, that a lot of good has been accomplished, but I am hoping that you realize you are now on the eve of smashing the Producing Managers' Association into bits. If this happens, as it surely will whether you enforce closed shop or not, what will be the result? The Equity will have no Producing Managers' Association to deal with, no way to successfully enforce the proper carrying out of agreements and the whole theatrical producing business will return to the chaos that existed before the Producing Managers' Association and the Equity entered into their present agreement. It will become a case of every one for himself and you know as an old actor what that means.

Sees Public Against Actors.

You have admitted to me many times that there are irresponsible actors as well as managers. There has always been and always will be right and wrong on both sides. Many incidents during the course of this season have proven what you have always admitted.

Stop, look and listen, Frank; the public will be against you this time, and you know by experience that strikes are not successful when the public disapproves of your policy. Take note of the recent editorial comment made by all the leading newspapers of the United States in criticism of what you are about to do. They were with you the last time because they believed you were the under dog. They are 'agin you' this time because you now seem to be drunk with the power that has been put into your hands and are prepared to use it for no good purpose.

It is quite true, as you say in your letter, that I had an interview with you sometime ago, when Lee Shubert and John Emerson were present, at the Ritz Hotel. We discussed the possibility that that argument could not have taken place in the presence of your whole association. If it had, I do not believe there would be any talk of a strike now.

Will Not Leave Business.

I am not fool enough to say that I am going out of the business if you succeed in establishing "a closed art shop." I am well aware of the fact that the Equity can force all the producing managers to sign on the dotted line—what then? I hope I may be alive to see the result. You know what I mean, Frank.

Hoping you will regard these lines as from one old actor to another, I remain, as I have always been, your sincere admirer, knowing that you are trying to do what you think best.

Sincerely,
WILLIAM A. BRADY.

Evidence of approval of the position taken by the council of the Actors' Equity Association to meet a possible lockout on June 1 because of the stand taken by twenty-seven of the producing managers, are piling up, according to Mr. Gillmore. A cablegram was received yesterday from George Arliss, now appearing in "The Green Goddess" at the St. James Theatre, London, which said: "In my opinion Equity shop will benefit equally actor and manager. I support it unreservedly."

The Independent Theatre, Inc., producers of "The Shame Woman," now running at the Comedy Theatre, announced yesterday that it was in agreement with Lee Shubert and would make a separate peace with Equity.

W. T. CANDLER ON STAND.

Testifies in Own Behalf at Byfield Suit Trial.

DECATUR, Ga., March 7.—Walter T. Candler, son of Asa G. Candler, this afternoon testified in his own behalf in the suit for $100,000 brought against him by Mrs. Sarah Byfield.

Describing occurrences preceding the night on the Berengaria when Candler was alleged to have attacked Mrs. Byfield, Candler testified that Byfield had borrowed $2,500 from him to make the trip and asked him "to keep it quiet." He added that Mrs. Byfield "had taken too much champagne" and that he went to the Byfield stateroom to inquire about her. While he was there Byfield walked in and declared:

"I've got you at last."

A Correction.

In a statement in yesterday's issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES concerning the return from Bermuda of William C. Reick, who has been convalescing after a long illness, Mr. Reick was incorrectly referred to as the President of the Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin. Mr. Reick retired from the Presidency of that publication last October, after two years in that position, and was succeeded by Rafael R. Govin.

WEDDING PLANS JAIL TWO.

Father and Son Held on Complaint of the Girl's Father.

Louis and Frank Krohnengold, father and son, of 1,631 Fifty-third Street, Brooklyn, were locked up at Police Headquarters last night on a bench warrant charging them with the theft of $4,500 from Morris Grief, a dress cutter, of 1,554 President Street, Brooklyn, in a deal which was to result, it was alleged, in the marriage of young Krohnengold to Grief's 20-year-old daughter.

Indictments charging grand larceny were returned against the Kronengolds yesterday. Detectives said that the indictments alleged that on Nov. 1 last Grief, who previously had met the elder Kronengold at a lodge meeting, gave the father $2,000 when they had arranged a marriage between the young couple.

Grief further alleged, according to the indictments, that Krohnengold told him that his son had just been graduated from a medical school in Chicago; that he intended to open an office in this city and that he felt Grief should pay him $2,000 to reimburse him, in part, for the exepnditure in connection with the son's medical training. The detective said that the indictments also alleged that in January, when the plans for a wedding ceremony and feast had been decided on, young Krohnengold got $2,500 from Grief, part of it to pay for medical instruments.

When the Krohnengolds appeared to lose interest in the preparations for the wedding, Grief began an investigation which he charged resulted in the discovery that young Krohnengold was not a physician.

It was learned last night that young Kronengold had leased space in Kramer's Sanitarium at 137 East Sixty-third Street. "He carried on pathological research work there," the proprietor said.

The Kronengolds will be arraigned today in General Sessions.

"YOUTH" PROGRAM RADICAL.

Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. Leaders at Conference Unofficially.

The New Leader, a radical weekly, published a report yesterday of a "youth conference" at Bear Mountain Inn on March 1 and 2, attended by members of many organizations, including the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., at which a program was adopted calling for socialization of railroads, mines and super-power, support of trade unions and an independent political party of workers and farmers.

The conference was called by Devere Allan of The World Tomorrow and the Executive Committee, according to the article, included Miss Jean Kennedy of the Intercollegiate Branch of the Y. M. C. A. and Thomas McCurdy, Executive Secretary of the Intercollegiate branch of the Y. M. C. A.

In answer to inquiries made at the headquarters of these associations it was pointed out yesterday that their members had no official standing and no power to commit the Y. M. C. A. or Y. W. C. A. It was intimated that a group of radicals had usurped authority at the meeting and jammed the program through.

According to Miss Delcott, an official of the Y. W. C. A., who attended the meeting, the Y. W. C. A. sent "delegates" to act as "cooperating agents," with no powers to commit the Y. W. C. A. to any action. The program will not be placed officially before the Y. M. C. A., it was understood yesterday.

REVOLT IN ARGENTINE STATE

Insurgents Besiege Governor and Declare Him Ousted.

BUENOS AIRES, March 7.—A rebellion directed against Governor San Roman of the Province of La Rioja by one of the factions of the Radical Party, is reported in a dispatch from the city of La Rioja.

Thus far, the dispatch says, two men have been killed and ten wounded, and police headquarters has been captured by the insurgents.

Governor San Roman is a member of the Radical Party. After firing on the police guarding the Governor's house, wounding two of them, the forces of revolt surrounded it and held the Governor besieged this morning.

The "revolutionary juntas" then issued a proclamation taking over the provincial Government, stating that Governor San Roman did not represent the popular will.

Although a regiment of Federal troops is stationed in La Rioja, they took no action except to establish patrols about public buildings.

SEXTON SHOOTS THIEF.

Poorbox Money Scattered on Floor in Philadelphia Church.

PHILADELPHIA, March 7.—A man who said he was James McCallum, aged 46, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was shot by the sexton of the Church of the Holy Child early today when, according to the sexton, he attempted to rob the poorbox.

The shooting followed a hand-to-hand struggle in the dark. The police found a flashlight and kit of tools near the rifled box. Money had been dropped on the floor.

Jeraldine Calla in Recital.

Jeraldine Calla was heard in a song recital last evening at Aeolian Hall. She was a great favorite with her audience, which applauded everything she did, with great enthusiasm. Miss Calla has an attractive stage presence and a clear, neat soprano, not yet fully developed at its two extremities. She sing agreeably, without much variety of expression or particular style, but with youthful animation. Her program was quite ambitious and included an ariette from Gretry's "Richard Coeur de Leon," a Mozart aria, a German group and Verdi's "Ah! Fors e lui" from "La Traviata." Coenraad V. Bos gave admirable support at the piano, as usual.

Gibbons Bought Flagler Home.

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, March 7.—Douglas Gibbons of New York was announced today as the purchaser of Whitehall, the Henry M. Flagler mansion, the sale of which was reported early this week. Mr. Gibbons is said to be representing a group of New York business men. In a statement issued today he says that the mansion will be used as an apartment and a centre for arts. It is planned to construct two new wings adjoining the present building, which will be converted into apartments.

SEES DOHENY OIL IN M'ADOO'S BOOTS

Senator Reed in Closing Missouri Primary Campaign Also Rails at Coolidge.

LOUISIANA, Mo., March 7.—Senator Reed assailed those who challenge his Democracy here today, in ending his primary campaign in Missouri for the Democratic Presidential nomination. He wanted, he said, "to drive the clinching nail in the political coffin of William G. McAdoo, for it is my duty to fight for the public wherever the trail of bribery and corruption may lead."

He reiterated that President Coolidge should be impeached unless he dismissed Attorney General Daugherty and "others." "The President may quit, anyway, when the people get a crack at him at the polls," he said.

"Mr. McAdoo," he added, "may win the Missouri delegation, but no man wearing boots filled with Mr. Doheny's petroleum can carry a State in the general election."

The Senator asserted the public viewed with "indignation and horror testimony that the Executive Department had communicated with rogues, using a code of the Department of Justice."

The chief issue in the campaign was elimination of "governmental corruption," he said.

PROFITS TO AID DELEGATES.

Pearson Issues Warning About Democratic Convention Program.

A. C. Pearson, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the New York National Convention Committee, announced yesterday that no individual would be permitted to profit from the sale of the official program of the Democratic National Convention, which the committee will handle.

He issued a warning against giving orders for advertising in any convention program to unauthorized persons, reports having reached him that some unauthorized soliciting had been going on. The committee's salesmen, who have been supplied with credentials, began work yesterday.

All profits from advertising or the sale of the program will be turned over to the Entertainment Committee, the members of which will look after the comfort and entertainment of visitors to the convention late in June. Mr. Pearson said that the committee intended to publish a program which would be not only an official record of the order of the convention's proceedings, but also a handsome souvenir of New York City.

THEUNIS HITS OBSTACLE.

Belgian Premier Makes No Progress in Cabinet Building.

Copyright, 1924, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BRUSSELS, March 7.—Premier Theunis has not yet concluded his Cabinet-making. There are still difficulties in connection with the number of portfolios to be held by the Liberals and Catholics, respectively, and also with regard to their importance in comparison with the numerical importance of the two groups, which will constitute a majority in the Chamber.

M. Theunis had an audience with the King at midday, and made known to him the trend of events, but up to this evening, contrary to expectations, he has not been able to announce to the King his definite acceptance of the task of forming another Administration.

FAVORS A CITY BOX OFFICE.

Brady Believes Municipal Ticket Control Would Help Theatres.

A bill introduced at Albany on Thursday, calling for municipal distribution of all theatre tickets, was the subject of considerable comment by Broadway theatrical men yesterday. William A. Brady, in particular, was inclined to regard the new bill introduced by Senator Dunnigan of the Bronx with favor, but emphasized the fact that he had not read it and so did not know what practical means were being outlined to carry out the bill's provisions.

"I presume that Senator Dunnigan plans to handle all these tickets through a central office," said Mr. Brady. "This, of course, is exactly what was proposed by the Producing Managers' Association last Summer, but at the last minute several managers refused to lend their support. Now, however, if the Senate and Assembly will provide for the handling of tickets in this way and make it compulsory, it might be the best thing in the world for the theatre. To be fully effective such an office should deal in every branch of amusements, as Senator Dunnigan apparently plans."

Eva Le Gallienne to Play in French.

Eva Le Gallienne, playing in French, will appear with Mme. Simone in "La Vierge Folle" when the latter comes to the Gaiety Theatre on the afternoon of March 21. Mme. Simone will be seen in a series of six matinees, in the course of which a number or other well-known players will act with her. Jose Ruben will appear in one of the later plays.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Henry Baron declares that he will rent a theatre for two years, beginning in the Fall, and will star Henry Herbert in a succession of productions.

Hal Van Rensselaer will appear in "Vogues," which the Shuberts are now rehearsing.

Josephine Drake has been engaged for "Sweet Seventeen," opening at the Lyceum a week from Monday.

The graduation exercises of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts will take place at the Lyceum Theatre on Friday afternoon of next week. Addresses will be made by Jane Cowl, Augustus Thomas and Hatcher Hughes.

"Box Office Prices"
PROFITEERING by speculators—on or off the sidewalk—has caused most people to consider "box-office price" an empty phrase. The great demand for theatre tickets has been too much of a temptation to the get-rich-quick gentry.
But at McBride's box-office price has a very definite meaning. It is what we always have charged and always will charge—plus "50c. for service—never a penny more."

FIVE DAYS' RUG SALE BRINGS $4,795,000

Brisk Bidding Features Offering of 18,000 Bales, Which Go for $1,100,000.

PRICES UNDER SPRING LIST

Yonkers Axminsters Will Be Up First at Today's Session—Yesterday's Detailed Sales.

The fifth day of the rug sale in the salesrooms of the Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Company, 285 Fifth Avenue, was again marked by brisk bidding, and it was 6:30 o'clock before the 18,000 bales offered were disposed of. A total of $1,100,000 was realized for the day, making a grand total for the five days of the sale of $4,795,000.

All offerings moved well and there was no waiting for bids. The expected slump in prices did not materialize. Fewer small lots were auctioned yesterday and more "balances" sold. These were quickly taken by the large jobbers. It was noticeable that toward the end of the sale the most spirited bidding developed. On some lots prices shaded off a bit, but the average for special patterns was higher. Prices were generally lower than those quoted in the Spring list.

The following list shows the highest and lowest prices paid for rugs sold yesterday, with the Spring list quotations:

FOR UNIFORM ROAD RULES.

Railways' Plan for Federal Action Outlined to Lawyers.

Arguments for a Federal Rules of the Road act to secure uniformity and reduce automobile accidents all over the country were advanced before the Committee on Commerce, Trade and Commercial Law of the American Bar Association yesterday by Herbert E. Rowe, chairman of the Committee on the Prevention of Highway Crossing Accidents of the American Railway Association, and D. E. Minard, general attorney of the Erie Railroad. The committee met at the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, 65 Liberty Street.

Doubt as to the legal practicability of the plan was expressed by some members of the Bar Association Committee. Mr. Rowe will file a brief and the recommendations of the committee will be announced at the forthcoming annual meeting of the Bar Association.

W. H. H. Piatt of Kansas City, Chairman of the committee, said that the differences in the rules of the road in various States were a decided detriment, now that country-wide automobile travel had become common.

"Motoring leads all sports or diversions in cripples and deaths," Mr. Piatt said, "and the committee feels the question is important enough to justify it in seeing if it can do anything constructive to benefit the public."

Mr. Rowe said the question of Federal regulation would be discussed in Chicago April 30 at a national conference to which Governors, members of public utility commissions and State highway officials have been invited.

He said he believed that Federal laws could be passed dealing with Federal-aid highways and post roads and that the States would then enact similar statutes.

OPPOSE RAILROAD RATE CUT

Steamship Officials Hear Effect on Intercoastal Trade.

Hearings by Examiner H. A. Pattison of the Interstate Commerce Commission upon the application of the transcontinental railroads for a lower rate west of Chicago were concluded yesterday and the results go to the commission in Washington for determination. Officials of the Luckenbach Steamship Company and other maritime officials appeared in opposition to the plea of the roads contending that lower rates might have a bad effect on American intercoastal shipping. Robert W. Garrow, assistant traffic manager of the Luckenbach company, said:

"Rates in this trade should be left profitable to any steamship line which may care to enter the intercoastal trade, in order to insure the development of the American merchant marine, as well as to support American shipyards with repair work and orders for new vessels. It is easy to recall the early days of our entry into the war, when steamers were so urgently required by the Government that it was necessary to construct shipyards at almost every possible place to get the required number of vessels."

SENATE VOTES MORE FOR CUSTOMS PAY

Wadsworth and Copeland Lead Fight for $2,500,000 Increase in Appropriation.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The Senate today voted an increase of $2,500,000 for operation of the Customs Service. Senators Wadsworth and Copeland of New York led the fight for the increase, the former saying that millions of dollars were being lost because of inefficiency of inspection, and that it was hopeless to attain efficiency unless additional funds were supplied.

The Customs Service, Senator Wadsworth said, was forced to pay such low salaries that capable men would not enter it. He had seen a list of eligibles furnished to the clerk of the Port of New York, he declared, and it looked like the "roll-call of the Soviet Republic."

The debate was during consideration of the combined Treasury and Post Office Department Appropriation bill. As it came from the House the bill carried an appropriation of $13,680,000 for the Customs Service. This was raised to $16,180,000. New York will be a chief beneficiary.

The sum of $736,000,00 was appropriated in the Treasury and Post Office Departments bill which passed the Senate, including an amendment for $300,000 to continue the air mail service between New York and San Francisco, which had been approved by the committee. On the otheh hand the Senate voted dowi a proposal to restore pneumatic mail tube service in Boston, Philadelphia and St. Louis.

Several Democrats attacked the increase for personnel in the Customs Service, but the vote after two and a half hours' debate was 51 to 15. Senator Wadsworth in his speech referred to a report of two investigators sent to New York to examine into the situation there.

"If the Senate wants this service to rot at its roots," he continued, "let it deny this increase, for that is what is going on."

The Senator read a part of the testimony given before the Appropriations Committee "by a Mr. Lovett, representing the Merchants' Association of New York," which showed that the Merchants' Association had made an investigation of its own, and found an utter lack of efficient service or supervision of imports.

"In 1914, 14,613 vessels cleared at the Port of New York," Senator Wadsworth said. "The value of the imports was $1,029,600,000. The number of employes in 1914 was 3,186. Today there are 2,864, that is 200 less than there were ten years ago. The business in imports, however, has increased from $1,029,000,000 to $1,770,000,000. It has increased in value of imports about 80 per cent.

"The cost of collection back in 1914 was .0227. The cost of collection in 1923 was .0165. The cost of collection in 1923 is by far lower than any year since 1914. The cost of collection has gone up as high as 4 cents, in 1918 and 1919. It is down to 1 2-3 cents now, so that no charge of extravagance can be made. It is the lowest cost of collection in the history of the Customs House."

Senator Lodge said that substantially the same reductions had been made in the Boston Customs House, and Senator Wadsworth observed that there had been reductions everywhere.

"These men are still straining along with that old pay," the New York Senator declared.

"Very good men, miserably underpaid," Senator Lodge agreed.

Mr. Wadsworth called attention to the increased cost of living and said the men should be treated "decently" and that there should be more employes.

"My experience in the Administrative Department of New York," Senator Copeland said, "is that the difficulty is the low basis of beginners' salaries. It is most important to start in the service, men who are going to be qualified when they reach their promotion. To my mind it is very important that provision be made for ample salary at the start, so that we can have the right kind of employes in the department."

Twenty-Five Per Cent. Is Lopped From Amount Due, Not From Income.

ALBANY, March 7.—The numerous inquiries which have reached the Income Tax Bureau of the State Tax Department since the enactment of the law making a 25 per cent. cut in the 1923 income tax prompted Thomas M. Lynch, director of the bureau, to issue a statement tonight correcting erroneous impressions.

"The measure allowing resident and non-resident taxpayers to lop off 25 per cent. of their tax payments," said Director Lynch, "means just what it says. Some inquirers are of the impression that the taxpayer is permitted to reduce his net income by one-quarter and then pay the tax on the balance, as if $12,000 net income could be changed to $9,000. But the law does not make this provision. It tells the taxpayer to find out how much tax he would ordinarily pay, and then pay three-quarters of that amount, instead of the original tax.

"If John Jones is required to pay a 1923 tax of $16, the Smith plan of relief says that his tax liability is completely satisfied if he sends a remittance of $12. Those who have already filed 1923 returns will have proper refunds made to them by the bureau without applications on their part.

"Other people thought the reduction applied to the different classes of income taxable under each of the 1, 2 or 3 per cent rates. This is also an incorrect acceptance of the statute."

DERY FORGERY HEARING.

Counsel for Defendant Says Creditors Knew of False Inventory.

A hearing before Magistrate Simpson in the Commercial Frauds Court yesterday on charges of forgery in the third degree made against Desidirius George Dery, former head of the D. G. Dery Corporation, manufacturers of silk, and his former sales manager, Eric Mulberger, brought out allegations that creditors of the corporation urged that stock be sold after a shortage of from $1,250,000 to $1,800,000 had been discovered in the inventory.

Assistant District Attorney Max Salomon stated that he would offer evidence in support of his allegations that the defendants falsified the records to cover up the shortages.

Isidor Gainsburg, attorney for Dery, charged that the creditors knew about the alleged shortage and urged the sale of stock to the public regardless of that fact. "All of the assets of the Dery Company were turned over to the Amalgamated Silk Corporation, which was organized by the company's creditors," said the attorney. "In addition Mr. Dery left every dollar of his personal fortune there. He simply put on his hat and coat and walked out."

Allan Macfarlan, sales manager of the Japan Cotton Trading Company, complainant against Dery, testified yesterday. Assistant District Attorney Salomon brought out testimony that Dery made a verbal agreement with Macfarlan to repurchase in three years the preferred stock of his company subscribed for at the request of Dery to assist in floating the bond issue.

Counsel for Dery asked Mr. Macfarlan if it wasn't a fact that the Dery concern was solvent at the time of the receivership and the witness replied that it was solvent as a going concern if the "so-called assets" were included. Attorney Gainsburg then offered evidence that Supreme Court Justice Joseph M. Proskauer, who was one of the equity receivers of the Dery company before he was appointed to the bench, reported to the Federal Court last April that the company had a net worth of $5,000,000 above its liabilities other than capital stock.

Mr. Macfarlan said he accepted statements made to him by Dery without investigating them because he had known Dery sixteen or seventeen years. The hearing will continue March 21 in the Criminal Courts Building.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday—4¾@5 per cent. for the best names.

Thursday—4¾@5 per cent. for the best names.

The quotations are for six months' paper.

Women's Shoe Styles Varied.

Although the various sandal effects have dominated the business that has been placed to date in women's shoes for Spring delivery, several other types of feminine footwear also have sold more or less freely. Two and three strap effects have done quite well, and a nice business has been booked on side and front gore models. Colonial and step-in pumps also have had a share in the orders placed by the retailers. Strong favor on the part of consumers is predicted for the better grades of women's shoes in Russia calf in light colors. Patent leather and satin pumps are still in the running, but a growing call for colored kid pumps for wear later in the season is said to presage a trend away from colored suede footwear.

⁂

Gray Goods Very Quiet.

Gray goods were very quiet in this market yesterday, and sales of importance were lacking. Second-hands sold near-by deliveries of 38½-inch, 64-60 printcloths at 9 cents, with first-hands asking an eighth more. Second-hands also sold 39-inch 68-72s at 10⅞ cents. Sheetings sales included 36-inch 6.15s at 7⅝ cents, and 37-inch 48-square four-yard goods at 10¾ cents.

⁂

Reorders Not Heavy Yet.

While this month is generally expected by women's garment wholesalers to be an active reorder one, this has not happened yet. Producers are not disturbed, however, as the retailers have not yet had a real chance to get started on their Spring offerings. The situation, it is pointed out, is radically different from that of last Fall, when the demand was light and stocks heavy. Cutters continue to play safe in making up garments, being urged to do so on all sides by their association heads. The weather also is a factor in the prospect of reorders. About seven weeks remain between now and Easter, and should the weather be adverse for a considerable part of this time, much Spring business would be lost that could not be made up.

⁂

Chiffon Hosiery in Demand.

Chiffon numbers in women's hosiery stand out in the current demand from retailers. Despite the talk of the market being oversupplied with these goods, more mills have gone into their production. The growing call has been stimulated by the introduction of a variety of new and bizarre shades. Among the most popular colors at the moment are melon, peach, apricot and shades on the order of nude and tan. Full fashioned hosiery, according to wholesalers, is not meeting with the demand that was looked for earlier in the season.

Better Demand for Anthracite.

A slightly better demand for independent anthracite coal has been noted this week, probably because the output of company coal was curtailed late in February by holiday shutdowns and local strikes, Saward's Journal will say today. This loss of tonnage coincided with a somewhat brisker movement from retail yards, due to weather conditions, so that stocks ran down faster than dealers had anticipated. Independent prices have stopped receding and are holding about steady. Stove and nut are commanding a slight premium, while egg and pea are offered at substantial concessions from circular prices. Dealers are more anxious for stove than chestnut coal. Prices have weakened somewhat in the tidewater bituminous market of late, but are holding fairly steady in the line trade. Local unsettlement has come about in spite of the fact that the number of cars at the piers has not increased.

Stamped Goods Selling Well.

After a period in which the demand was not overstrong, wholesalers of stamped goods are finding quite a spurt in the call from retailers. In certain items, such as goods to be made into house dresses and certain bedspreads, the wholesalers find they cannot make delivery in less than two weeks. Children's garments, luncheon sets, table covers and napkins for hand sewing and embroidery are other articles in good request. Some houses report a growing demand for goods for lamp shades and similar lighting decorations.

Call for Twills Keeps Up.

Quite a sizeable business in twills is still being done by sellers here. The women's suit demand is supplying the outlet for these goods, which are wanted principally in hairline effects. The call a while ago was so strong that the dress goods mills, being taken unawares, could not fully meet the demand, which finally was taken care of by the men's wear jobbers. High colored flannels continue to be sought, but the mills are generally refusing to take orders for delivery of these fabrics past April 10. The demand for velour and similar coatings is not so strong as it was. This was expected, however, by the trade, as the cutters have about covered their Spring coat requirements.

Carryover Affects Small Stores.

Clothing retailers in the larger cities are believed to have done fairly well in the liquidation of their overcoats and heavyweight suits. There will be some carry-over, according to opinion in the local wholesale market, but this will not be a serious factor with most stores. In the case of the retailers in the smaller centres, however, as good a story cannot be told. The carry-over in these instances will, it is expected, be quite substantial. In the case of suits it will be lessened by the fact that they can be mixed in with Spring lines, owing to the slight difference in weights and practically no style changes. The general clothing situation is held to be improving. One indication of this is the slight betterment in collections, which promises to improve further as the stores swing into the Spring season.

Tailored Effects in Blouses.

The suit remains the largest influence that is shaping the blouse lines of manufacturers here. Plain tailored blouses, of the same severe lines as the mannish suit, are, accordingly, most favored. Those of dimity, English broadcloth, radiums or crêpe de chine are the ones most wanted at the moment. For the "dressy" suit the fancy overblouse is being bought by the stores. Sleeveless blouses and vests in both cotton and silks are meeting with some favor. The trend in this direction may grow as the season advances.

THE WEEK'S PRICE TREND.

Marked Weakness Was Shown in the List of Dairy Products.

The price trend of last week was reversed in the present one, there being more declines than advances this time, though the margin was slight. †Nominal.

Of the twenty changes in the foodstuffs this week eleven were upward. The only change in flour to be shown in the provision list was an advance of 15 cents a barrel in Spring patents. Middle Western lard was higher by 5 cents per hundred pounds. No change was noted in hams or bacon. At Chicago live hogs were higher but there was no change in live beef. Mess pork and live sheep were likewise without change.

For the third week in succession, all of the changes in the local dairy products list were downward. All of the listed butters showed a decline of a cent a pound. The best cheese held steady. Egg prices again moved lower, there being a drop of 3 cents a dozen in fresh gathered firsts. Near-by fancies eased off 1 cent. The prices of eggs are much below the levels of a year ago. In the vegetables, there were no changes, in contrast to the two advances last week.

For the first time in several weeks there was no change in coffee. Tea was also unchanged. In the spices there were four declines to one advance. Fine granulated sugar again failed to show a change either way, but the price of 96-test raw sugar went down.

There was no change in the molasses or syrup.

In the grains, all of the five changes were advances. Number 2 red wheat went up a cent and a quarter a bushel. Malting barley advanced 2 cents per bushel. The leathers continued quotably unchanged. Hides were weaker, there being eight declines to one advance in this group. The increase was in Chicago city calfskins. Tallow showed a small drop.

Three advances to two declines featured the metals. Electrolytic copper, lead and tin were higher, but zinc was lower. No change took place in the building materials. One decline and one advance were shown in the lumber list. Maple was higher, while North Carolina air-dried "roofers" were lower.

In the combined chemicals and dyestuffs list there were nine declines and eight advances. Two increases and one drop were shown in the oils. Four advances appeared in the list of paints. The list of papers was bare of change. Plantation rubber was cheaper.

No change, for the first time in some weeks, was shown in either Chinese or Japanese raw silk. An advance and a decline were shown in the quoted burlaps.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks More Irregular, but Tendency Firm—Further Decline in Franc.

The outstanding movements on yesterday's markets were a somewhat more uncertain trend of prices on the Stock Exchange, with the business done the lightest of the year; another sharp decline in francs, and a downward reaction in the cotton market which canceled all of the week's earlier recovery and brought the spot price lower than on any previous day this year. Transactions in stocks fell below 500,000 shares; less than the Saturday half-holiday business of a few weeks ago and the smallest since Oct. 22, just before the low level of 1923 was reached in the Autumn Stock Exchange reaction.

On the average, the industrial group rose slightly and the railways hardly changed, but this did not show the contradictory movements of a point or more which occurred in a number of stocks, giving an entirely forced and purposeless appearance to the market as a whole. The financial and industrial position has in fact now outlined itself in so unspectacular a way that the stock market finds difficulty even in tentative forecasts of an altered future. After each successive development in the influences seemingly bearing on the future—the fall in money rates, the reaction in cotton prices, the flare-up over the Washington investigations, the decline in the franc—the general business situation comes into view again exactly what it was before. This is somewhat the same panorama as brought about the inertia of the Stock Exchange last Autumn, which was the despair of Wall Street.

Following its low price of 3.92 cents on Thursday and that day's closing of 3.95, the franc, though with some temporary recoveries, declined further yesterday to 3.74 and ended around that figure. Foreign selling entirely dominated the market; New York exchange dealers were perplexed and indisposed to trade. That Thursday's statement of the Bank of France had impressed financial sentiment unfavorably, all the dispatches from European markets proved. These same dispatches reflected also, however, the same perplexity as is felt in American financial circles; emphasizing the magnitude of speculative operations for the fall—which has been evident all along—but not making clear how much of the pressure comes from that familiar source and how much from frightened holders of francs in France itself.

One does not have to go back even as far as sterling's fall to $3.18 in 1920, in order to understand how genuine selling orders may be multiplied by the mere sight of a rapidly declining price; a phenomenon, indeed, even more familiar to the stock market than to foreign exchange. Little was said in the dispatches of the effect produced on the French Senate's consideration of the revenue increase bills by the recent sensational decline. In that regard, the situation is extremely odd. The enactment of the new tax bill is admitted to be a factor of the highest importance for restoring financial confidence; action in that direction, first by the Ministry and then by the Deputies, was forced by the year's two earlier declines in francs, and only the Senate now delays enactment. But this is as much as to say that the people whose sales have been driving down the franc this week have been contributing the most potent influence toward creating conditions distinctly adverse to their own ideas or purposes. Financial bewilderment over such a situation is surely pardonable.

The week-end mercantile trade reviews repeat the familiar story; for the tenth successive week we are told of "satisfactory volume of trade" and "progress on a solid basis," yet of "buying only as need arises" and of no sign of "the great upward sweep visible at this time a year ago." Perhaps this is only another way of describing stability in trade.

MONEY.

In an extremely quiet market Stock Exchange call loans were again quoted throughout the session at 4¼ per cent. There was only a very small turnover reported, and the supply, which was approximately $5,000,000, just about covered the demand. Loans against acceptances and Treasury certificates were arranged in the outside market at 4 per cent. Time money market was also a dull affair, and while there was but a nominal amount on offer the inquiry fell far short of the supply—the quotation continued 4¾@5 per cent. Commercial paper and acceptances were unchanged in discount.

FLORIDA RAILWAY PROJECT.

Seaboard Air Line Believed to Be Backing New Road.

Railroad officials and bankers see a direct connection between the new Florida, Northern & Western Railroad, soon to be constructed, and the Seaboard Air Line. Reports from Charleston, S. C., that W. R. Bonsal, head of the Jefferson Construction Company, was the head of the new railroad strengthened this opinion yesterday, because Mr. Bonsal is a vice-president of the Sea Board Air Line, and has done much construction work for that railroad. It was reported also that the Seaboard Air Line had granted the new railway right of way over any of its lands in Florida. Officials of the Seaboard Air Line, however, have denied that they were backing the new project and have stated that it must "stand on is own legs."

The new railroad, which will be 200 miles long, connects with the Seaboard Air Line in such a manner that it will become a direct competitor of the Florida East Coast. A plan is also under consideration, it is said, for a new cut-off on the Seaboard Air Line near Jacksonville, which would greatly shorten the present Seaboard Air Line, and make it even more of a competitor for the business on Palm Beach and the lower part of the state.

YUGOSLAVIA SEEKS LOAN.

Advance of $25,000,000 Probably Will Be Made in London.

As a result of a building boom and other developments which have created a strain on its money markets, Yugoslavia is seeking a loan or foreign credit of $25,000,000. Negotiations have been held by Yugoslav industrial leaders with London bankers, and it is regarded as probable that London will arrange the financing. New York is not expected to participate.

Yugoslavia's growth since it acquired a national entity resembles the development fifty years ago of some of the Western mining sections. With the establishment of Belgrade as the capital of the nation there was a need for new buildings, and a boom of unusual proportions was soon under way. Much money was required to finance this operation and the rates for loans ran up to 17 per cent.

Lawrence Mills on 3-Day Schedule.

LAWRENCE, Mass., March 7.—The print works and worsted departments of the Pacific Mills, which have been operating on a four days' a week schedule, will go on a three-days-a-week schedule starting next Monday, it was announced today. About 6,000 operatives will be affected.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Prices Irregular After Early Strength.

Following the general recovery in stock market prices on Thursday, firmness in the main prevailed on the Stock Exchange yesterday and many stocks added to their gains of the previous session. As the day progressed, however, there was a slackening in the demand for many stocks in the speculative group and as a result a sharp falling off occurred in the volume of business transacted. Accompanying this inactivity, the movement of prices became more irregular. Total transactions for the day were the smallest of any day thus far this year. Taking the list as a whole, the majority of the industrial stocks were higher at the close, while the railroad group was fractionally lower. The outstanding issues in the industrial group were Colorado Fuel, which jumped 2⅜ points on rumors of a change in control, and General Electric; but gains in most instances were confined to fractions. In the railroad group Lackawanna and Norfolk & Western were the strong features. Delaware & Hudson broke on circulation of rumors calling for a reduction in the annual dividend rate, but it recovered most of its loss before the close.

Bond Market "Enjoying a Rest."

Following several months of sprightly active business, the domestic bond market has so far this week undergone a period of comparative inactivity, a condition which it was said by investment bankers yesterday was certainly desirable at this time. The interesting development of the week, in the opinion of persons who described themselves as optimistic regarding the future, was the fact that the market had absorbed selling incident to the expiration of the syndicate agreement in the case of the Argentine 6s, and in another spot incident to the failure of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company. The undertone, they said, was distinctly good, although there was evidence to show that the general investment market was a bit overfed from some of the heavy morsels offered in the last three months. At the present moment interest seems to be centring mainly on the prospective upward trend of money rates which, from growing commercial loans, might appear to be upward over a period of six months or so.

Keeping Themselves Classified.

The "positive bulls" and the "positive bears" have reached the point where they are peevishly accusing each other of "turning on the market." Livermore, for instance, widely reported in Wall Street to have turned bullish again, denied it flatly yesterday and dared those who had repeated the story to prove it. So far as the other big market operators are concerned, they have "hopped from one side of the fence to the other" with such rapidity in the last fortnight that Wall Street simply cannot keep track of them. It is the consensus of opinion in speculative circles that few of them are themselves aware exactly where they do stand.

Conjecturing About the Franc.

Although the franc recorded another emphatic downward movement for the day as a whole, the course of the rate during the day was so irregular as constantly to change the expectations of the market regarding the next turn in the price. Adjusting itself to the decline made on the foreign markets before New York began business, the opening price on Wall Street showed a decline from 3.95 cents, Thursday's closing, to 3.82. After a slight recovery from this opening price, the rate fell quickly to 3.75, from which it recovered on what appeared to be strong buying to 3.85. Yet the closing movement of the day swept the price down again to its early low figure. Wall Street was entirely at sea as to the probable future of the market. The curious position of the franc, it was remarked in some financial circles yesterday, might be conducive to a further wide swing downward, or, upon the least fright on the part of persons who had sold it short, to a rush upward of as much as a full cent. Two things which were being watched for immediate results were the action to be taken in the French Senate on tax-increase plans and the publication of plans now being formulated by the experts' committee functioning under the eye of the Reparation Commission.

***

The Split-Ups in Prospect.

The story will not down that the two big chain-store companies will split up their stocks and cut some sort of a melon in the way of a stock dividend for present stockholders. This report was emphasized by the fact that S. S. Kresge sold up to $315 per share and Woolworth up to $321 per share, both of them new high records for all time. These stocks have reached the point where they are almost unmanageable on the "big board," and it was generally believed in Wall Street yesterday that some sort of readjustment for them is not far away.

An Unexpected Source of Buying.

The steel industry in general appears to have found its earlier predictions of increasing business somewhat exceeded, if some of the reports reaching Wall Street from steel industry centres are to be taken at face value, and a notable point brought out in these reports is the statement that railroad buying has been much heavier than has been anticipated. That the railroad companies should spend so much money on top of their large expenditures of last year was said yesterday to be in itself surprising. Several reasons were advanced for these expenditures: one that the stronger systems realize they can retain only a part of their earnings in excess of the 5¾ per cent. margin and wish to plow that surplus back into the property until a time when, it is hoped, the margin might be increased; another and doubtless more accurate reason is that the railroads already find themselves running well ahead of last year in point of car loadings and general business. This fact has led Wall Street to the conclusion that the 1,00,000 weekly car-loading mark will this year be passed earlier than ever before in railroad history and that the companies will get their roadbed and equipment in the best possible condition for the rush of business.

Prospects of Oil Legislation.

Whether the reports coming from Washington, declaring that the ultimate outcome of the oil investigation now going on in Washington will be the placing of restrictions on the oil industry and the control of its operations by the Government do or do not materialize, the subject was said yesterday to be causing some concern in oil trade circles. Leaders in the trade do not hesitate to express their opinion privately that such control is virtually impossible. Nevertheless, there are some interests which believe that in view of the recent hysteria in Washington some political group may seriously propose such a measure. Oil interests point out that their business is decidedly different from that of the railroads or other public utilities, or from that of the coal industry. In the latter trade, operations can be planned for a long period in advance; for the owners of these properties know what they have in hand. That is not the case in the oil industry, according to these officials, because of the vicissitudes of the business. A company may have a flood of oil one day and a shortage the next. If the latter situation exists probably millions of dollars would have to be risked to find new fields. The question thus arises whether the industry would be willing to risk such a vast amount of money if the rumored restrictions materialize.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

French Franc at New Low on Continuance of Speculation—Sterling Weak.

The action of yesterday's market for the European exchanges, and the result, was no different than those of the sessions immediately preceding—it revealed another successful onslaught on the French franc and a new low for all time at 3.74 cents, an overnight loss of 18 points. The decline, as usual, started on the other side and our market simply followed the trend abroad. An interesting movement, and one which possibly showed up the nervousness of the "shorts," was witnessed shortly after the Paris rate had gotten down to 3.75 cents, from 3.82¾, when a sharp demand recognized as more genuine than speculative covering, and taking large blocks out of the market, lifted the rate 10 points in fifteen minutes, checks selling up to 3.85 cents. But the market later softened on a fresh supply and the rate yielded these 10 points to 3.75 cents at the close. French press reports that the Government was dissatisfied with the tardiness of the Senate in approving the tax program, and that such delay would bring a forced resignation of the Cabinet, was yesterday added to the long list of depressing factors contributing to the franc's decline. Belgian franc was sympathetically weak at 3.32½ cents, a new low.

Sterling was weak after ruling comparatively steady in the face of the franc decline, London drafts dropping 2⅛ cents, to $4.27½, lowest since Jan. 31, when the market was on its way up from the severe break which occurred in mid-January. Italian, Holland, Scandinavian and the Spanish were all lower. The Japanese yen yielded 38 points, to 44 cents, a new low on this movement; other Easterns were firm.

ROCK ISLAND GAINS IN EARNINGS OF 1923

Net Is $4,481,502, Compared With $4,285,378 in Preceding Year.

EXPENSES ARE ALSO HIGHER

Floods in Southwest Were Costly—Property Described as in Excellent Condition.

Due to an increase in the gross revenues, the net earnings of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co. for 1923 were $4,481,502, compared with $4,285,378 in the preceding year. After allowance for fixed charges, the surplus is equivalent to $1.22 a share on the common stock, as compared with 96 cents in 1922.

Gross revenue for the year was $130,403,085, as compared with $125,086,233 in 1922. The fact that the increase in revenue was almost equaled by the increase in expenses is explained by the extra expenditures because of floods in Oklahoma and Arkansas.

	1923.	1922.
Operating expenses	104,990,136	100,570,926
Other income	1,795,449	1,765,540
Surplus	915,367	718,043

Among the total assets of $446,384,637, compared with $430,920,486 in 1922, are cash on hand of $7,539,715, against $6,518,200 in 1922; and material and supplies totaled $11,868,765, compared with $10,221,775 in the previous year.

The report on liabilities shows that the funded debt has increased from $239,287,480 in 1922 to $251,745,456 in the year just closed.

In his statement to the stockholders President J. E. Gorman called attention to the excellent physical condition of the property. "'The large amount appropriated in 1923 for additions and betterments and for new equipment should produce substantial economy in transportation expenses for 1924," he said.

LIVERMORE MAKES DENIAL.

Offers $25,000 for Proof That He Sent Rumored Wall Street Messages

Annoyed because stock market operators, to further their own purposes, have announced several times that "Livermore is going to issue a statement,' Mr. Jesse L. Livermore has offered a reward of $25,000 for proof that he had sent or contemplated any of the messages referred to in the rumors.

In his reply to an inquiry from the New York News Bureau, Mr. Livermore, who is at Palm Beach, wired yesterday:

"You can emphatically deny the rumor which was so industriously spread throughout the country today that I was to issue a statement this afternoon. I have sent no messages or wires nor have I made any private statements to any one; therefore the rumor that was started today was started by some unscrupulous person or persons. Three weeks ago, Feb. 14, I received requests from two brokers and one prominent capitalist asking me my personal opinion on the immediate future of the stock market. I sent them a short and concise opinion of my views and stated at that time it was confidential and only for them personally.

'Some one gave the message out and it was sent broadcast over a number of private wires and later carried by the newspapers. Having had the confidence of a personal and private message betrayed, there will be no more personal messages sent or given by me to any one."

MEXICO TO PAY $1,500,000.

April Instalment Lowered Because of Rebel Activity.

MEXICO CITY, March 7.—Three million pesos ($1,500,000) will be delivered to the international bankers' syndicate at New York on April 1 as the first instalment on the second payment of interest on the Mexican debt, says an official statement.

Hope is expressed that the Mexican Government will be able to deliver the 35,000,000 pesos due at the end of the present year. Rebel activities in the Tuxpam oil fields, which is responsible for a decrease in the oil exportation, is the reason given why the Government is ready to pay only 3,000,000 pesos at the present time.

Negotiations for the lease of the Norfolk & Western to the Pennsylvania Railroad may start within the next few weeks through the appointment of a committee by each road, it was stated yesterday.

If the deal is closed, it will be necessary to get the approval of the Virginia Railroad Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

FEBRUARY CLEARINGS FALL BELOW JANUARY

Smaller Total Caused by Decline in Drawn Checks Outside New York City.

Drawn checks on American banks, exchanged at the principal clearing houses of the country, for the month of February totaled $32,883,744,565, which was 12.4 per cent. less than the previous month, but 7.7 per cent. greater than February, 1923. This return, compiled by The Financial Chronicle, showed that the decline in clearings last month, compared with January, occurred outside of New York City, the total for this district being $18,120,109,846, which was 7.7 per cent. greater than January and 8 per cent. above the total for February a year ago. Outside of New York, the drawn checks aggregated $14,763,634,719, a decline of 28 per cent. from the January total, but 19.6 per cent. in excess of February, 1923.

TO PLAN A READJUSTMENT.

Receiver Seeking a Sound Basis for Virginia-Carolina Chemical.

C. G. Wilson, President and receiver of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company, has sent a letter to stockholders saying: "It is proposed to make an immedaite comprehensive study and investigate the company's problems for the guidance of the readjustment managers in order to determine the sound basis for a plan of readjustment."

"It had been the hope of the management earlier in the year," he said, "that the consolidated net earnings for the current fiscal year would show a substantial increase. It has now developed that due to a continuance of the adverse conditions this expectation will not be realized. The prospects therefore point to another year showing a loss after interest charges.

"Slow recovery of the industry as a whole during the post-war period imposed a heavy burden on the financial resources of the company. This slow recovery, however, had the unfortunate result of lessening the company's credit and its ability to readily secure continous credit lines from its commercial banks as it has for many years in the past. The company found itself confronted with the necessity of increasing its borrowings from the banks at the present time. Heavy Spring business and lowered credits rendered this impossible. Under the circumstances the reecivership was applied for in order to conserve the assets of the company and thus better protect the interests of the bondholders, general creditors and stockholders."

$6,000,000 POWER DEAL.

Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company Signs a Ten-Year Contract.

One of the largest industrial power contracts closed in recent months was announced yesterday by the North American Company on behalf of its subsidiary, the Union Electric Light and Power Company of St. Louis. The contract is with the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company and involves total revenue of $6,000,000 over a period of ten years.

Delivery of the power will be made at Crystal City, Mo., to which the transmission lines of the St. Louis Company will be extended, a distance of about thirty miles.

The contract is based upon a minimum annual demand of 7,500 kilowatts and the energy consumption will be in excess of 50,000,000 kilowatt hours a year.

BOND ISSUES FALL BELOW LAST WEEK

Absence of New Lots Ready for Public Is Given as the Cause.

$27,997,000 WEEK'S TOTAL

Market Showed Improvement During Last Days After Earlier Irregularity.

The total of bond issues offered during the week ended yesterday was the smallest for any week this year with the exception of the period ended Jan. 4, last, which contained the New Year's holidays. The total for the week just ended was $27,997,000, against $49,454,000 the previous week and $31,510,000 for the corresponding week of last year. By group the totals for this year and last week were:

	This Week.	Last Week.
Public utility	$12,500,000	$19,800,000
State and municipal	8,997,000	10,954,000
Industrial	6,500,000	6,200,000
Railroad	......	11,000,000
Land Bank	......	1,500,000

Reasons for the dullness were attributed to the absence of new issues ready for public offering. It was also pointed out that the market needed a rest following the heavy financing period extending through the first two months of the year. Railroad financing will occupy a relatively important place in the immediate future, according to the forecasts of underwriting houses, and an offering probably on Monday will be made of a new issue of $12,000,000 Norfolk & Western Railway Company 4½ per cent. equipment trust certificates maturing semi-annually to 1934. Bids on this issue were opened yesterday and an award was made to a syndicate group consisting of Kean, Taylor & Co., Roosevelt & Sons, the National Bank of Commerce in New York and the First National Corporation of Boston.

The open market for bonds showed toward the end of the week an improvement in tone. Some irregularity had been caused earlier in the week by the unloading of Argentine Government 6 per cent. bonds by members of the recent offering group and by the break in bonds affected by the failure of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company. St. Paul bonds were conspicuously strong on a report, which as yet has not been confirmed, that bankers and officials of the railroad company had definitely made terms covering refunding operations of that road's bond issue which matures next year.

UTILITIES REPORT GAINS.

Two Show Marked Increase in Reports for Year to Jan. 31.

The American Gas and Electric Company reported net earnings available for the dividends on the common stock of $4,346,823 for the year to Jan. 31, an increase of $1,159,306 over the preceding twelve months. Net earnings for January were $641,919, against $497,377 the previous January, or an increase of 29 per cent.

The Northern States Power system for the year to Jan. 31, shows net earnings of $8,378,443 after taxes, but before charges and depreciation, against $7,502,849 for the previous year.

Subsidiary companies of the Standard Gas and Electric Company reported aggregate net earnings for the year to Jan. 31, of $18,963,987, after taxes, but before charges and depreciation.

RECORD TOBACCO BOND.

Covers the Delivery of $4,259,000 Worth of Macedonian Leaf.

The National Surety Company issued yesterday the largest tobacco delivery bond ever written, according to a statement issued by the company. The bond was issued to the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company and covers the delivery by the Standard Commercial Tobacco Company of 4,481,000 pounds of Macedonian tobacco of the 1922 crop, delivery to be made over the next eleven months.

The value of the tobacco is $4,259,000 and the amount of the bond is $450,000.

C. & N. R. R. to Spend $8,000,000.

According to information received yesterday in the financial district, the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad will spend about $8,000,000 on improvements during 1924. This is about the same amount that was spent by the railroad last year. As result of heavy purchases of equipment last year the Chicago & Northwestern will not buy new equipment in 1924, it was stated.

Chain Stores Sales for February.

S. H. Kress & Co., for February, reports gross sales of $2,344,348, against $2,002,079 in the same month last year. The McCrory Stores Corporation reports gross sales of $1,612,113, against $1,256,205 in February, 1923, and the National Department Stores, Inc., reports gross of $4,816,632, against $4,267,812 in the same month last year.

ROAD EARNED $6.96 A SHARE

Income of Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Was $1,081,498.

Net income of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Railway for 1923 was $1,081,498, equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $6.96 a share earned on the common stock. This compares with a deficit of $1,191,165 in 1922.

The report contains the information that automatic train control has been installed on 15 miles of the road at a cost of $28,921. Attention is drawn to the fact that the company had completed a new trackage agreement with the Pennsylvania Railroad whereby the latter railroad obtains the use of 9.1 miles of line from Riverside Junction, N. Y. to Bradford, Pa., for a period of five years.

	1923.	1922.

TRADE CONDITIONS CONTINUE UNEVEN

Buying Is Only for Immediate Needs and Speculative Operations Are Absent.

MARKETS HOLD STEADY

Forward Purchasing Affected by the Mild Winter and Uncertainty as to Prices, Review Says.

The trade reviews at the end of this week emphasized the fact that conditions are spotty but that they lack the feverishness that prevailed at this time last year. Dun's Review says:

"With conservatism still the predominant sentiment, a rapid growth of business is not to be expected. March opened with a number of favorable indications, but conditions remain uneven and there has been no change from the policy of buying only as the need arises. The disinclination to extend commitments very far into the future is general, yet progress this year, if irregular, has ben on a solid basis.

"There is an absence of speculative operations even in lines where the largest gains are seen, as in the steel industry, and the stability of most commodity prices is an encouraging phase. Easing in some manufactured goods has come because of a lagging demand, or because of declines in raw materials, but that there has been less than the usual price unsettlement is shown by the slight variations in Dun's Index Number.

"With a close balance between production and consumption, most markets are holding steady, and buyers are not influenced now, as they were at this time last year, by fears of a shortage of supplies. That purchasing, though mainly in moderate-sized lots and for early requirements, has been very large in the aggregate is evidenced by the rcord freight car loadings, while bank clearings also show that there is a big turnover of merchandise."

Bradstreet's says:

"Trade and industry present a spotted appearance, and caution in buying for anything beyond immediate needs is still the central feature. Withal, the current measures of movement presnt a fairly satisfactory appearance, although there is presented the contradiction of a big business doing in some lines and of slackness and part time ruling in others. Nowhere, except possibly in the automobile trade, does there appear the great onward sweep visible at this time a year ago.

"Reasons for the lack of confident forward buying in ordinary distributive trade are found in the past rather mild Winter, the bad roads which have restricted country buying, the unsatisfactory returns to farmers in wheat territory, the uncertainty as to prices which holds forward purchasing closely in control, and the fact that the lateness of Easter makes for a certtain amount of indifference on the part of buyers. With the advance of Spring, some of the above restrictions are expected to lose force, but, pending the pressure of this seasonal urge, the slack-water appearance in many lines shows few signs of change."

SYRACUSE LIGHTING MERGER

New Company Will Issue $7,000,000 Bonds and $1,577,200 Stock.

As the result of the consolidation of the Syracuse Lighting Company and the Onondaga Utilities Corporation into a new company to be known as the Syracuse Lighting Company, there will be issued $7,000,000 of first mortgage 5½ per cent. bonds, $1,350,000 of 7 per cent. preferred and $227,200 of common stock. The Public Service Commission has approved the merger.

The proceeds of the new issues will be used to retire the outstanding bonds and notes of the old Syracuse Lighting Company and to provide funds for additions and betterments. The commission has also authorized the new company to issue $4,507,000 of common and $2,000,000 of 8 per cent. preferred shares, to be exchanged share for share for the outstanding common and preferred stocks of the consolidating companies.

COPPER UP TO 14 CENTS.

Heavy Demand Strengthens Prices Here and Abroad.

Copper metal prices recovered yesterday to 14 cents a pound delivered. This compares with 13¾ to 13⅞ cents a pound on Thursday. Demand, according to producers, continues on a large scale.

Export prices moved up in line with the gain in domestic quotations. The larger sellers yesterday were quoting 13.90 to 14 cents for export copper f. a. s. New York Harbor and 14.15 to 14.25 cents c. i. f. London or Hamburg. The upward movement in prices was helped by the strength in the London metal market.

BRITISH LIVING COST SHOWS SLIGHT RISE

Economist's February Index Number 6 Points Higher Than That of January.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 7.—The Economist's index number for wholesale prices at the end of February is practically unchanged from that of the previous month. It stands at 4,668, only six points higher than at the end of January.

There have been a fair number of changes in quotations in both directions, but it is not easy to trace any upward movement as directly due to the dock strike. The figures are:

Cereals and meats, 899.
Other food products (tea, sugar, &c.), 859.
Textiles, 1,308.
Minerals, 819.
Miscellaneous (rubber, timber, oils, &c.), 783.
Total, 4,668.
Percentage of change, 212.2.

Comparison of the average by separate groups of articles is as follows:

	Feb. 1, 1924.	Mar. 1, 1923.
Cereals and meats	909.5	847.5
Other food products	845.5	746
Textiles	1,349	1,201
Minerals	789	797

TO PREVENT CHECK RAISING

Coal and Iron National Bank Introduces New System.

A new system for preventing the raising of checks has been introduced by the Coal & Iron National Bank. According to the plan of the bank, no check can be raised more than a few cents at the most. On the face of the check there are figures which range from $1 to $50,000 and a metal cutter by which the check may be torn in such a way that the highest figure remaining will correspond to the amount of the check. Thus, it was explained, a $10 numeral on the left would apply to a check for $9.76, or any other amount above $9, and any effort to raise the amount of the check would automatically be stopped by the printed $10 sign on the left.

Reardon to Head Warehouses.

Daniel Reardon, Vice President of the United States Trucking Corporation, has been elected President of the Independent Warehouses, Inc., and William J. McCormack, another Vice President, will be Vice President of the Warehouse organization. The changes are in line with the consolidation of the companies.

Cylinder Oil Up 4 Cents a Gallon.

Pennsylvania refiners have advanced cylinder oil from 18 to 22 cents a gallon. The larger Eastern companies continue to purchase this product on a large scale, but, according to trade advices yesterday, the supply continues on only a moderate scale.

HOUSE VOTES FAVOR FORD'S SHOALS BID

Amendments Proposing More Stringent Terms in the McKenzie Bill Are Badly Beaten.

MAY MAKE MINOR CHANGES

Newton D. Baker Opposes Ford Plan and Hull of Iowa Charges Propaganda.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The House today voted down every effort to alter radically the McKenzie bill which would authorize acceptance of Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals.

Amendments were rejected by majorities so decisive that leaders generally predicted that advocates of the Ford proposal not only would have the votes to pass the bill, probably tomorrow, but to maintain their airtight defense against drastic changes in it.

There is a probability that several important amendments will be adopted, but only those believed not to be distasteful to Mr. Ford will be acceptable.

Among the amendments thrown into the discard today was one offered by Representative Burton, Republican, of Ohio, which proposed to limit Ford's lease to fifty instead of 100 years, as stipulated in the bill, and to place him under the jurisdiction of the Federal Water Power act. This amendment was rejected, 182 to 104. Democrats who lined up solidly against it had the support of about forty Republicans.

Another amendment thrown out, offered by Representative Williamson, Republican, of South Dakota, would have materially increased the amount of money Ford would be required to pay for the Government properties at Muscle Shoals.

While there are indications that a number of amendments will be offered tomorrow, those in charge of the McKenzie measure are determined to put it to a vote before the House adjourns for the week-end.

On the first amendment of importance to be put to a vote Representative Blanton, Democrat, of Texas, lost in an effort to limit future appropriations for completion of dam No. 2 at Muscle Shoals to $28,000,000, the House rejecting it, 60 to 34.

The House also rejected an amendment by Representative Hill, Republican, of Maryland, to broaden the provision requiring construction of dam No. 2 and adjacent locks to be done at actual cost without profit to the company organized by Ford.

Burton Objects to Bill's Terms.

Representative Burton, Republican, of Ohio, in urging his amendment to place the Ford bid under the Federal Water Power act and limit the lease to fifty instead of 100 years, recalled "the universal condemnation of the naval oil leases," adding that while he would not say "whether those leases were unusual, they certainly were unusually favorable to the contracting parties." He continued:

"As those leases should have been amended to protect the Government, so must this proposed lease.

"A few days ago a responsible Secretary of the Treasury sent the House a bill which it changed, but to today we are told we must swallow this contract."

Representative Oliver, Democrat, of Alabama, declared Mr. Ford was taking a "comprehensive" view of the possibilities of Muscle Shoals, and that his proposal would carry out the purpose of the Shoals development in a broad way.

Another appeal for it was made by Representative Huddleston, Democrat of Alabama. He asked if members had considered the good Mr. Ford could do the laboring people in Alabama.

N. D. Baker Opposes Ford.

Representative Hull, Republican, of Iowa, leading the fight against the Ford offer, made public today a letter received by him from Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, which declared that "it would be a public calamity to have this great national asset come into private hands upon any terms now possible to be secured.

"Impatience to recover a few million dollars in money and modest prospects of immediate benefits to farmers are blinding us," said Mr. Baker.

"The Water Power act," he added, "is framed to produce the development of doubtful products by unusual rewards. So far from abating its provisions in any way at Muscle Shoals, they should be strengthened. This is not a doubtful project, but a palpable gold mine."

"Muscle Shoals," Mr. Baker said, "is an inexhaustible national asset. It is too large and too vital an element in national economy, whether in peace or war, to be privately owned, either by an individual or a corporation."

Representative Hull, Republican, Iowa, a leader of the group opposed to the Ford offer, after reading the letter from Mr. Baker, described him as having "more to do with Muscle Shoals than any one else."

"I have received from him some of the inspiration that we should develop Muscle Shoals," said Mr. Hull. "I want to keep Muscle Shoals for the people of this country and not for the private interests of anybody.

"I have been unable to find out what Henry Ford proposes to do with Muscle Shoals. I met Henry Ford and he told me, 'I have important business, I want you to see somebody else.'

"That's all I have been able to find out, except propaganda. I have been trying to have Ford brought before the committee. Somebody has purposely kept Henry Ford away.

"It's idle to say that the House, representing the American people, cannot change this contract."

Discounts, Deposits, Borrowings Drop, Reserve Gains, in Member Bank Reports

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Aggregate reductions of $70,000,000 in net demand deposits and of $52,000,000 in loans and discounts together with an increase of $27,000,000 in accommodation at the Federal Reserve banks are shown in the Federal Reserve Board's weekly consolidated statement of condition on Feb. 27 of 759 member banks in leading cities.

Loans on United States securities declined by $2,000,000, loans on other stocks and bonds by $44,000,000, and all other, largely commercial, loans by $6,000,000. Holdings of United States securities decreased by $12,000,000, while holdings of other bonds and stocks increased by $13,000,000.

Member banks in New York City report an increase of $3,000,000 in loans on United States obligations, and reductions of $48,000,000 in loans on corporate securities and of $1,000,000 in all other loans. A decrease of $3,000,000 in holdings of United States securities is partly offset by an increase of $2,000,000 in holdings of other securities.

Of the total decrease of $70,000,000 in net demand deposits, $30,000,000 is shown for the New York district, $14,000,000 for the San Francisco district and $13,000,000 for the Chicago district. Time deposits of all reporting banks increased by $6,000,000, while Government deposits show practically no change.

Reserve balances of all reporting institutions maintained at the Federal Reserve banks increased by $21,000,000, the increase of $35,000,000 in New York City being offset in part by small decreases elsewhere.

Member bank borrowings from the Federal Reserve banks increased from $270,000,000 to $297,000,000. The New York City banks report an increase of $6,000,000 in accommodation from the local Reserve Bank.

RENEWED PRESSURE EXERTED ON COTTON

Thursday's Gains Lost, With the Market Off 64 to 89 Points at the Close.

TECHNICAL REASONS SEEN

Accumulations on Last Monday's Break Covered in Forepart of Week —Prices Off at Liverpool.

Thursday's advances were more than lost during yesterday's trading in the cotton market. May contracts which had sold up to 29.23 on the buying of the previous day broke to 28.14 under the liquidation of recent purchases and a renewal of more or less aggressive pressure. The lowest prices of the day were reached in the late trading, and the close was within a point or two of the lowest, with the market easy at net declines of 64 to 89 points.

The action of the market suggested a feeling that the advances from the low levels of the earlier part of the week had represented nothing more than a technical readjustment. The short interest accmulated on last Monday's break to 27.55 for May deliveries seemed to have covered on the recovery of about 168 points during the middle of the week. With the demand from that quarter falling off, recent buyers for a rally tried to liquidate their commitments, and there may have been some fresh selling on the continued weakness of French exchanges, the continuedu ncertainty of labor conditions in Lancashire and the failure of reports from the domestic goods market to show any substantial improvement.

There were some overnight buying orders in the market at the start, but they were supplied on an opening advance of 2 to 21 points. Early cables from Liverpool suggested no fear of serious labor troubles in Lancashire, and private cable advices said there was a good undertone. The English market sold off right after the local opening, however, and the tone here became more nervous and unsettled as prices worked lower. There was covering and possibly some trade buying on a scale down, but it was not in sufficient volume to hold the market, and numerous stop orders were uncovered as prices broke below the 28½-cent level for May deliveries. Active positions showed net losses of 68 to 89 points in the late trading, with May contracts showing a decline of 109 points from the high level of Thursday afternoon.

There was some comment early on reports that two or three of the Fall River mills which had been closed would resume operation on Monday. Private advices, however, stated that one of these mills would open for only three days and another for only a week, and that their action was with a view to holding their operatives together rather than the result of any improvement in the demand for their goods. Fall River sales of print cloths for the week were estimated at 30,000 pieces. Business there was said to have been checked by higher asking prices, as buyers have found it possible to secure goods in other markets at relatively lower quotations. It is estimated that Fall River mills are still running only 75 to 89 per cent. of capacity, and that the output of goods in that section is being held down to about the average of current sales.

The selling late in the afternoon was accompanied by bearish comment on the week-end figures, which showed world's takings of only 163,682 bales for the week, compared with 17,198 for the same week last year. The "into sight" figures showed a falling off also and, while the spinners' takings were somewhat disappointing, there was a decrease of 95,744 in the world's visible supply of American cotton, compared with a loss of 88,789 last year.

Southern spot markets were generally 50 to 85 points lower, with quotations for middling ranging from 27.55 at Dallas up to 29.00 at Memphis. Sales of 3,525 bales were reported in the Galveston market and of 1,200 bales at Memphis but elsewhere only a very small business was indicated.

Address on Federal Reserve System.

Frederick H. Curtis, Chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, addressed the Federal Reserve Bank Class of the New York University at the New York Stock Exchange yesterday afternoon. He said that the best evidence of the successful functioning of the Federal Reserve System was to be found in the manner in which the crisis of 1920, following the war, was met and handled.

T., P. & W. Railroad Reports Deficit

Report of the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroad for 1923 shows a deficit of $466,431, after payment of taxes and charges, compared with a deficit of $389,152 in 1922.

LACKAWANNA RAISES WAGES

Five Per Cent. Increase for Engineers and Firemen Granted.

Officials of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad yesterday reached a wage agreement with representatives of the engineers and firemen unions of the Big Four Brotherhood, whereby the terms of the New York Central settlement are to be applied to the Lackawanna. This is practically an increase of 5 per cent. in the wages of all the firemen and engineers employed on the Lackawanna, and it was indicated that the agreement would probably be followed by a similar arrangement with the conductors and trainmen.

Along with the settlement of the employes of the Lackawanna came information of the wage negotiations proceeding on other lines throughout the country. A direct refusal of the demands of the Big Four Brotherhood has been made by the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potmac, and the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. LoLuis, although the later road has agreed to meet the employed in another conference on March 10. Demands for an increase of 12 per cent. has been made on the Atlantic Coast Line, while a substantially higher rate than the New York Central plan has been asked of the Louisville & Nashville.

THE WEEK IN DRY GOODS.

Current Sales Equal Those of Last Year Week; Road Sales Lower.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the wholesale dry goods trade, say:

"Current wholesale distribution of dry goods exceeded that of last week, reaching approximately the figure recorded for the same week a year ago.

"Road sales were about equal to the total of a week ago, but did not reach that of the same period last year.

"There were fewer customers in market than in 1923 during the corresponding week.

"Collections showed a slight improvement over the corresponding period a year ago."

Erie Breaks Record in Revenue.

Net revenue of the Erie Railroad for February exceeded that of any other corresponding month in the history of the road, according to estimates yesterday.

QUIET WOOL MARKET.

Prices Steady, but Demand for Goods Not Large.

BOSTON, March 7.—The Commercial Bulletin will say tomorrow:

"The Eastern wool markets have passed through the quietest period which has been experienced for some time, but prices keep steady, as a result of the strong statistical position of the market for raw materials and the keen demand for wool still existing in Europe. All of the foreign markets are, in fact, strong.

"The goods market, so far as surface conditions indicate, does not warrant any undue optimism about the future, but it appears that the demand for dress goods is developing more rapidly than has the call for men's wear lines.

"In the West, contracting has spread out and dealers are taking wool wherever a price is possible that is reasonably close to a parity with the Eastern seaboard markets.

Hancock, President. After transfer of a reserve no longer required, a reduction of the deficit by $833,120 is reported. The statement says that sales were 22.6 per cent. more than in 1922.

RECEIVERS NAMED FOR MORSE GROUP

Request of Stockholders in U. S. Steamship and Subsidiaries Is Granted.

STEP IN REORGANIZATION

Committee Hopes to Salvage Much of the Funds—Millions in Claims Against Government.

Initial steps toward the reorganization of the numerous properties once controlled by C. W. Morse were taken yesterday in the United States District Court for Connecticut when, on petition of the stockholders' committee, Federal Judge Martin appointed Burleigh Martin and William Tudor Gardiner of Augusta, Me., and Oscar B. Coblentz of Baltimore, Md., receivers for the United States Steamship Company. The petition was presented by Thomas F. Barrett of Washington, D. C., an attorney, representing the committee.

Through the appointment of receivers the stockholders's committee hope to conserve and salvage enough funds to reorganize the company and its subsidiaries. The United States Steamship Company, it was pointed out in a letter to the stockholders, owns outright or has the controlling interest in the Virginia Shipbuilding Corporation of Alexandria, Va.; the Minneapolis Steamship Company, the Binghamton Steamship Company, the Huron Steamship Company, the Owego Steamship Company, the Groton Iron Works, the Hudson Navigation Company, the St. Paul Steamship Company, the Bedford Steamship Company and the Newport Steamship Co., Ltd.

Most of these companies were organized through the efforts of C. W. Morse during the war, and some of them suffered reverses after the war that placed them in receivership. Included in these latter are the Virginia Shipbuilding Corporation, the Groton Iron Works and the Hudson Navigation Company.

Among the hopes for funds for the reorganization are claims held against the Emergency Fleet Corporation. In the case of the Groton Iron Works these claims aggregate $10,000,000; while those of the Virginia Shipbuilding Corporation total $8,000,000. A recent report of the Stockholders' Committee also cites the fact that the assets of the Hudson Navigation Company are between $6,000,000 and $8,000,000, exclusive of the claims against the United States amounting to several hundred thousand dollars. This subsidiary, which operates a steamship line between Albany and New York, owns five steamers as well as Pier 32, North River, and leases on piers at Troy and Albany. There is outstanding against this company $1,400,000 in first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, $2,000,000 in 6 per cent. second mortgage bonds and approximately $203,000 in collateral bonds, the report says.

Besides these assets, it is pointed out, the subsidiary companies have claims against the United States, foreign shippers, and foreign governments aggregating $6,000,000.

Members of the Stockholders' Committee are: George F. Macombe, President of the Augusta Trust Company, Augusta, Me.; Wilton J. Lambert, Vice President of the Munsey Trust Company, Washington, D. C.; Robert R. Moore, former President of the Commercial Trust Company, New York; A. C. Hindman, National Surety Company, New York; H. S. Harding, Citizens' National Bank, Tunkhannock, Pa., and B. W. Burdick, Albany, N. Y.

The Central Union Trust Company of New York is depository for the Stockholders' Committee.

HALTS SALE OF STOCK.

Lithuanian Development Corporation Is Restrained From Selling.

The Lithuanian Development Corporation, which was incorporated in Delaware several years ago with a capitalization of $1,000,000, was restrained from selling any more of its capital stock by a permanent injunction issued by Supreme Court Justice Mullan yesterday. Deputy Attorney General John J. Dwyer said that the Attorney General's office proceeded against the corporation under the Martin law, after learning that it was insolvent.

A. B. Strimaitis, secretary of the corporation, admitted in testimony before Deputy Attorney General Abraham Rosenthal that $423,000 worth of stock in the corporation had been sold, and that it had assets of only $120,000. He said 6,300 stockholders had bought small blocks of stock at $10 a share, and had received no dividends since 1919. Strimaitis said that the purpose of the corporation was to reconstruct Lithuania. He explained that money invested in four companies in Lithuania had been lost through the drop in foreign exchange.

According to Strimaitis, the assets of the corporation consisted of $40,000 worth of property in its European investments, a $30,000 equity in a building at 294 Eighth Avenue, New York City, and $50,000 on deposit in the Baltic States Bank, at the same address. He said the present income of the corporation from rents and investments was $8,000 a year, while the expenses were $7,000.

Supreme Court Justice Mullan also granted the Attorney General a permanent injunction restraining the Brooklyn Unity Building Associates, Inc., of 762 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, from selling any more of its stock. The organization was incorporated in New York with a capitalization of $25,000 for the purpose of building a dance hall and lodge rooms for negroes. About $5,000 was received from the sale of stock and otherwise.

PALESTINE PLANS LOAN.

Needs $12,500,000 for Public Works and Agricultural Bank.

JERUSALEM, March 7 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—The Palestine Government has completed preparations for the issuance of a loan of $12,500,000 for the purpose of continuing the development of various public works and the establishment of an agricultural bank, according to an official statement.

The country, continues the statement, is in urgent need of further development. Funds are particularly necessary for the benefit of agriculture, and the capital for the establishment of an agricultural credit bank must be provided by the Government, as private enterprise is not willing to undertake that task.

The total debts of the Palestine Government, apart from future liabilities under the peace treaty because of the Turkish pre-war debt, are $22,500,000. Part of this is due for the public works constructed by the British Government in Palestine during the war.

The British Government, realizing the embarrassing financial position of Palestine, and also the fact that these works were constructed at an excessive cost because of abnormal war conditions, is expected to assess these works only with regard to their present value to the people of Palestine, and at moderate standards.

Japan Moves to Keep Up Silk Prices.

TOKIO, March 7.—A resolution was adopted today by the Silk Dealers' Association to keep up prices by curtailing production of raw silk, all production to stop ten days from March 25 to April 3. The minimum price of 2,020 yen per hundred kin (a fraction more than 132 pounds avoirdupois) was fixed for the standard grade, a measure considered necessary owing to an adverse trend in American buying.

Copper Company Shows Gain.

The Shattuck and Arizona Copper Company in 1923 had gross income of $885,242 against $37,993 in 1922. After all expenses and deductions for depreciation, depletion and other charges there was a deficit of $2,264 against a deficit of $28,924 reported in 1922.

COMMITTEE ADOPTS INSURANCE BONUS

Rejects Vocational Education and Home-Building Plans Which Were in First Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—By a virtually unanimous vote the Committee on Ways and Means today decided to incorporate in the Soldiers' Bonus bill soon to be reported to the House a provision authorizing the issuance of endowment insurance to veterans of the World War.

The committee rejected the proposal for vocational education and aid in home building as alternative options. An agreement was reached to vote tomorrow on a motion made by Representative Oldfield, Democrat, of Arkansas, providing that cash should be paid to soldiers who prefer it.

It was the motion of Representative Bacharach, Republican, of New Jersey, that the committee accepted. The vote on the recommendation of Mr. Oldfield for the payment of cash to a maximum of $500 for home service and $625 for foreign service will be close. Advocates of the cash bonus assert that if it fails in committee it will be adopted in the House.

At tomorrow's meeting a sub-committee will be named to draft a bill to include such options as may be agreed upon in addition to the insurance feature adopted today.

The exact form of the insurance plan to be reported was not determined at today's session. Consideration was given Representative Bacharach's amendment providing for the issuance of thirty-year endowment policies, the face value to be based upon both home and foreign service. Veterans who served in the United States would be paid $2.65 in insurance for each day of their service.

Twenty-five per cent. additional would be added for those who went overseas. The maximum value of a policy to a soldier who served in this country would approximate $1,325, and for an overseas veteran would be about $1,656. It has been estimated by actuaries, Mr. Bacharach repeated, that this plan would ultimately cost $2,000,000,000.

Representative Bacharach will urge the committee to authorize the placing of this insurance with old-line insurance corporations. He believes this would be better than to leave the work of administration to a specially organized Government insurance bureau.

A majority of the Democratic members of the committee favor a cash as well as an insurance option. It is the understanding that most of the Republicans are now disposed to limit the bonus bill to an insurance feature, the leaders having convinced them that such a measure would meet with the approval of the men. However, they admit that whatever action is taken in committee the House is very likely to adopt a cash bonus if a measure should be reported without such a provision.

It is the expectation of Chairman Green that the sub-committee which will draft a bill will complete it early next week. There is an insistent demand among members that the bonus be started on its way toward the White House, and the indications are that the House will take up bonus legislation in the very near future.

SALE OF CABLE IS BLOCKED.

Decision on Antilles Line Now Goes to French Parliament.

Copyright, 1924, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

PARIS, March 7.—The Executive Committee of the Ministry of Posts, Telegraphs and Telephones refused today to endorse Minister Laffont's project to sell the French Government's Antilles cables to an American company for 52,000,000 francs ($2,600,000). The matter will be referred to Parliament for a final decision.

The French permission to land stations at Haiti and Para expires soon and the Government believes the privilege will not be renewed, but will be granted instead to an American cable company, which will proceed to extend the system by a loop from Para to Pernambuco, there connecting the French cable to Dakar and Brest, making a complete circuit.

Opponents of the proposed measure point out that the other great powers are striving to increase the mileage of cables owned.

The supporters of the measure contend that the French are constructing a powerful wireless at Martinique capable of replacing cables.

SEEKS END OF DOUBLE TAX.

World Commerce Chamber Wants the League to Act.

PARIS, March 7.—Relief of persons abroad from double taxation for the same income is to be urged before the League of Nations special committee of experts by delegates named today at a meeting of the Council of the International Chamber of Commerce.

The council also considered simplification of customs formalities, transportation problems and the progress of the plan for commercial arbitration fostered by the Chamber. The aid of the Government in the development of a commercial airplane service was advocataed at the session.

CURB PRESIDENT QUIZZED.

Is Asked Why Whitaker Was Not Barred From Trading.

The question of why the New York Curb Market Association had taken no steps to investigate the activities of C. B. Whitaker, a broker, in view of his testimony regarding his relations with the bankrupt brokerage firm of Raynor, Nicholas & Truesdale was the centre of interest at the hearing yesterday into the affairs of the firm by Referee Harold P. Coffin.

President John W. Curtis of the Curb Market said no action had been taken because Whitaker had told him that a "clean bill of health' 'had been given him when he was examined before the referee. Mr. Coffin said that no "clean bill of health" had been given, but that he had felt at the time that Whitaker had made an upright admission of the facts. Whitaker, he said, was used wittingly or unwittingly as a name for the confirmation of nullified sales by Raynor, Nicholas & Truesdale.

President Curtis was accompanied by his counsel, William A. Lockwood. He was examined by William Abramson, attorney for the trustee, who wanted to know all about the practices of the Curb Market.

Replying to a statement by the witness that carrying trading accounts without reporting the transactions on the floor was a violation of the constitution, Mr. Abramson said that he intended to start a civil action against Whitaker in the effort to make him restore to the estate $3,000 commissions which, he testified, six months ago he received from the bankrupt firm.

The lawyer asked how it was that Whitaker had been allowed to continue as a member of the curb without any investigation of his actions. Mr. Curtis replied that he was not aware of the facts.

"They were accurately reported in the newspapers," commented Mr. Abramson.

Mr. Whitaker testified several months ago that he stopped clearing for Raynor, Nicholas and Truesdale when the volume of the "buy and sell" orders made him suspicious. Both Mr. Curtis and his counsel explained that the Curb Market was doing everything possible to insure legitimate trading.

C. B. Whitaker of the firm of C. B. Whitaker & Co., 44 Broad Street, was until his resignation in June a member of the Board of Governors of the Curb Market. It was said yesterday that Mr. Whitaker would appear at his own request before the Law Committee of the Curb Association on Monday.

COST OF UTILITIES PUT AT 15 BILLIONS

Represent an Investment of $136 for Each Person n the Nation, Expert Figures.

PUBLIC THE REAL OWNERS

Business Has Grown So Rapidly That Many Problems Are Still to Be Settled.

E. E. Armstrong, general manager of the Hattiesburg, Miss., Traction Company has figured that to put the utilities of the country in their present state of efficiency has required an investment of $15,000,000,000 or, roughly speaking, an investment of $136 for each man, woman and child in the nation. This is four times the amount invested in the steel industry, eight times the sum invested in the automobile industry, and more than ten times as much as has been put into the packing business, according to Mr. Armstrong, who has divided the total investment of the utilities as follows:

Electrical, $4,800,000,000; electric railways, $4,500,000,000; gas companies, $3,700,000,000, and the telephone business, $2,000,000,000.

In other words, it requires an average of $5 of investment in plant equipment and lines to produce $1 worth of gross revenue derived from the sale of the public utility's services, the analysis by Mr. Armstrong, published in the Doherty News, shows.

"Very few businesses are conducted on such a slow turnover," he said. "In other words, an individual can engage in almost any other business on much less capital than he can in the utility business.

The question naturally arises as to who has furnished this vast amount of money used in the development of the nation's utilities; who are the real owners of the public utilities. The management or the operators are not the owners; they are simply the men who have been picked by the owners, the great body of stock olders, to run the businesses. They have been selected for their knowledge and expertness in dealing with the problems having to do with rendering the various kinds of services.

"They are responsible not only to the patrons of these businesses, but also to their employers, the stockholders, for the efficient, safe and prosperous conduct of these companies. In explaining the ownership of the public utilities the name itself again strikes true. The public are the real owners of the public utilities and their number is millions. The stockholders of the Cities Service Compan yalone, which is only one of the many public utility operating companies, number 100,000. They are found among widows and orphans as well as among people of means.

"Public utility securities have proved especially attractive to thrifty people of limited means who want a reasonable but certain return on the small amounts which they are able to invest. In addition to the direct owners of these securities practically every holder of an insurance policy is, through the ownership of public utility securities by insurance companies, an indirect owner of the public utilities of the country."

If a utility company fails to earn a return o ninvested money in line with the return offered by other businesses additional funds can be procured only at a rate commensurate with the increased risk, the result being, according to Mr. Armstrong, that the utility service "goes from bad to worse, and the community as well as the utility suffers." He goes on to say:

"An industry which has brown as rapidly as the public utility business naturally has some problems which will take time to straighten out. One of the biggest problems at present, and one which is on its way toward being solved, is the obsolete method of figuring rates. The prevailing method of charging so much per cubic foot of gas or kilowatt hour of electricity is unfair both to the customer and to the utility company. It is unfair to the customer because the cost of serving each customer with a unit of product is really not the same, and some customers must bear part of the expense of serving certain other customers.

"Certain customers are actually furnished service at a loss while other customers must necessarily help bear the expense of serving them. It is unfair to the company because by unfairly distributing the cost of service it prevents the company from serving some prospective customers and from serving others to the extent most beneficial to either the company or the customer. A different method of calculating rates has been devised, and has already been installed in a large number of cities, whereby the rate for service to each class of customers is more nearly proportional to the cost of serving that class."

MRS. WEBB'S WILL UPHELD.

Appellate Court Sustains Probate of Document Leaving Estate to Husband.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court affirmed yesterday without an opinion, the decision of Surrogate Foley admitting to probate the will of Mrs. Gertie Emily Gorman Webb. Mrs. Webb, whose death last Fall at the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club, was the subject of an investigation, made a will leaving her "property and estate" to her husband, Charles Webb.

When the will was contested by her relatives evidence was offered that Mrs. Webb regarded the will as only a document to serve until she had time to make another will distributing her estate according to her desires. She explained that her husband knew her wishes and would carry them out if the estate went to him before the new will was executed. The heirs contended that because of the testimony offered the will was not a proper testamentary document.

Italy Starts Ship Line to Canada.

GENOA, Italy, March 7.—The Navigazione Generale today inaugurated a new steamship service between Italy and Canada with the departure of the steamer America. Other ships are to be diverted to the new line from the New York service. The first of these will be the Dante Alighieri, leaving here March 29. The diversion of the ships is said to be due to restrictions of the American Government on immigration.

Representatives of the firm will attend the postponed meeting of stockholders to be held here Wednesday.

NEW MEXICO CITED IN SAFETY DRIVE

Railroad Managers' Attention Called to Plan to Eliminate Grade Crossing Accidents.

AID GIVEN BY AUTO DRIVERS

Called On by State Commissioner to Pledge Themselves to Keep Machines Under Control.

Attention of railroad managers in all parts of the country have been called to the decisive efforts being made by the State of New Mexico to eliminate grade crossing accidents. This campaign to reduce the "loss of life and limb" has been inaugurated by the State Corporation Commission of New Mexico. In a bulletin addressed "To All Automobile Drivers" the Commission refers to the card that every driver of automobiles for the Standard Oil Company has signed. In this card he pledges himself to have his machine under complete control and to bring it to a full stop before attempting to cross railroad tracks. The Commission calls upon every driver of cars in the State to follow the lead made by these drivers.

The Chairman of the Commission, Hugh H. Williams, has gone a step farther. He has arranged with the State Controller to enclose a copy of the bulletin with every automobile license. He further arranged to have the State Superintendent of Public Instruction distribute the bulletins to public schools and other educational institutions with a view to giving the campeign the widest publicity, and has called upon the newspapers in the State for their wholehearted co-operation.

Commenting on the campaign a recent issue of the Santa Fe Magazine said: "Earnest support of this kind will do more towards the success of the nationwide campaign for the prevention of highway crossing accidents, which the railroads have announced through the American Railway Association, than possibly anything else, and their efforts should be appreciated by every citizen and especially by the careless automobile drivers."

Cattle Prices at Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Hogs have advanced 40 cents in the past week and sold up to $7.65 today, setting a new high for the year. Shippers took about one-third of the receipts of 37,000. Common and medium grades of dressed beef were quoted 50 cents to $1 lower locally, which had some effect on the demand for cattle, and prices were off 15 to 25 cents as compared with early yesterday. Lambs advanced 25 to 35 cents, with a top of $16.50, the highest since last May, when $17 was the top and the highest since June, 1920. Top for aged ewes was $10.25, equaling the best figure of the year.

Swedish Loan Report Doubted.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Officials of the Swedish Legation said today they had no official notification that the Government of Sweden was attempting to negotiate a $20,000,000 loan through New York bankers. The report that the loan was to stabilize Swedish currency was discredited by legation officials.

WHEAT MAKES GAIN ON BIG FOREIGN SALE

Market Closes High on News of a 2,000,000-Bushel Transaction.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Announcement of the purchase of 2,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat for May-July shipment to Europe led to a brisk rally in wheat prices today, and the market closed firm. It was only near the end of the day that news got out about European buying of wheat. The sale included 500,000 bushels taken today, and the remainder covered amounts bought within the last few days.

Great Britain and Italy were said to have been the principal buyers. In view of depression of foreign exchange, the buying for Europe was looked upon as of surprising extent. Earlier the market was in weak sympathy with corn.

Closing trades were ¼ cent higher to ¼ cent lower on wheat, ⅛ cent lower on corn, ⅛ cent lower to ⅛ cent higher on oats, and unchanged to ⅛ cent lower on rye.

Minneapolis has been showing more strength than Chicago during the past few days and premiums on cash wheat in the Northwest have gained on the May. A Chicago mill has been buying low-grade Springs there for several days.

Liverpool closed ¼@½d higher in the face of Argentine exports of 5,921,000 bushels and indicated world's exports of over 15,000,000 bushels for the week.

So far this season, the world's exports since July 1, including this week's clearances, aggregate 495,000,000 bushels, or 37,000,000 bushels in excess of the record total of last season.

Consignment notices of cash corn are the lightest now in over thirty days, and the basis in the sample market was ¼@½ cent better as compared with May.

Primary arrivals of wheat today were 775,000 bushels; last week, 675,000; last year, 927,000. Shipments were 525,000 bushels; week ago, 401,000; last year, 500,000.

GEO. H. SOUTHER JR. WINS IN LOVE SUIT

Damage Action by Woman Who Says She Left Husband to Marry Him Dismissed.

SHE SOUGHT RENO DIVORCE

Then He Was Freed by His Wife and Wed Another, the Plaintiff Alleged.

A $150,000 damage suit against George H. Souther Jr., whose brother, J. William Souther, married George M. Cohan's daughter, Georgette, was disclosed in the Supreme Court yesterday when Justice Davis signed an order dismissing the action. Souther, who conducts Souther & Souther, manufacturers' agents, was sued by Mrs. Helen McKinstry, wife of A. Tremaine McKinstry of Hudson, N. Y., with whom she lived prior to Jan. 25, 1923. She also named Souther's father, George H. Souther, and his attorney, Leo R. Brilles, who died July 15 last.

The complaint alleged that Mrs. McKinstry lived happily with her husband and had an infant daughter 6 months old. She said that she met the younger Souther in July, 1922, and at that time he tried to induce her to leave her husband and go to Reno for a divorce in order that he might marry her as soon as the divorce suit he had brought against his wife in New York was decided.

Mrs. McKinstry said that she was unwilling to accede to Souther's wishes, but he continued to plead with her, and in December, 1922, introduced her to his attorney, Mr. Brilles. She was induced finally to abandon her husband, she said, as a result of a conspiracy to destroy her affection for her husband and her husband's love for her and to deprive her of his support and companionship. She asserted that her mind was so poisoned against her husband that she deserted him on Jan. 25, 1923, and she has remained away from him ever since.

The complaint alleged further that Attorney Brilles assured Mrs. McKinstry several times that Souther's divorce case had reached the point where he would soon get a decree. He engaged an attorney for her in Reno, she said, and Souther told her he had obtained his father's consent to their marriage. She alleged that she had almost established the six months' residence in Reno necessary to get a decree from her husband when Souther notified her in May last that his father had refused his consent and had threatened to disinherit him if he wedded the plaintiff. She alleged that Souther also notified her that he had dropped his suit against his wife and permitted her to sue him for a divorce in Rockland County. She was also told that if Souther married her it would cause the death of his mother.

Counsel for the defendants asked Justice Davis to dismiss the complaint on the ground that it was based on an illegal contract, since neither was free to marry the other at the time. The attorneys said:

"No state of facts can be conceived of pertaining to a marital status which could be more contrary to public morals and the welfare of society at large."

George H. Souther Jr. was married at Greenwich, Conn., on Oct. 29 last to Miss Alice Harrington of New York.

VANDERLIP BUYS A TRACT.

Invests in More Westchester Land for Home Sites.

Frank A. Vanderlip has added to his extensive real estate holdings in Westchester County by purchasing a tract of about 220 acres at Scarborough from E. S. Ullman of Manhattan.

The property, which is known as the "Wilderness," consists of a high ridge adjoining the Sleepy Hollow Country Club. Scattered about the property are several large rustic buildings.

According to H. E. Benedict, who negotiated the purchase, Mr. Vanderlip intends to develop the entire tract as a high-class residential section by cutting it up into plots of an acre or more. Dwellings probably will be restricted to a cost of not less than $50,000.

Earlier this Winter Mr. Vanderlip purchased about fifty-seven acres from the Rockefeller estate, west of the Sleepy Hollow Club. This is now being developed for homesites by Olmsted Brothers, landscape architects.

Mr. Benedict said that Mr. Vanderlip was greatly interested in Westchester County property, and believed it had a wonderful future. Mr. Vanderlip's home, "Beechwood," is at Scarborough.

SCHOELLKOPFS LIVE APART.

Couple Separate a Week After Wife Is Robbed of $300,000 in Gems.

Mrs. Irene Schoellkopf, wife of C. P. Hugo Schoellkopf, Buffalo manufacturing chemist, who returned to this country on the Berengaria on Thursday after a trip to Europe, accompanied by Frank Barret Carman, her dancing instructor, did not appear in District Attorney Banton's office yesterday to view gems valued at $205,000, part of those taken from her by three robbers on New Year's Eve, 1923, following a card party in Carman's apartment at 64 West Fifty-second Street. Chief Assistant District Attorney Pecora said, however, that she was expected to appear on Monday.

Coincident with the announcement it was learned that Mrs. Schoellkopf and her husband had been separated since a week following the robbery in which Mrs. Schoellkopf, while leaving the West Fifty-second Street house, was dragged into an apartment under that occupied by Carman, bound, gagged and stripped of her gems. Her husband was reported to have made an allowance of $3,000 a month to her. It was denied yesterday that divorce proceedings were contemplated.

It was said that Schoellkopf had consented not to interfere with the delivery of the gems to his wife by District Attorney Banton. They were retrieved by John W. Mahan, "fence" for the three robbers, all of whom pleaded guilty. Mahan, who is suffering from heart disease, is under indictment for criminally receiving stolen goods, which Eugene Moran, one of the robbers, told the police were sold to Mahan for $35,000.

Mahan, who was released on $5,000 bail, has promised to recover the remainder of the gems taken from Mrs. Schoellkopf, which included a diamond ring worth $25,000, given to her by her husband on their first wedding anniversary; five diamond, ruby and emerald studded bracelets, and eighty diamonds of varying weight. Mahan, however, has steadfastly refused to reveal the sources from which he recovered the gems. He was reported recently to be a patient in a sanitarium.

Education and Agriculture.

The Georgia Agricultural College collected facts from 1,271 farmers of that State and found that those who had no schooling earned on an average of only $240 a year; those with a good common school education earned $565 a year, and those who had completed a high school course earned an average of $664. The men who had completed an agricultural short course, and those who had been graduated from the agricultural college were earning an average of $1,254 a year, according to the Department of the Interior. The Kansas Agricultural College had 1,237 reports. The average young farmer with a common school education earned $422 a year, the high school graduate $554. The men who had taken a short course in agriculture earned an average of $859 a year, and the college graduate $1,452.

ART UNTRAMMELED ON WALDORF ROOF

Independents' Exposition There, Open to Public Today, Is Free but Tame.

5,000 AT PRIVATE VIEWING

The "Eccentrists" Are Well Represented in the Canvases, but the Conservatives Rule.

Life is short and art is long, and the visitor will have occasion to remember the aphorism many times as he tramps through the galleries on the roof garden of the Waldorf-Astoria seeing the eighth annual exhibition of the Society of Independent Artists, which will be opened to the public today after a private reception and view last night. The gallery was crowded last night by 5,000 visitors.

There are about 1,500 exhibits from more than 700 artists in this year's show, the largest the society has had since its first event, in 1917, when the larger spaces of Grand Central Palace were available.

It is always said of the Society of Independent Artists that its exhibitions embrace "all schools and all styles." That will have to be said again this year—only more so. And it is said even at the risk of being prosaic, because there is nothing more important to be said.

For the relation of this exhibit to the scheme of things is that it was invented for the express purpose of giving free expression to the artist who knits his brows whenever the word academician is mentioned. These artists will have none of your schools of painting, or your rules, or juries, or prizes, or anything. They want to paint what they want when they want it and hang it up somewhere for all who run to see. And this exhibition is the way they get their wish.

Here is strict democracy. All you have to do to get a canvas on the walls is to send in $5, followed in due season by your opus. There is no jury to say: "This shall not be hung." The artist himself is the sole judge of what shall be hung.

Alphabetical Impartiality.

And to secure absolute impartiality they arrange the exhibits in alphabetical order, beginning at the door with a letter which is chosen by lot and which this year happened to be "X." As there are no Xs and only a few Ys and Zs the whole thing begins decently and in order, to all practical intents and purposes, with the As around the entrance, and there is nothing to do but follow your catalogue and browse.

In France the salon des independents, if that is the proper term, often results in riot and bloodshed. No visitor who wandered through the galleries yesterday will expect that to happen this year in New York. The wild men—and women—of this art are tame.

For your first glance at the walls shows you that what the Independents called "conservatives" and the layman calls just plain artists, have somehow stolen the thunder and fixed the atmosphere of the exhibition. Here and there among them is a liberal sprinkling of the "originals" and the "eccentrists" and the "expressionists," but they give the effect of foils to show off the others by contract.

The effect is something you would get only at this exhibition, for at others there would be juries to shut the foils out. Therefore you should be duly thankful for this exhibition.

It is scarcely the task for a dull March afternoon to trot through this wilderness of paintings and sculptures—and other things, too, for some of the independents have expressed themselves by such contributions as a miniature handmade cabinet and a satire on prohibition expressed by dolls—and then try to single out individual pieces for mention.

This is particularly so because in an exhibition of this kind, when, by the very nature of things, the artists are calling attention to and accentuating values of a purely intellectual character, you are bound to be impressed, if you are at all sensitive, by considerations other than purely artistic.

An Intelligent Challenge.

You are brought by mute, painted propagandists to withdraw your attention from some work which impresses you for what you have always been taught to consider purely artistic values and take up with yourself the question: Does this next one express a new conception of art which I do not understand but ought to, or is it just the work of someone who does not know how to paint?

There is that purely intellectual challenge all through the salon of the independents, and they put it there on purpose.

And perhaps that is the value of the exhibition. It is a place where any one in America who wields a brush or a mallet may exhibit what is in his mind and what he thinks he has discovered. There is no one to stop him. The fact may perhaps be disturbing to the fussy-minded. Most of us do not care to live even for an hour in the certainty that any time our glance wanders we may be confronted with awful creatures that never lived on land or sea. But it is undoubtedly good for us—if we can stand it.

One might suggest a different arrangement for the exhibition. Let them put the "tamed" artists all in one place and let the spectator see them first. His mind will be calm and placid. Then let him be ushered into the chambers of the intellectuals. His mind will be mightily stirred and great will be the questioning thereof. Whereupon he may have the choice of going back to the first room or going home. And by his choice we shall know him—and he shall know himself.

With these reflections, let these observations come to a close. For the names of those who are exhibiting, whether famous or not so famous—and there are both kinds—the reader is respectfully referred to the catalogue. The reference is by malice aforethought. To get the catalogue he will have to go to the exhibition. And he ought to do that by all means.

Sells Executed Woman's Gems.

PARIS, March 7.—The jewelry of Mata-Hari, the Dutch dancer who was executed at Vincennes in October, 1917, after having been condemned by a military tribunal on a charge of espionage, was sold at auction here today with other articles once belonging to persons convicted by court martial or correctional courts.

Although the court officials disposing of the articles gave no guarantees of their genuineness, souvenir hunters attended the sale in force and bid spiritedly. A Dutch ring, studded with brilliants, was knocked down at 10,000 francs; three ancient Japanese gold kobangs were sold for 8,000 francs, and a cigarette case in agate with a finely wrought gold mount brought 650 francs.

Jersey Conference Cancels Invitation to Former Governor to Make a Speech.

RESENT HIS "WET" STAND

Candidates for Ministry Ordered to Remove Coats to Show They Are Not Klan Members.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 7.—A rebuke to former Governor Edward Caspar Stokes, Republican State Chairman; the calling upon candidates to prove they did not wear an insignia of a secret organization, and the preferring of charges of violation of the church discipline against the Rev. Charles H. Elder, chaplain of the Senate, were features of the fourth day's session of the New Jersey Methodist Episcopal Conference today.

The repudiation of Stokes, for years a leading figure at the annual conferences, took the form of a telegraphic cancellation of an invitation extended to him by Bishop Joseph F. Berry, senior Bishop of the Church, to appear before the Conference. It was predicated upon his espousal of the cause of the anti-prohibitionists.

Bishop Berry announced last night that he personally had invited Stokes. This morning a formal protest against the action in the form of a petition was presented to the chair. Among those who took a leading part in preventing the appearance of the Republican State Chairman were the Rev. James K. Shields, superintendent of the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League, and the Rev. Marnas. Poulson, an honorary Vice President of the organization.

Stokes is criticized for advocating a modification plank in the Republican platform during the party's State convention in Trenton last October. He had previously been recognized as an avowed "dry" and his change, as put by one clergyman, "showed him to be a better politician than churchman."

The conference was surprised when four candidates who appeared for examination for the Ministry were requested to remove their coats and vests. After complying Bishop Berry asked if they were members of any secret organization or wore emblems of this nature. An emphatic "no" was the reply. Although no mention of any specific order was made, it was accepted by delegates that the Bishop referred to the Ku Klux Klan.

Some intimation of the Church's stand regarding the activities of clergymen in reform movements was revealed when Bishop Berry, who is presiding here, asked the future ministers, "Do you think it is a part of your duty to become public detectives and ferret out transgressors?" He smilingly acknowledged his approval when they again answered in the negative.

The Rev. A. E. Wells, pastor of the Trinity Church, Trenton, preferred charges against Senate Chaplain Elder, who is on "detached service," for alleged violation of the rules of the Church which says that "no minister shall solemnize a marriage in any case where there is a divorced husband or wife living." Dr. Elder has been summoned to appear before an executive session of the conference to make a defense.

Another attack on the Modernists was seen in the remarks of Bishop Thomas Neeley, who said that there was no room in the Church for thtose of the clergy who could not subscribe to the tenets of the Church and that the door was wide enough for the disgruntled ones to pass out.

WANT HYLAN TO RUN AGAIN.

Kind Words and Roses for the Mayor From Ridgewood People.

When Mayor Hylan took his seat at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Estimate several representatives of the Ridgewood Community Council, headed by J. B. Emerick, felicitated him on his return to health and informed him that the Council the night before had passed resolutions requesting him to run for Mayor for the third time. A young woman handed the Mayor a bunch of roses.

"I thank you, Mr. Emerick," said the Mayor, "and I thank the people of this city who remembered me kindly in their prayers when I was so ill. I thank the good Lord for sparing me and allowing me the privilege of being here on this occasion and I hope to have the opportunity to be with you for some time to come."

The Mayor announced that he and other members of the Board would go to Albany next Wednesday to attend the hearing on the city's transit bills.

Plans and specifications for the wholesale and storage building of the Bronx Terminal Market were approved by the Board. The cost of the structure, exclusive of the foundation work, is estimated at $2,500,000. By a vote of 13 to 3 the board voted to accept from the Federal Government the offer of Plum Island, just off Sheepshead Bay, for $150,000. The negative vote was cast by Deputy Controller Frank J. Prial. A delegation of citizens who have been using the shacks on the island in Summer, protested against the acquisition, pleading that their children would be deprived of their only hot weather playgrounds.

STAGE COACH AT CITY HALL.

Committee Rides From Flushing to Invite Mayor to Anniversary.

Dressed in the costumes of 150 years ago and riding in a hundred-year-old stagecoach,, a committee of residents of Flushing, Queens, called at the City Hall yesterday and invited the Mayor and the members of the Board of Estimate to the dinner of the Flushing United Association on March 11 and the three-day celebration which Flushing will give on March 13, 14 and 15 to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the opening of the first store in Flushing.

The committee made the trip from Flushing in the stagecoach, which was drawn by four horses and accompanied by outriders. Ira L. Terry, Chairman, went before the Board of Estimate where he introduced George W. Pople, President of the Flushing Historical Society, who delivered the invitation, written on parchment, to the Mayor and other city officials. The coach, resplendent in white paint, is the property of Hugh Gormley of Flushing, who said it had been in possession of his family for more than seventy-five years.

on't let constipation make you an invalid —relieve it with Kellogg's Bran

Few people realize how dangerous is constipation until this dread disease tears down their health. Did you know that more than forty serious diseases can be traced to constipation?

Keep your health, or restore it, with Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled. It brings relief in mild and chronic cases of constipation. It is effective because it is ALL bran. That is why it is recommended so highly by doctors. They know that only ALL bran can bring 100 per cent results. Part bran is, at best, only a halfway measure.

If eaten regularly, Kellogg's Bran will bring permanent relief—even in the most chronic case. It is guaranteed to do so. If it fails, your grocer will return your money.

Because it is ALL bran it sweeps, cleans and purifies the intestine. Like nature, it acts naturally. It makes the intestine function regularly.

Eat it every day—two tablespoonfuls—in chronic cases, with every meal. Eat it with milk or cream. Sprinkle it over other cereals. Cook it with hot cereals. Enjoy it in those wonderful recipes given on every package.

The flavor of Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is delicious. It is crisp, nut-like. Quite different from ordinary brans, which are so unpalatable. Kellogg's Bran is made in Battle Creek and served by the leading hotels and clubs everywhere. Sold by all grocers.

When Jane Cowl Had Stage Fright

A Great Actress Tells the Intimate Story of Her Own Life

"I postponed my appearance in this role for three years, simply because I was afraid. I was frightened at having to face a first night such as I had never faced before." And this was Jane Cowl preparing to play Juliet! Universally acclaimed as one of the world's greatest actresses, famous for her successes in such plays as Within the Law, Lilac Time and Smilin' Through, she hoped and feared like a novice before her still greater triumph in Romeo and Juliet. Jane Cowl herself tells all about it in the April Delineator in a most fascinating story of her own life. When you read it, you will know what it costs in hard work and patient courage to become a great actress.

What The Installment Plan Did to Their Dream House

Newly-weds' love in a cottage, automobile tastes and a wheelbarrow income, furniture bought on the installment plan, trying to keep up appearances with richer neighbors—here is a story that will surely make you laugh and may make you cry. Through some such struggles most newly-weds go. In The Dream House Alice Garland Steele has written a very true and human story that you should read in the April Delineator.

The Murderer of A Woman's Charm

With characteristic sincerity, Celia Caroline Cole has written a most unusual article on a question of great importance to women which is not often frankly enough discussed. In The Atmosphere of You she tells what expert dental and medical opinion have to say about the causes of bad breath and the best ways to prevent it. A really practical, helpful article full of sound advice upon which complete reliance may be placed.

Pontius Pilate Washes His Hands Again

All the pride and power of Rome in the days of its greatest glory were marshalled to crush an obscure religion. And the Roman Empire failed—failed so completely that it was itself conquered by the religion it sought to stamp out. In The Name Forbidden Harry A. Kniffen has painted a living picture of those days. You will read with breathless interest how Naida, the beautiful Christian girl, was snatched from a fate worse than death and how Pontius Pilate in fear and trembling washed his hands again!

Should a Woman Fight To Keep a Weak Man?

This is the problem around which Honoré Willsie Morrow has woven a thrilling love story in Fighting Blood. Will the Quaker girl fight with the woman of the tavern for the man she loves? And if she does, who will win? Here is a situation of absorbing interest, heightened by the fact that the scene is laid in the wild north country. Don't fail to read this unusual story in the April Delineator.

You'll Read This Number From Cover to Cover

In the April Delineator you will find many other stories and articles of equal or even greater interest. A most important article on Insulin, the new remedy for diabetes which is saving many thousands of children's lives. Fielding H. Yost, Director of Intercollegiate Athletics at the University of Michigan, discusses the modern girl. Martha Van Rensselaer tells about a new kind of training for marriage. Donn Barber presents another attractive, small house with plans and illustrations. Some very important news about the Better Homes in America Campaign. Many other features and of course all the regular departments and wonderful fashion pages.
